U. N. Rejects U. S. Plan to Curb Arabs; Egyptians Reported in Bethlehem; American Consul Shot in Jerusalem

Dewey Wins Oregon Test As Stassen Concedes

Portland, Oreg., May 22 (AP). New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey captured Oregon's Republican Presidential primary election, Harold E. Stassen, his opponent, conceding defeat today.

The New Yorker, who climbed into a slim early lead when the first ballots were counted last night, continued to hold his margin today as counting boards struggled with a long series of State and local issues.

With 82 per cent of the precincts reported, and counting stopped for the night, Dewey's lead had increased to 6621 votes. The tally was Dewey 92,316, Stassen 85,695 in 1530 of the State's 1861 precincts.

Dewey's lead was compiled mostly in Portland, which gave him 5412 of his advantage. Upstate he led by 1209 votes.

Before taking off from Seattle on a flight to Sacramento, Calif., this morning Dewey commented that he was "happy" over the returns.

Dewey's strength had been expected to lie in Multnomah (Portland) County; Stassen's in the outlying parts of the State. But even without Multnomah County, Dewey was in front.

This factor as much as any other was thought to have prompted Stassen to concede with only three fourths of the precincts reported.

Dewey, by his victory, captured Oregon's 12 Republican national convention delegates, plus the prestige and influence of a win in a two-man race—the last contested primary election before the convention.

Stassen's statement in Minneapolis that he had wired congratulations to Dewey marked the close of a campaign which took both men into all parts of the State and submerged important State and local issues.

It also was a sharper setback for Stassen than the 12 delegates would indicate. He had won in the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries and a third win would have been a strong supporting element at the convention.

Dewey, loser in the other two primaries, said while here he had made a vigorous campaign in Oregon because "I am tired of seeing primaries go by default." This was

Dewey May Get Vote Of Stassen Manager

Portland, Oreg., May 22 (AP).—The Oregon campaign manager for Harold E. Stassen was leading today in his contest for delegate to the Republican National Convention.

That means, if Robert A. Elliott of Portland wins, he will have to vote for Thomas E. Dewey for President. He, like all other candidates for convention delegates, signed a pledge he would supports the voters' choice—which was Dewey.

Network to Defy Petrillo's Ban On Music Camp

Interlochen, Mich., May 22 (AP). Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president of the National Music Camp, said today the Mutual Broadcasting System would ignore "the dictates of Petrillo" and broadcast a weekly program by his high school musicians this summer.

The program has been off the air since 1942 when President James C. Petrillo of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL) claimed the performances of the young amateurs were depriving professional musicians of work.

Dr. Maddy, a bitter Petrillo foe since that time, hailed the signing of a Mutual contract by declaring: "I'm glad Mutual gives more importance to law than to the dictates of Petrillo."

The National Music Camp orchestra has been on Petrillo's "unfair list" and all the networks heretofore have refused to broadcast the program. In New York, Mutual said the Interlochen orchestra had been booked but declined other comment.

Reformatory Repeater Rate Reported 3 in 4

Law Institute Gets Dismal Picture of Juvenile Handling

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Three out of four juveniles sent to reformatories commit new crimes within five years after their release.

This discouraging picture of the handling of the Nation's juvenile delinquency problem was presented to the American Law Institute at its three-day session here which ended yesterday.

The report was made by John R. Ellingston, of New York. He is the institute's special adviser on youth problems in criminal justice.

The report states, "Children and youth under 21 make up a shocking percentage of annual commitments to correctional and penal institutions—up to 40 per cent in some States. As would be expected from these figures, minors commit over half of all auto thefts, a third of all robberies, burglaries and other thefts, one in five rapes, one in seven murders."

Model Act Drafted

To cope with this situation, Ellingston reported, the institute drafted the model Youth Correction Authority Act. It has been adopted by California, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Massachusetts with noteworthy success, he said.

The act uses such tools as presentence investigation, diagnosis, the indeterminate sentence, treatment aimed at basic difficulties rather than at symptoms, probation and parole and, above all, individual treatment.

The report says further, "instead of protecting society, mass imprisonment makes more criminals than it rehabilitates. More than half of all prison inmates have done time before and the great majority of repeaters began as juvenile delinquents."

Main Criticism Cited

The main criticism of present methods is this, according to Ellingston's findings:

"The traditional criminal-justice machinery fails because it has a false and unattainable purpose—to inflict punishment to fit the crime. This purpose is false because it rests upon the false assumption that individuals, including children, break the law solely because they wilfully prefer evil. Modern science has shown that delinquency and crime are not just manifestations of the evil will of particular children and youth,

DC-6 Forced Down, Passengers Relayed

Los Angeles, May 22 (AP).—An American Airlines plane carrying Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), and some 40 other passengers arrived here today after taking them aboard from a DC-6 forced down at Amarillo, Tex.

An airlines spokesman said that Capt. E. S. Lindsay landed at Amarillo after the fire warning signal flashed on. Smoke from a switch in the baggage room tripped the signal, but there was no fire, it was reported.

Big 'If' Tied To Sales Tax Espousal

Probable 55-Cent Hike in Real Estate Levy Seen by Two Subcommittee Heads

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Washington must have a sales tax, chairman of House and Senate District Fiscal subcommittees agreed yesterday, but they tied up their decision with a big "if."

The group agreed that the "if" might increase the District's real estate tax rate by 55 cents.

House action on the sales tax was made contingent on passage of a pay raise for District employes. But conferees said the pay action may come too late this session to allow time for the tax legislation. In that event, the real estate tax rate would have to be increased 45 cents to pay for the raise.

Another 10 cents would have to be added to the rate if Congress fails to act on a recommendation that the Government contribute one million dollars more to the District next fiscal year.

After months of fighting against it, Chairman George J. Bates (R., Mass.) of the House Subcommittee yesterday agreed on the necessity for a two per cent sales tax to balance the budget.

Agreements Reached

But he based his agreement on Congressional approval of the pending pay raise for Federal and District workers. This would add seven million to the 101 million dollar budget.

However, Chairman Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) of the Senate subcommittee, predicted that pay raise action would come, if at all, in the last 12 hours of Congress and that little time would remain for passage of a sales tax bill.

In any event, Bates agreed that a sales tax would be needed at least by July 1, 1949.

These are the agreements reached at the executive meeting yesterday by Cain, Bates and Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) of the Appropriations Committee:

1. A sales tax is necessary July 1, 1948, if the pay raise bill is approved.

2. It will be necessary in any event by July 1, 1949.

3. The tax would offset whatever pay raise is approved for District workers (about seven million) but it would still leave the District with a budget deficit of about six millions.

To overcome the six million dollar deficit, the group agreed to:

1. Ask Congress for a one million dollar increase in the Federal contribution made by Congress for its board and keep. (From 12 to 13 million dollars.)

Would Sell Securities

2. Sell 1.8 millions in government securities held by the District government and use the cash for running expenses.

3. Cut 1.6 millions from the budget, primarily from funds which were to be used for construction.

4—Use 1.6 millons more for purposes other than those for which the money was intended when the House appropriated the budget. (District Budget Officer Walter Fowler explained the money could

Woman Claims Speed Record in 448 M. P. H. Flight

Palm Springs, Calif., May 22 (AP). Jacqueline Cochran landed her special P-51 plane safely today after streaking from here to Santa Fe, N. Mex., and return, and claimed a new world's speed record of 448 miles an hour over a 2000-kilometer closed course.

The old mark was 440.

Her time was 2 hours, 46 minutes, 38 seconds, clocked by the National Aeronautic Association.

The previous record was established May 19, 1946, by Lieut. J. J. Hancock of the United States Air Force in a jet "Shooting Star."

Miss Cochran's P-51 was bought two years ago from the Government's stock pile of surplus aircraft.

Debate on D. C. Home Rule To Open in House Monday

By Eward Ryan
Post Reporter

A fight to give Washington residents a voice in their local government begins Monday in the House and its leader predicted yesterday there would be no attempt at "dilatory tactics."

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), whose District subcommittee darfted the home rule bill, said he expects debate to continue for at least two days.

"The opponents are good citizens," he said, "and not given to dilatory tactics. They have honest differences and I believe they'll present them fairly."

He expected "considerable time" would be spent on amendments to the 180-page bill. But he declared "there won't be any demands for unnecessary roll calls and filibustering."

However, strong political overtones are expected to sound in the House.

Capitol response to the home rule plan has already cut across party lines, but the powerful influence of the House Republican leadership has been thrown behind the measure.

Soviet Again Blames U. S. for Differences

Moscow, May 22 (AP).—Russia blamed the United States unequivocally tonight for the wide fields of disagreement that separate the two nations' thinking.

The restatement of Soviet position was made plain in a point-by-point list of the major differences as first itemized in Prime Minister Josef Stalin's reply to Henry Wallace's "open letter."

The list, described as "representing the position of leading Soviet circles," was released by Tass, the official Soviet news agency. It discussed a range of topics from peace treaties to atom controls.

It came as the latest in the series of Russian-American exchanges—both diplomatic and personal—that began with American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith's memorandum to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov on May 4.

In effect, it appeared to represent no change in top-level Soviet attitudes which have caused the United States to blame Russia for most of the present international misunderstandings.

After flatly asserting that America was to blame on each of the 11 disputed topics—ranging from lack of a German peace treaty to failure to secure international atomic controls—the Tass statement said:

"From all that has been said above it is clear who bears the re-

Navy's Robot Ready for Use In Case of War

Gun to Shoot Down Supersonic Targets Also Being Developed

By the United Press

The Navy revealed last night that it has developed a pilotless aircraft for "immediate usefulness in the event of war."

It also is working on a "supersonic gun" for shooting down supersonic targets.

These disclosures were made in the Navy Department's annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1947, published last night.

Whether the new pilotless craft is the ram jet engine with wings on which the Navy has been working could not be learned. The ram jet has flown faster than 1500 miles an hour. The Navy said developments in faster-than-sound flight are tending to make obsolete weapons subject to human control.

"Airplanes are fast outgrowing the ability of human pilots to control them," the report said. And to hit the high speed targets of the future, it added, automatic electronic control devices must be developed.

The report also said that "structures are being developed" that will stand up under the hot temperatures created by supersonic speeds. This has been one of the stumbling blocks to flight faster than the speed of sound.

The superfast gun it is working on, the Navy said, will be able to fire bullets of sufficient velocity to catch up with and destroy supersonic craft.

Byrd Indorses Plans For Super-Carrier

By the United Press

A leading Senate economy advocate last night indorsed Navy plans for a 65,000-ton super-carrier.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) said he is "very much in favor" of the proposed flattop that would be big enough to accommodate the giant atom-bomb-carrying B-29 for take offs.

Top Red Fired From Cabinet Of Finland

Interior Minister Had Ignored Order To Resign His Post

Helsinki, Finland, May 22 (U.P.).—Interior Minister Yrjoe Leino, Finland's No. 1 Communist, was fired today. A Cabinet spokesman said the boss of the nation's police force and chief censor was ousted after he ignored a presidential order to resign.

Communists immediately rallied to prepare for demonstrations, if the political crisis is not settled to their liking.

Several Communist-led unions met to discuss the situation, but only the harbor workers struck. They said they would remain idle until the government agrees to reinstate Leino.

President Juho K. Paasikivi and Leino conferred for 10 minutes just before an emergency Cabinet meeting. They went separately to the session.

The Cabinet sat for 35 minutes voting to enforce a parliamentary vote of nonconfidence in Leino. Representatives of several Communist-dominated unions met on the staircase outside. They passed a resolution declaring:

"The Cabinet seat of Minister of the Interior Leino must be filled with a Peoples Democrat. If this is not done, the workers will draw their conclusions."

Paasakivi then announced that the Interior Ministry had been declared vacant. The decision reduced the Communist bloc in the Cabinet from 5 to 4.

Leino had been under criticism for forming a mobile group of police and a security force of 300 men, but the official reason for his ouster was a vote of censure passed by Parliament Wednesday night. The vote was taken after he was accused of turning over 10 Finns and 10 foreigners to Russia

To Get Eating Money

Jobless D. C. Numbers Writers Turning to Theft, Police Feel

Evidence that the District's numbers writers may be turning to "crime" to obtain eating money was uncovered by police yesterday.

This was revealed when Mrs. Louise Smith, 46, 221 O st. nw., charged with two housebreaking offenses, listed her occupation on the Eleventh Precinct's books as "numbers writer."

Mrs. Smith was arrested after she was subdued by two women occupants of a house at 2214 Nichols ave. se., who surprised her in the kitchen.

Less than an hour earlier, the same woman was flushed from a hallway at 1222 Pleasant st. se., a short distance away, by Mrs. Jane Scherr, a resident. She told Mrs. Scherr, the latter woman said, she "must be lost" and left abruptly.

The self-admitted numbers writer's luck left her when Mrs. Charles W. Cox discovered her in her kitchen. Mrs. Cox quickly secured the rear door and sent her 5-year-old niece, Lorraine, to summon her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Cox, from the front porch.

Miss Cox ran into the kitchen, holding the book she had been reading, and struck the Smith woman twice on the head with it. It's title, Miss Cox said, was "Earth and High Heaven."

At the Eleventh Precinct, where she was booked on housebreaking charges at both addresses, Mrs. Smith told Pvt. George E. Chappelle: "Since Mr. (George Morris) Fay has put the heat on, the numbers racket is really tough."

This was the second indicaton that the numbers fraternity is on its uppers since the grand jury began its investigation of gambling activities last Monday.

On Thursday in District Court Philip C. Raynor, 1628 Fort Dupont st. se., sought reduction of his $275 monthly alimony payments as he was formerly "engaged in gambling" and had "no source of income" since May 18.

Thieves ransacked the home of Mrs. Florence A. Briggs, 3529 Williamsburg lane nw., and escaped with more than $1000 in money and jewelry, police reported.

Mrs. Briggs, widow of Robert Edson Briggs, vice president of the National Metropolitan Bank, told police the burglary was accomplished Friday night while she was at a movie. Entry was made through an unlocked first-floor window.

Taken were $290 in bills from a desk drawer and bracelets, a watch and a ring valued at approximately $1000.

Sweep Paralleled By Mediterranean Coast Gains; Air Attacks Reported

Cairo, May 22 (AP).—Egyptian mobile forces have entered Bethlehem, 5 miles from Jerusalem, and Majdal, an important military objective on the Mediterranean coast, it was announced tonight.

The ministry of national defense reported bombing attacks on fortifications at Negba, northeast of Gaza, and industrial plants and an electric power station southeast of Tel Aviv.

Entry of Egyptian mobile units into Bethlehem climaxed a long sweep—some 40 miles—north from Beersheba which was first reported yesterday. Apparently the aim is to join with the Arab Legion in a grand assault on Jerusalem where Jews are fighting a desperate last-ditch stand.

This thrust north through central Palestine was being paralleled to a degree along the Mediterranean coast.

The communique said that yesterday Egyptian forces "carried on large-scale operations" and advanced northward to Majdal, a distance of some 12 miles from Gaza.

On the way the Egyptian troops occupied Hirbiya, Barbara, Beit Hogam and Arbra and also took over Jura on the seacoast.

Jewish Rescue Attack On Walled City Fails

By Daniel De Luce

At Zion Gate in Jerusalem, May 22 (AP).—Waves of Jewish soldiers charged Arab Legion positions in the Zion gate early today but failed to reach their comrades hemmed into a corner of Jerusalem's Old Walled City.

The Legionnaires from Trans-Jordan and 600 troops of Israel fought at close quarters with grenades and tommyguns on a battleground lit by flares and a bright spring moon.

Several times the Jews swept up to the walls on the south side of the Old City only to be thrown back. Some of them attempted to climb over the wall from the top of an armored bus which was used like an ancient assault tower.

A Legion commander said the Jewish attack was inspired by a wireless SOS in which the hard-pressed Jewish garrison inside the walls appealed for help. He described the action as the fiercest in the five-day battle for Jerusalem.

After dayight the legion's battle against the Jewish troops inside the walls was resumed. Dynamite squads again blasted weather-beaten stone tenements packed around Beit Yaacov Synagogue, otherwise known as the Hurva (ruin). That synagogue is the chief remaining Jewish fortress inside the walls.

Heavy Arab firing also was

Russians Permit Entry From U.S. of 25,000 Scriptures

Philadelphia, May 22 (AP).—The Russians have permitted 25,000 Scriptures from this country to enter the Soviet Union, says Dr. George D. Dilworth, secretary of the Atlantic agency of the American Bible Society.

The Bible Society executive told the Philadelphia annual Methodist Conference yesterday an additional 200,000 portions of the Bible were sent to the Soviets following a request from the Russian Orthodox Church.

Bishop Fred P. Corson said it was the first time in a decade "to my knowledge" that the Russians have permitted Scriptures from other countries to enter the Soviet Union.

Michael's 159 Castles Seized As Romania Voids Citizenship

Bucharest, Romania, May 22 (U.P.). Former King Michael of Romania today was deprived of his citizenship by the Romanian cabinet, and all the royal property in Romania was confiscated, including 159 castles.

An official communique said the action was taken because "Michael of Hohenzollern, together with the former royal family, were carrying on increasing maneuvers abroad against the interests of the Romanian people and the Romanian popular republic, thus becoming guilty of a breach of loyalty to their country."

Michael's mother, former Queen Elena; his aunts, Elizabeth of Hohenzollern and Ileana of Hapsburg, and his uncle, Nicolai of Hohenzollern, also lost their citizenship and property under the decree.

The government communique said the confiscated property included 29 "major" castles with 108 rooms, 114 "minor castles" with 1979 rooms, and 16 "hunting" castles and cottages with 88 rooms.

Also seized were some 38,000 acres of arable land, and 335,900 acres of woodland, 3,991,502 shares of stock in Romanian banking and industrial concerns, and "jewelry," paintings and yachts valued at several hundred million lie. The lie is valued officially at one-fourth of a cent.

District Man Hit in Back; Is Recovering

From Press Dispatches

The shooting of Thomas C. Wasson, United States Consul General, at Jerusalem Saturday brought State Department revelation that two other Americans, one a Washington D. C. resident, have been wounded in the fighting there.

Advices from Jerusalem said the other Americans in addition to Wasson, were:

Thomas Gannon, consulate guard, of 5212 First st. nw., Washington, reported out of danger from a wound received May 14. He was shot in the back.

Herbert M. Walker, 27, Navy chief engineer, of Mountainsburg, Ark. He was shot Saturday in a separate incident.

Working On Truce

The top United States representative in Palestine, Wasson, 52, was wounded "gravely" by a sniper as he braved gunfire in the streets in trying to arrange a cease-fire agreement between Arabs and Jews the State Department reported.

A member of the three-man United Nations Security Council Truce Commission, Wasson was returning on foot from a meeting of the group at the French Consulate.

Just outside the American Consulate a .30-caliber bullet fired by an unidentified sniper felled him.

After first aid treatment he was taken in an armored ambulance to the Hadassah English Mission Hospital. There doctors gave him better than an even chance to recover. The bullet passed through his right arm and chest.

There Since March

Walker, member of a naval communications unit which maintains a radio link between Jerusalem and Washington, was hit by machinegun bullets near the consulate general Saturday.

The consulate staff numbers about 60.

The reports on Wasson came from William C. Burdett, jr., a vice consul who temporarily took over his chief's job.

Wallace Challenges High Officials to Debate

Spokane, Wash., May 22 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace tonight challenged Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and either Secretary of State Marshall or Senator Connally (D., Tex.) to a series of debates on the Nation's foreign policy.

The third party candidate for President said the "people of the Nation want an end to the cold war."

Britain Leads Move Against Sanctions Threat; Substitute Proposal Adopted

Lake Success, N. Y., May 22 (U.P.).—The United Nations Security Council tonight rejected a Russian-American demand for strong U. N. action to stop the Palestine war. Instead it sent a mild appeal to Arabs and Jews to cease fire by noon Monday.

The Council refused the United States plan despite an American demand to put King Abdullah of Trans Jordan "where he belongs."

The action constituted a victory for Britain, which split sharply with the United States over how to deal with the Holy Land warfare.

Britain led a movement that succeeded in killing the American formula, which Russia supported. The United States formula would have branded the fighting a breach of world peace and would have backed up a cease-fire order with the threat of possible economic sanctions or military force.

No Threat Behind It

After defeat of the American plan, the Council passed the British proposal, which appealed to the Arabs and Jews to stop fighting, without backing the appeal with any threat of sanctions.

Only five nations voted for the United States-Soviet plan—two short of the seven needed. They were the United States, Russia, the Ukraine, France and Colombia. The six other Council members abstained.

The British plan was adopted by a vote of 8 to 0 with three nations abstaining. They were Russia, the Ukraine and Syria.

In the debate preceding the votes, American Delegate Warren R. Austin condemned British support of Trans-Jordan's Arab Legion.

Austin Pounds Table

Austin said all U. N. members "would be bound by the U. S. proposal and would be bound to keep Abdullah where he belongs." Austin pounded the table to drive home his point.

The British announced recently they would continue to send arms and money to Abdullah until the U. N. declared his activities illegal.

Austin condemned the Arab invasions in strongest terms. He flatly labeled the Arab states aggressors and warmakers.

The former Vermont Senator hinted that if the British-sponsored cease-fire appeal failed—as almost everyone was sure it would—the United States would revive its efforts to get strong intervention under the punitive clauses of the U. N. Charter.

The American delegate said he had learned that Syria has been blockading the waters around Palestine and warning international shipping away. A blockade, he said,

Boy, 12, Forces Sister to Kill Him With Rifle

Youngwood, Pa., May 22 (AP).—A 12-year-old boy "who was sulking because his grandmother didn't buy him a billfold," compelled his 9-year-old sister to kill him with a rifle today, county detectives reported.

The victim was Richard Russell Henry. Police said he carried his grandfather's .22-caliber rifle to the sister, Joanne, 9, loaded it, pointed it at his stomach and told Joanne:

"Pull the trigger or I'll kill you."

Joanne said she was "afraid not to do what he told me" and pulled the trigger. Another sister, Nancy, 10, saw the tragedy. Their parents are estranged.

3 Boys, 2 Firemen Drown in Ohio At Huntington

Huntington, W. Va., May 22 (AP). Three young boys and two firemen who tried to recover their bodies from the Ohio River were drowned today.

Only the body of Lieut. Leonard Hartz, who was 39 years old today, had been recovered tonight.

The firemen, W. Ernie Booth and Hartz, lost their lives less than 90 minutes after the three unidentified boys drowned.

Second Youngest British Ambassador Sails To Take Up Task in America

The second youngest Ambassador ever to be appointed to the United States by Britain sailed yesterday on the Queen Elizabeth to take up his task in America. He is Sir Oliver Franks, who was 43 years old February 16. Youngest was Sir Auckland Geddes, appointed in 1920 at the age of 40.

It is unprecedented for the Ambassador to the United States, one of the most important appointments under the British Crown, to have held previously neither diplomatic nor political office. Yet Sir Oliver Franks has spent most of his adult life as an academician.

It was the war that brought him to national notice as a gifted administrator with the Ministries of Supply and Aircraft Production. These qualities made him an international figure last summer when, at the 16-Nation Paris Conference he was chairman of the Executive and Economic Coordinating Committees and was largely responsible for reconciling and fusing the often conflicting demands of 16 different foreign delegations. Experts of many nations regard Sir Oliver Franks as being more responsible than any other man, after Secretary of State Marshall, for the formulation of the historic European Recovery Plan. He is the son of the Rev. R. S. Franks, Congregational minister and eminent theologian.

Oliver Franks was educated at the famous Grammar School in Bristol. He was an all-round athlete and a brilliant scholar, winning a classical scholarship to Queens College, Oxford. After taking his degree, a double first, he was appointed Fellow and Praelector at Queens College, then Tutor and Lecturer. In 1935 he went to Chicago University as a visiting professor. Of this experience he says: "It was very important for a small-islander like me to spend some time in Chicago, 1000 miles from the sea where the natural horizons are New York and San Francisco." In 1937, at the age fo 32, he was appointed to the Chair of Moral Philosophy in Glasgow University and it was there that the outbreak of the war found him.

He began as a Principal in the Establishments Division of the Ministry of Supply and soon attracted the attention of his superiors. After Dunkirk, Mr. Morrison, then Minister of Supply, invited suggestions and criticisms for the better working of his Ministry, and Franks was appointed to investigate the suggestions, and pick out those that were workable. After three months in this post he became a Principal Assistant Secretary, with the responsibility for labor questions, the recruitment and supply of industrial labor for the staffing of new factories, negotiations with trade unions, provision of hostels and traveling facilities, and the whole question of the introduction of woman-power.

In June, 1942, as Second Secretary, he was put in charge of the raw materials department—a great part of which had to be imported—for the war effort and essential civilian needs, and working within the framework of what was allocated to Britain by the Combined Raw Materials Board in Washington and by the Shipping Committee. The country was faced with the urgent need to make good the losses in the desert war and in the Far East, and with the Battle of the Atlantic at its height. He coped with the difficulties and remained its chief until 1945, when he became permanent secretary of the Ministry of Supply. When the Ministry of Supply amalgamated with the Ministry of Aircraft Production, he became permanent secretary of the combined ministries.

He could have had the chairmanship of the steel board. Academic life had a strong pull for him, however. When his old college invited him in 1946 to become its provost, he left the civil service and returned to Oxford.

In 1947 came the invitation from the government to go to Paris with Mr. Bevin as head of his team of experts to the conference on European cooperation. From July 15 till September 22, Franks carried a tremendous burden.

He had three full-time jobs. He was leader of the United Kingdom delegation, chairman of the five-power Executive Committee, and of the 16-power Committee of Cooperation, which averaged two meetings a week, and with Alphand of the Quai d'Orsay he shared responsibility for the assembling and presentation of the 440-page report.

During the two ensuing months in Washington, he was the leader of an international team. His task was first to reconcile the views of those whom he represented, and secondly to present their case to the United States Administration, the Harriman Committee, Congressmen and leaders of organizations.

Sir Oliver Franks returned to Britain in December, 1947, and the Washington appointment when it came was hailed with wide approval in Britain. The Manchester Guardian commented, "Plato used to say that mankind would be happy when philosophers were kings. He might have thought it a step in the right direction that one should become an Ambassador."

Sir Oliver Franks published a book last year, "Central Planning and Control in War and Peace," a reprint of three lectures given some time previously at the invitation of the Senate of the University of London. It records the lessons of his wartime experience as they bear on the peacetime tasks facing the government today.

In 1942, he was created C. B. E. (Commander, Order of the British Empire), and four years later was created K. C. B. (Knight Commander of the Bath).

Sir Oliver Franks married Miss Barbara Tanner in 1931 and they have two daughters—Caroline, 8, and Alison,

U. N. Rejects U. S. Plan

"is a claim of a belligerent right, a claim of war."

It is silly, he added, to say that "five armies are in Palestine to maintain peace while they are conducting war."

Austin said it was not necessary to invoke economic or military sanctions at once in case the American proposal was passed and Jews or Arabs failed to obey it.

"There are other sanctions," he said, but he did not explain what he meant.

"Before the conscience of the world, how will the Security Council look if it refuses this action?" Austin asked. "Do you not think all the world knows that we know what is going on in Palestine? Can we refuse to do it?"

British Delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan, in his reply, said that Britain maintained its view that the Council should not threaten to use force unless ready to use it.

Mahmoud Bey Fawzi of Egypt said Austin was using "big words" in speaking of the Arab states as "invaders and aggressors."

"It is practically the biggest accusation that can be made against a member of the U.N.

"But," added Fawzi, "when he wanted to point out who was the victim of the aggression, all he could say was that it was an organized territory that claims to be a state."

The Egyptian delegates said that as long as there was disagreement over the legality of the state the Jews have proclaimed, it was impossible to say that one state was encroaching on another state.

Colombian delegate Alfonso Lopez summed up the general feeling when he said, just before the final vote, "I am voting for this proposal with a deep sense of futility."

The Council adjourned at 7:30 p. m. (EDT) until Monday afternoon, when it wall take up the Palestine question again after disposing of the Czech case.

The day-long debate was punctuated by a series of cabled messages from Jerusalem telling of a steadily deteriorating situation.

The cables gave details of the wounding of the American consular member of the three-nation UN Truce Commission, Thomas C. Wasson, and blow-by-blow accounts of damage to one holy shrine after another in the city of Jerusalem.

U. S., Britain Discuss Split On Palestine

By Alex H. Singleton

London, May 22 (AP)—The United States and Britain sought today a solution of their differences over Palestine—their biggest split since the war.

Responsible diplomatic officials said they will make a new and important move jointly before the United Nations soon in an effort to bring the Jewish-Arab fighting to a stop.

These officials gave no inkling of the nature of the move.

Diplomatic sources said the United States had made informal protests to Britain against British aid to the Arab states.

These informants said Britain earlier had replied somewhat sharply that preservation of Arab friendship was essential to safeguard the Middle East against Soviet expansion. Britain was said to have reminded the United States that it should recognize it now shares responsibility for "protecting" the Middle East, and in any event present British relations with her "Arab allies" must be maintained as a "great barrier against the flow of communism to the south."

The British were understood to have stood pat on their repeated public declarations that they would continue to honor their treaty obligations with the Arabs regarding arms "unless and until" the United Nations decides the Arab states are taking illegal action in Palestine.

The disclosure of some impending joint British-American action came after Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin called in U. S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas this morning. The conference followed one in Washington yesterday between Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett and British Minister John Balfour.

Israel Envoy Speaks Here

Elihu Epstein, first representative of the State of Israel to the United States, last night termed American recognition of Israel "an extension of the basic principles of life in the United States to include all people."

Epstein spoke before a gathering of 500 persons at a banquet of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States. The banquet, held at Hotel Statler, honored Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, the adjutant general of the Army.

General Witsell was presented with the organization's distinguished service plaque and its medal of merit for "exceptional service to the Nation, the soldier and the veteran."

Epstein deplored the United States' embargo on arms to the Middle East, saying it "reacts adversely upon the army of Israel and affects only slightly the Arab armies."

"They are able to get arms from another source without much difficulty—a source closed to us," he said. "They need not worry about tools, but we must have arms and munitions.

On the other hand, Epstein contended, "with the help and moral backing of enlightened countries, the warfare can come to an early end."

Other speakers included Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington, who praised the achievements of General Witsell; Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, and Brig. Gen. Julius Klein, national commander of the Jewish War Veterans.

heard in the Jewish districts of modern Jerusalem.

With Legionnaires before and behind them, the Jews inside the walls crept through underground passages and caverns to bring their maximum strength to bear against Arab attacks and to avoid bombardments. Many of the passages date from Roman times and are as much as 70 feet deep.

The possibility was seen that the Jewish garrison eventually might tunnel through the Turkish wall of the Old City and attempt to withdraw under cover of darkness up the eastern slope of Mount Zion to the safety of Jewish forward posts at Dormition Church.

The Legion's commander in the Old City said Jewish authorities tried to bargain with him last night to agree to permit the evacuation of approximately 30 patients from Hadassah Hospital on Mount Scopus where there is a maze of Haganah machinegun and mortar positions.

"I replied we would permit the patients to evacuate the hispital whenever Haganah surrendered," the commander said. "But we have no intention of giving the Jews a chance to repeat their old trick of sending up more guns and ammunition in ambulances."

The newer portion of Jerusalem is split approximately in half between the Jews and the Arab Legion. The Legion controls the east, southeast and northeast districts and has pushed the Jews back from sections of Beth Israel and Sanhedria in the northwest.

Bitter fighting has developed along St. George's road between the Musrara and the Mea Shearim districts. The Jews still hold such western sections as Kerem Abraham, Ahva, Mekor Barukh, Rehavia, Nikiforiya, Talbeit, Kiryat Shmuel and the German colony.

British Down 5 Egyptian Warplanes

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 22 (AP).—The British announced today that RAF fighter pilots shot down five Egyptian Spitfires in engagements over a British airfield near Haifa.

(Five Egyptian planes were lost in the raid on the British airfield at Ramit David, 14 miles southeast of Haifa, a Ministry of National Defense communique said tonight at Cairo.

(The communique said the attack on the Ramit David Field was a mistake made by bad weather conditions. The Egyptian attack had been planned to hit the Jewish airport at Megiddo, south of Nazareth.

("In view of similarity of locations," the communique said, "the (Egyptian) planes caused damage and casualties at the British airport and we lost five planes.")

The action occurred yesterday after seven Egyptian planes made three bombing and strafing attacks on the tairfield at Ramat David, 14 miles southeast of Haifa.

British military headquarters in Haifa said four members of the British ground crew at Ramat David were killed and three were wounded critically. Two British planes, a Dakota and a Spitfire, were destroyed on the runway, the British said.

(A British Foreign-Office spokesman in London said "We very much regret the incident, but we must emphasize that the airfield is well within the 20-mile radius which we laid down as being our evacuation area.")

For the second night in a row Jewish planes concentrated last night on Arab infantry, vehicle and gun concentrations in Shu'fat, a northern suburb of Jerusalem. The Jews said Shu'fat is an Arab operational base for the attack of Jerusalem.

Eighth Day of Raids

Tel Aviv, Israel's temporary capital, was under air attack today for the eighth consecutive day. There were four or five alerts during the night, and at daybreak the sirens began sounding at almost hourly intervals. Several distant explosions were heard.

Jewish military leaders, reviewing the situation as a whole, said Israel's army entered the second week with the new Jewish state's partition-drawn frontiers virtually undented.

A high Jewish staff officer said that only in Jerusalem could the fighting be regarded as having come to its crisis. The outcome could not be predicted from here, he added.

Describes Operations

He gave this general picture:

The forces of Lebanon and Syria are in action along their frontiers with Palestine. Troops of Iraq, fighting in close coordination with Trans-Jordan's Legionnaires, have been repulsed. The Arab Legion itself is scattered over almost all of Arab Palestine. From the south Egyptian forces in strength are steadily moving up the coast into Arab territory within 40 miles of Tel Aviv.

The Jewish officers said the Arab Legion and Egyptian thrusts appear to be roughly equal in strength. The size of the other forces and thus far the power of their attacks has been less.

In the Jerusalem siege the entire city is under almost ceaseless shellfire with the fiercest fighting now going on inside the old walled area and at the approaches to two of the fortified gates. The Arab Legion is concentrating its largest forces for an apparent final attempt to capture all of Jerusalem.

The weeks-old battle for the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway is kept under a close security blackout. One Jewish officer said, however, that convoys have got through to Jerusalem during the past week.

The northern front is divided into three sectors facing three Arab countries, the Jewish officers said.

The Jews captured Acre, a great defensive stronghold. They also are clearing up Arab positions in an isolated square of west Galilee which partition gave to the Arabs.

In Jewish Upper Galilee, Syrian and Lebanese thrusts have been repulsed, the Jews said.

Some of the heaviest fighting in the north has been along the Jordan Valley just south of the Sea of Galilee. There, Jewish headquarters said, "strong Syrian forces" captured Samakh and then lost it again.

The Jews said the Egyptians thus far have occupied only an uncontested area—the Arab strip up the coast past Gaza. They claimed the Egyptians have failed to capture a single Jewish settlement in Jewish territory.

he was "deeply grieved" by the shooting and commending the entire staff for the "courageous and able manner" in which they were carrying out their duties in the midst of the battle.

Known among fellow diplomats for his personal courage, Wasson volunteered last March to transfer to the hazardous Jerusalem post from Athens, where he was embassy counsellor.

A World War I veteran, he was awarded the Medal for Freedom for his services as consul at the French African port of Dakar where he was under fire in the early stages of World War II.

The State Department said that in Jerusalem he has been "daily passing through bullet-swept streets and battle lines, to press Arab and Jewish leaders to accept a truce. The U. N. Commission on which he serves includes also the French and Belgian consuls.

Wasson, a native of Great Falls, Mont., is unmarried and lists New York City as his permanent home.

Burdett, who stepped into his shoes, is 29. His home is Macon, Ga. He has served in many posts abroad since entering the foreign service in 1942, soon after graduation from Princeton University.

Gannon has four daughters living in Washington. They are: Miss Frances Gannon and Mrs. Marion Scott, both of 1701 16th st. nw.; Mrs. Jean Tebbs, of 730 Rock Creek Church rd. nw., and Mrs. R. P. Hogan, of Greenbelt, Md.

Mrs. Tebbs said her father had been well known here as a musician and had led several orchestras at local theaters some years ago.

He returned to Washington from Guatemala for a brief visit before going to Jerusalem in April.

Lebanon Sends Reply to U. S.

Beirut, Lebanon, May 22 (AP).—The Lebanese government's reply to the United States protest against arrest and internment of 40 American passengers from the United States ship Marine Carp was cabled today to Washington.

Lowell Pinkerton, United States Minister to Lebanon, would not disclose the contents. An informed Lebanese source said the note contended Lebanon acted within its rights because "we are convinced these people are en route to Palestine to bear arms against our people."

Pinkerton said the note was handed him by the Lebanese Foreign Ministry and was forwarded immediately to Washington.

New Government Nearly Set in Italy

Rome, May 22 (NYHT.).—Formation of a new, mildly progressive Italian government without Communists and without sympathizers of fascism reached its semifinal stage tonight. Prime Minister Alcide de Gasperi said he expects to finish formation of the government by noon tomorrow.

De Gasperi said the sole uncertain matter is whether 76-year-old Giovanna Porzio, a Liberal, will accept the post of minister without portfolio in special charge of the problems of Italy's illiterate, diseased-ravished south.

De Gasperi said Porzio will give his answer tomorrow morning. He indicated he had no doubt Porzio would accept.

The new government will be built mainly around De Gasperi's own Christian Democratic (mainly Catholic) Party. De Gasperi has assigned 11 of the 20 government posts to his own party, keeping the prime ministry for himself. In addition, three members of the anti-Communist Socialist Party, three members of the Liberal Party, two members of the slightly leftist Republican Party and one rather conservative independent will have posts.

'Aggression' Angle

U. S. Expects New Russian 'Peace' Acts

By The Associated Press

American officials said yesterday that Russia's "peace offensive" appears to be playing out without serious damage to this country's foreign policy or its prestige abroad.

Two further Soviet moves were regarded as entirely possible, however:

1. An offer of minor concessions on any of several outstanding issues in the United Nations or elsewhere, as though to prove Moscow's good faith in seeking settlements.

2. A full-blown propaganda campaign designed to show that Premier Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotov sought to negotiate an end to the "cold war," but President Truman and Secretary Marshall blocked their efforts.

An indication that the latter course may be followed came last week in a Tass News Agency dispatch charging that the Russian-American exchanges showed up an "aggressive attitude" on the part of the present Government of the United States.

Authorities agreed that probably the best American counterstroke to Russia's "olive branch performance" was Secretary Marshall's challenge to Premier Stalin—to prove by its actions that the Soviet really wants improved relations with the West.

But there was little expectation among Marshall's advisers that his response would bring concrete results. For amid the mass of words which Moscow and Washington have been hurling at each other, each country is standing on its basic policies, and the real clash is between those policies.

Berlin Reds Lose Control Over Workers

Berlin, May 22 (NYHT).—Communist control over Berlin's organized workers was decisively broken today when the long-awaited split between anti-Communists and Communists finally occurred at the city-wide trade union convention.

Anti-Communist leaders indicated they would start immediately to establish an independent union which would claim recognition in all of Berlin. The anti-Communist group is known as UGO and claims to represent a majority of Berlin's 700,000 organized workers.

Allied observers believe the break from Communist control of an important percentage of German workers is of great significance in the battle for Berlin. The western allies, in their determination to stick it out in this city encircled by the Soviet occupation zone, consider it of value to have as many workers as possible on the anti-Communist side.

The issue on which the split occurred today was the Communists' allegedly fraudulent handling of the election of convention delegates. The UGO said it really won a majority of the votes in the city's trade union elections and that the Communist election board invalidated the election of 100 opposition delegates.

without formal extradition proceedings in 1945.

Under the Finnish constitution, a cabinet member receiving such a vote of nonconfidence must resign. Paasikivi had ordered Leino to do so by this morning.

Leino's wife, Mrs. Hertta Kuusinen Leino, is considered the "brains" of Finland's Communist party.

Workers' delegates assembled on the staincase complained to Mrs. Leino that the President had refused to see them.

"Take it easy," she said. "Everything is going to be settled."

Kilpi Asked to Double

Paasikivi asked Education Minister Eino Kilpi, a leftwing Social Democrat, to double as Interior Minister until the general elections July 1 and 2.

There was some doubt the Communists would accept this. Kilpi moved away from his party two weeks ago and into the Communist camp without joining either the Communist Party or the Peoples Democratic Union.

Finn Reds Ask Russia To Cut Reparations

Moscow, May 22 (AP).—It is believed the Soviet Union may look with favor upon any application by the Finnish government for a reduction in war reparations.

Pravda, Izvestia and other newspapers published a letter today signed by three Finnish Communists suggesting their government make such a request at this time.

While the press made no comment, the fact that the letter was prominently published is significant.

The three who signed the letter were the ousted Minister of Interior Yjro Leino, Deputy Social Minister Matti Janhunen and Deputy Communications Minister Yjro Murto.

Hungary, Romania and Italy also pay Russia war reparations.

Romania and Hungary, like Finland, have signed friendship treaties with the Soviet Union. If Finland asks reparations reductions there would be nothing to halt Romania and Hungary from doing the same thing.

Italy, with no friendship pact, is hardly in the same category.

(Under the terms of the peace treaties signed last year, Russia was awarded 300 million dollars each from Romania and Finland and 200 million dollars from Hungary. She was awarded 100 million dollars from Italy. Finland has already paid 100 million dollars.)

sponsibility for the present state of Soviet-American relations."

"Clearly the attitude of the Government of the United States is not conducive to progress in international affairs," the statement concluded.

It said the "facts refute the assertion of the State Department" that Russia's non-compliant attitude prevents the adoption of already agreed decisions.

Not only does the United States violate the decisions of the Yalta and Tehran conferences, the agency said, but it also violates "even decisions of the Potsdam conference which were taken with the participation of Truman and which he signed."

The statement blamed the United States for failure of the Unitel Nations' to take effective action for control and reduction of armaments.

Referring to the first of the 11 points in which the United States State Department on May 19 blamed the Soviet Union for failing to reach an agreement, Tass said:

"In reality, the decision of the United Nations General Assembly . . . on the necessity of speediest general reduction of armaments is not being put into practice, in the first place because the government of the United States has taken a position opposing this decision of the General Assembly."

Tass said, "The United States government is openly pursuing a policy of an ever-greater increase of its armaments and armed forces, assigning ever fresh billions of dollars for these purposes.

"It is understandable by everyone, however, that an agreement between the USSR and the United States for implementing the decision on a general reduction of armaments would favor fulfillment of this extremely important task . . ."

Tass rejected as "without foundation" the State Department assertion that Russia was responsible for blocking agreement on Atomic control and said:

"The facts testify that in reality it is the United States Government which bears the entire responsibility for a decision on the prohibition of atomic weapons not having been approved up to the present time."

French to Get More Bread

Paris, May 22 (NYHT).—Premier Robert Schuman announced to the Franch people today that the daily bread ration would be increased after June 1 from its present level of 200 grams to 250 grams, as a result of increased allocations of wheat and flour from the United States.

The 50-gram increase amounts to less than 2 ounces a day—an extra thin slice. A year ago a ration of 300 grams was cut to 250 grams and in August it dropped to 200 grams.

June 1 is the day selected by the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor to launch a campaign in favor of a general 20-per cent wage increase.

The government hopes the higher bread ration will ease the pressure from the left and give it time to bear down more heavily on current prices. It was made possible by American allocations of 400,000 tons of wheat and flour for May and June.

Europe Arms Up to Congress

By the United Press

The State Department has assured the Senate that the United States will not finance arms for western Eurpe or underwrite any European defense pact without specific permission from Congress.

This assurance, it was learned last night was given to Senator Vandenberg's Senate Foreign Relations Comittee last week by Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett.

It will be relayed to the Senate this week in the committee's report urging adoption of a resolution by Vandenberg to strengthen the United Nations and encourage mutual defense agreements abroad.

The promise was demanded and received by several Foreign Relations Committee members, among them Senator George (D., Ga.), as the price of their support for the Vandenberg proposal. The resolution was approved unaminously and will be debated in the Senate early in June.

Bill Planned to Bar Britain From Aid

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) said last night he would introduce a bill Monday to deny all American aid to Britain as long as she helps the Arabs against the Jews in Palestine.

Meanwhile, Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee planned an investigation to determine the extent of British help to the Arabs. He said it would be "very appropriate" to reduce the $1,324,000,000 in Marshall Plan funds earmarked for Britain if it develops United States aid has made it possible for the British to finance Arab military activities.

Plans for Drafting 18-Yr.-Olds Junked

By The Associated Press

All congressional plans for drafting 18-year-old youths were reported junked yesterday.

A member of the Senate Armed Services Committee said 12 of its 13 members have agreed to revise its selective service bill to strip out the section calling for one year of compulsory military training for 161,000 of the 18 year olds. The member asked not to be quoted by name.

Under the new proposal 18 year olds would be allowed to volunteer for one year of service. After that they would have to serve four years as members of the National Guard or other reserve units with regular drill periods and summer training camps or cruises.

Men from 19 through 25 years old would be subject to drafting for two years.

Army, Navy and Air Force leaders have estimated that they will get 250,000 volunteers for the one-year training program, far more than the 161,000 who were to have been drafted.

House Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) earlier had announced that the House would not accept any scheme for drafting 18 year olds as provided in the Senate bill. Senators Taft (R., Ohio), Byrd (D., Va.), Wilson (R., Iowa) and others in that body also had promised a vigorous Senate fight against drafting of the 18 year olds.

The latest Senate move, as reported, brings its bill closer in line with a House measure which calls for drafting men 19 through 25 years with registration of those 18 through 30 years. The Senate bill limits registration to 18 through 25.

The House bill still lacks clearance from the Rules Committee and that is not expected until early next month.

War Warning

Denfeld Sees U. S. Lacking In Shipping

New York, May 22 (U.P.).—Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, said today that American shipping now is dangerously inadequate unless we "choose to fight the next war on our own soil."

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Propeller Club, Denfeld revealed that the United States Merchant Marine has shrunk until we now have less than half the number of transports and tankers that would be required to wage a military campaign the size of the last war.

Of the 6000 merchant ships which had been amassed by the end of the war, less than 2000 are active today, although 1400 are in reserve, he said.

Denfeld declared that not only is our merchant marine to small, but it also is obsolete, with the ships far too slow to cope with modern submarines.

He warned that our steel mills would close down without imports of manganese, and that "railroads, our factories, our airplanes, absolutely depend upon the merchant ships which transport every last ounce of the tin used in this country."

"Uncle Sam has always played his lucky number in the past and it has always come up—so far," Denfeld stated. "Perhaps there are nothing but lucky numbers in his pocket. But to my way of thinking, a ship in the hand is worth two on the ways when a crisis meets us as in 1917 and 1941."

New Skyways Will Blanket Entire Nation

By the United Press

The Government last night announced plans for blanketing the Nation with new skyways over which civil and military planes will travel in vastly expanded volume, on time, and in all kinds of weather.

The project may take 10 to 15 years. It is considered urgent for commercial and military air transportation which today is operating with outmoded and overburdened traffic control and navigation facilities. And in wartime, current facilities would impose a severe limitation on military air movements.

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer jointly announced that an air navigation development board is being set up to work out the new, Nation-wide traffic control and navigation system. A single system will serve both civil and military traffic.

It will be based mainly on a chain of radar stations which in peacetime can be used to direct aircraft movements. In wartime they can double as a warning network for detecting enemy planes.

The development board will include representatives of the Air Force, Navy and Civil Aeronautics Administration, plus an engineering staff. The spade work already has been done by a navigation committee of the Defense Department's research and development board, and a special committee of the Radio Technical Commission for Aeronautics.

Atomic Scientist Killed

Warsaw, May 22 (AP).—Dr. Blaton, 42, one of Poland's leading atomic scientists, was killed in a fall from a precipice on an excursion in the Tatra Mountains. He founded the atomic research institute at the University of Krakow.

Capehart Calls For Strong Cargo Fleet

Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) told nearly 300 members of the Propeller Club last night that the country should have a strong merchant marine in peace and war.

Capehart, member of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, said, "We should have a merchant marine that would carry practically everything we ship overseas. And if we get into another war we want to fight it on the other fellow's shore, and how are we going to do it unless we have a big merchant marine?"

S. Duvall Schell, club president, presided at the annual National Maritime Day dinner, held in the Hotel Statler. Among the distinguished guests were John R. Steelman, assistant to the President, members of Congress, Army and Navy leaders and shipping men.

Capehart said he favored subsidizing the merchant marine to meet low-cost foreign construction and operation on a competitive basis.

Scientist Grows Viruses Outside Live Body Cells

Berkeley, Calif., May 22 (AP).—A bacteriologist announced today he had produced viruses outside of living cells — permitting a better opportunity to study these minute organisms responsible for some of mankind's worst diseases.

Heretofore, viruses have been grown only in or on living cells. A tiny curtain of body tissue concealed the process from the scientist. Separating the virus from the tissue destroyed it, stopped its growth, or changed its form.

Now, Dr. A. P. Krueger of the University of California told a conference of naval medical authorities he has caused viruses to grow in a test tube solution free of cells, by adding a mysterious chemical previously extracted from cells.

Marine Aviation Prepares to Match Corps' Famed Land-Sea Versatility in the Air

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Aviation Reporter

CHERRY POINT, N. C., May 22. Marine aviation—36 years old today—is preparing to match in sky fighting the corps' famed versatility on land and sea.

It will be ready to go when needed—the weather be hanged—and ready to fight from tree tops to stratosphere, in propeller planes and jets.

It will take two and perhaps three years to get the necessary planes, electronics and other gear in sufficient quantity. Meanwhile, the Marines are training and experimenting at this huge air station, one of the largest military air bases in the world.

One squadron is an all-weather unit. Another is a mixture of jet and propeller planes, operating both day and night. Another is learning new tricks in aerial reconnaissance. A ground unit has combined air warning and fighter direction, using the latest in radar. Less than two hours by air to the north, at Quantico, Va., a squadron is working helicopters into the Marine program.

All-Instrument Goal

MAJ. GEN. FIELD HARRIS, wartime director of Marine air fighting in the Pacific and now commander of Marine aviation in the Atlantic area, looks sadly at current statistics, however.

Total personnel in Marine aviation is 13,325, compared with a war peak of 125,000. Now there are 2300 pilots, against 10,400, and 825 aircraft, compared with 2875. The Marines have only two major air bases, the other one at El Toro, Calif.

Harris said the entire Marine air branch will be brought to the level of all-weather operations which is now being established by the experimental unit. His goal for this team is ability to take off from a carrier in zero-zero (no visibility) weather, attack an objective and return to base, entirely on instruments.

In such operations, the pilot is directed by radar. In a recent test, a plane was sent against an objective 50 miles away with a flash bomb. Even the bomb release was directed from the base. The picture showed a "hit" 500 feet from the target.

"Blind" fighter operations eliminate large-scale formation flying. New techniques call for single-file flying, the planes taking off at intervals and maintaining separation by their own search radar. However, two-plane formations in overcast are sometimes used.

Capsule Radar

LIEUT. Col. Marion E. Carl, holder of the world speed record at 650 miles an hour and rated by many as the Nation's best jet pilot, leads the 122d Fighter Squadron, a mixture of McDonnell FH Phantoms (jets) and Chance Vought F4U Corsairs.

The dozen jet planes operate regularly at night, working with the air warning radar unit on the ground.

Car says his pilots have no particular difficulty at night. The radar operators find new problems, however. They are learning that the effective range of radar may be as much as one-third shorter in picking up jet aircraft because of the smaller mass of metal to reflect the beams.

Much new equipment is employed. The radar is lighter, longer range and more accurate. The direction of planes can be determined about 10 times better than during the war. The distance of a plane can be fixed with four to five times previous accuracy. The whole works can be bundled up, put aboard transport planes and flown to new sites.

Rapid Reserves

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM A. WALLACE, Marine Corps deputy commandant for air, is not worried about the size of the air arm, because the Marine Organized Reserve is as ready as the active force.

This is not just morale-boosting comment. The Reserves proved it at the 1947 exercises. The entire Reserve force east of the Mississippi was mobilized at Cherry Point in 24 hours. They arrived in 176 Corsairs and dozens of transports.

The Organized Reserves total 1086 pilots, 360 ground officers and 4570 men, composing 24 fighter squadrons and 8 ground control intercept units. They are based in 22 cities.

The volunteer reserves include 4500 pilots and 4000 ground officers.

Plane Crash Victim, Leg Broken, Crawls for 12 Hours

Huntington, Mass., May 22 (AP).—A veterans Administration psychiatrist today crawled nearly 12 hours through rain-soaked woods, entered an unoccupied house and after resting in bed several hours telephoned police he had been in a plane crash which claimed a companion's life.

The crash of a twin-engined private plane killed Dr. Erwin L. Ray of Williamsburg who was to report for duty today at the Northampton Veterans Administration hospital from Lyons, N. J.

State police said Dr. Ashton W. Tenney—suffering a broken right leg and possibly a fractured skull—crawled on his hands and one knee until he came to the summer home, a mile and a half from the wrecked plane.

They said he broke the window to gain entrance, covered himself in bed and after resting several hours called police and told them of the crash.

Dr. Tenney, stationed at Lyons (N. J.) Hospital, said the plane struck the side of Mount Pisgah and that both he and Dr. Ray, pilot and plane owner, were thrown clear.

He said when he came to, he found Dr. Ray was dead.

He said Dr. Ray had picked him up at Newark after the latter had attended an American Medical Association meeting in Washington, D. C.

Plane Makers Cite Need of Federal Help

By The Associated Press

Aircraft industry witnesses testified yesterday that developing a new-type plane costs from 20 million to 50 million dollars, and no company can foot the bill without Federal aid.

Robert E. Gross, president of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., told a House Armed Services Subcommittee that the huge amount provides only for building one or two prototypes, and for certain flight tests.

"It does not include the cost of tooling up for production," Gross said. "Such expenditures are beyond any company to make on a speculative basis."

Gross declared the aircraft industry is tied closely to Government buying. He said it must have Federal help to develop new-type transport and cargo planes needed in the event of another war.

He urged passage of a bill by Representative Hinshaw (R., Calif.) which would authorize the Government to develop civil transport aircraft adaptable for auxiliary military service. Arthur E. Raymond, vice president of Douglas Aircraft, and A. E. Lombard, vice president of Consolidated Vultee, likewise appeared in favor of the measure.

Raymond testified the cost of developing a new plane has increased 10 times since the thirties.

2 Cab Drivers Face Trial as Drunk Drivers

The corporation counsel's office yesterday was preparing prosecution of two men charged with driving while intoxicated.

The defendants are George W. Mosser, 28, of 4257 Wilson blvd., Arlington, and Samuel W. Poole, 29, of 2015 15th st. nw. Both men are cab drivers.

Mosser's case was continued until June 9 for trial by jury in Municipal Court. Poole is to be tried in the same court June 10.

On Friday The Washington Post erroneously reported that Mosser and Poole pleaded guilty to the charge. Court records show that the men had pleaded innocent and the cases continued at request of defense counsel. The Post regrets the error.

Taft Wants Airing Of Foreign Policy

Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y., May 22 (U.P.).—Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Republican presidential candidate, said tonight that if the United States is "to regain the respect of the world," it must declare its foreign policy principles and then stick to them.

Declaring that this country has "the power to lead the world in the field of morals and political doctrine," Taft said too often "the United States has wavered in its relations with other countries, and hence has lost some of the world's good will.

In an address prepared for delivery at Bard College, Taft proposed a five-point foreign policy program which included:

"1. A determination to preserve peace if consistent with the freedom of the American people.

"2. Consistent opposition to the spread of communism in this country and throughout the world.

"3. The strengthening of the United Nations by basing it on principles of justice, and willingness to abide by and enforce the decisions of an impartial tribunal based on international law.

"4. Renewal of our faith in liberty, justice and equality as the foundation of free government and a determination to crusade throughout the world for those principles.

"5. An administration guided by these principles. It can in all probability preserve the peace of the world," Taft said.

He admitted that "it might be difficult to make progress while the Russian position remains what it is.

"But we can start in the right direction," he said. "The place where we can assume leadership is in a revision of the United Nations Charter."

his first all-out campaigning for the 1948 nomination.

In his statement in Minneapolis, Stassen said he would continue to campaign in Illinois, Missouri, Massachusetts and the South. He also will go to Sacramento—where Dewey is today—to confer with California's Gov. Earl Warren June 4. Warren is the California "favorite son" and no outsider sought election backing there.

Oregon's delegates are pledged to give their "best efforts" to see that the choice of the party in their State is nominated. This is generally regarded as binding them until released, although it is not mandatory.

Taft Sees Position Unaffected by Result

New York, May 22 (U.P.).—Senator Robert A. Taft said today that the Oregon primary result "does not affect my own position" and that he believed he would enter the Republican National Convention with more delegates pledged to him than any other candidate.

Taft said his campaign manager, Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), had claimed he would receive at least 300 votes on the first ballot for the Republican Presidential nomination, but that he personally had not claimed any specific number of delegates.

Sen. Taylor 'Happy' Over Dewey Victory

Omaha, May 22 (AP).—Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho) said today he was "happy about" the trend of voting in the Oregon primary election.

Commenting at a news conference on Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's lead over Harold E. Stassen, the running mate to presidential candidate Henry A. Wallace said Stassen "masquerades under a liberal guise but as a matter of fact, he's the most reactionary of all."

Taylor said the fact he likes Dewey better than Stassen is based in part on their attitudes toward the Communist Party. Stassen's advocacy of legislation to outlaw the party, he said, is merely an effort to gain votes.

GOP Economy Falls Short

By the United Press

Republicans admitted last night that their economy drive will fall 'way short of its goal to cut $2,500,000,000 off President Truman's spending budget.

One Democrat called it a "complete flop."

Informed estimates on fiscal 1949 budget savings ranged from only 300 million dollars to 500 million dollars. Republicans set the $2,500,000,000 goal in a budget resolution which they shoved through Congress early in the session.

Mounting costs of military and foreign programs—combined with the failure to make much of a dent in spending for other Government activities—posed the possibility that Congress may have to raise taxes back next year to keep the budget out of the red.

Landon Hits Brief Trade Act Extension

By the United Press

Alfred M. Landon said yesterday Republican plans to extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act only one year threaten the entire European Recovery Program.

The former Kansas Governor and unsuccessful 1936 GOP presidential nominee said the program should be continued for a full three years without crippling changes, as requested by President Truman.

Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee promptly questioned Landon's qualifications to discuss reciprocal trade. He said "It is evident . . . that he has accepted the State Department's version without independent investigation."

Republican committee members are determined to continue the program for only one year. Landon said this would threaten the success of the European aid program and might result in the waste of funds already spent.

Landon, at the Capitol to have lunch with House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., also told reporters who interviewed him in the Speaker's office:

1. The Republican National Convention needs to look no further than Martin in its hunt for the "best possible Republican candidate for President."

2. He doesn't like a proposal by Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) to trim aid funds for Britain in event she helps arm the Arabs.

3. A temporary draft looks necessary to build up the Army. He opposes universal military training, unless young men can do their training at home.

Martin has said he is not a candidate for President. But he has left the door open for a draft. Landon said he wanted to "exchange views" with the Speaker on this question.

ECA Requests Halt in Aid Cotton Orders

By The Associated Press

Marshall Plan nations were asked yesterday to quit ordering United States cotton until detailed financial arrangements have been worked out for each government.

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman sent out letters to the various governments, together with a statement from ECA's food director, D. A. Fitzgerald, explaining that ECA must work out "a sound procurement plan" covering the needs of all nations.

"In this way it may be possible to avoid more rigid controls on procurement under the ECA that might become necessary later if might become necessary later if cotton procurement is conducted in an irregular manner," Fitzgerald said.

The same policy will apply to China, ECA announced, adding: "Some difficulties may arise on the anticipatory sales that have already been made to that country in view of the large quantity involved."

Cotton purchases by foreign nations planning to use their own dollar resources, without relying on United States help, would not be affected. But ECA attached enough importance to the new instructions to delay their announcement until cotton trading ended at noon.

Gen. Young Starts 'Sensitivity' Check

A searching examination of the "sensitivity" of every job in the departments supervised by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young has been started, the commissioner said yesterday.

He has been meeting with various department heads "to go over each job." Emphasizing that the position and not the jobholder was being discussed, General Young said the results of the conferences will be kept "strictly confidential."

Furthermore, the commissioner, who prepared the five-point criteria for determining which posts were "sensitive" to national security, said he would urge his two fellow commissioners to keep their job list secret.

He gave two reasons:

1. "There is no use putting ideas in people's heads. If we list which jobs are critical, those will be the spots disloyal people will head for."

2. "We might miss a critical job or so." This might lead to a relaxing of security investigations in such posts, he explained.

John Russell Young, head of the Board of Commissioners, and Commissioner Guy Mason, are reported to be following the general's example in discussing individual job requirements with their department heads.

A high District official, who preferred to remain unidentified, indicated that a decision has been made to include members of the police and fire departments in the loyalty check. He said this was prompted because both forces operate critical radio systems.

If either were brought under a saboteur's control or put out of service, essential protective services would be lost, possibly at a critical hour.

The head of the District's employe loyalty committee, Daniel B. Maher, however, denied that such a decision has been made. He told The Washington Post that such determination "is up to the Police and Fire Departments."

Besides operating a District-wide radio system, the police also have radio links with nearby Maryland and Virginia police, as well as a teletype hookup with the precincts.

Security Plan Board Picked

By The Associated Press

Herbert Hoover yesterday named a 12-member working committee under Ferdinand Eberstadt, New York investment banker, to develop plans for streamlining the "national security organization."

The committee's study will include the three armed services, Hoover said, but it will not deal with "military policy."

The former President heads a nonpartisan commission on organization of the executive branch, created by law to work out a simpler and more economical plan of Federal Government. It will report to the Eighty-first Congress, convening next January.

The working committee numbers civilians who served the Government during the war. Besides Eberstadt they are:

Thomas Archer, vice president of General Motors Corp.; Charles W. Cole, president of Amherst College; Hanson Baldwin, military analyst of the New York Times; Robert E. Wood, chairman of Sears Roebuck Co.; Lewis Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission; Dr. Frederick A. Middlebush, president of the University of Missouri; Robert P. Patterson of Patterson, Belknap & Webb, New York; James Knowlson, president of Stewart Warner Corp.; John Cowles, president, Minneapolis Star & Tribune Co.; John J. McCloy, president of the International Bank; Dr. Raymond B. Allen, president of the University of Washington.

Hoover also announced creation of a second committee, made up of retired officers, to advise the working committee on military problems. Its members are Gens. James Doolittle, Ira Eaker, Gilbert R. Cook, Robert W. Hasbrouck, Truman Smith and Edward Curtis and Admirals Ben Moreell, John H. Towers and R. S. Edwards.

These appointments to committees on other phases of Government reform were disclosed by Hoover:

Natural Resources—Ralph L. Carr, former Governor of Colorado, was added to the committee.

Government Statistical Services—Prof. Frederick C. Mills, formerly of Columbia University; Dr. P. K. Whelpton, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio; Prof. Samuel S. Wilks, Princeton University; Prof. John D. Millett, Columbia University; Martin R. Gainsbrugh, National Industrial Conference Board, New York; George Soule, New York, and Dr. Clarence D. Long, Johns Hopkins University.

Medical Services (civilian)—Dr. Edward D. Churchill, Harvard Medical School; Goldthwaite Dorr, New York; Dr. Alfred Newton Richords, University of Pennsylvania. Daniel I. Bosen of the Veterans Administration was named medical statistician of the committee, and Marshall Hornblower, Washington attorney, was appointed counsel. Consultants are Dr. R. E. Plunkett, New York State Health Department; Dr. Jack Ewalt, University of Texas, and Dr. Eli Ginzberg, Columbia University.

Loyalty Check Change Asked

Oak Ridge, Tenn., May 22 (U.P.). — The Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers petitioned the Atomic Energy Commission today to alter its loyalty-check procedure, possibly to the extent of revamping the Atomic Energy Act itself.

In a letter to the AEC in Washington, the association outlined a four-point policy which it said it considered as "minimum requirements for protecting the rights" of individual scientists accused as bad security risks.

While the association has adopted the "long-range" policy outlined in the letter, the scientists said they had not yet decided upon a course of action for implementing it

"But at present (it) seems to entail changes in the Atomic Energy Act itself," the letter added.

The letter, dated May 20, was signed by James Stewart, chairman of the association's executive committee. It was not made public by Stewart until 8 a. m. today, however, to give the original letter time to reach the AEC in Washington.

Some of the association's recommendations included in the letter were that "specific" charges be preferred against any accused scientist, a public record of all proceedings be kept, cross-examination of witnesses be allowed, and that the burden of proof be on the AEC.

All Federal Officials With Red Relatives Should Quit Like Virden, Rep. Crawford Says

Representative Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.) yesterday called on all Federal officials "having known Red relatives" to follow the example of John C. Virden, Commerce Department director of industry cooperation, who quit Friday.

Virden resigned after Representative Crawford disclosed that the Commerce Department official's 22-year-old daughter, Euphemia, was working for Tass, the Russian news agency here.

"The Virden case is indeed tragic," Crawford commented yesterday, adding that "Federal officials having known Red relatives . . . will save themselves and their Government embarrassment by removing themselves."

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer publicly went to bat for 51-year-old Virden, a veteran of both World Wars and a Cleveland businessman with an outstanding record of national public service.

Virden, in his letter of resignation, explained that he had made a complete break with his daughter last January, when she had accepted the Tass job as a teletype operator, and had not been in touch with her since.

Euphemia—who prefers to be called Micky—has been living in a small apartment at 1328 Park rd. nw., since the break with her family. Neighbors described her as a quiet, refined girl, who never discussed communism or politics with them.

Micky left town weekends, neighbors said, and she left again Friday evening, with an overnight bag. Tass Agency confirmed the report that Micky had gone away.

Only a year before Micky went to work for the Communist news agency, she had been graduated from the exclusive Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y., in January of 1947. And the winter before that—in December of 1946—Micky had made her debut into Cleveland society at a Victory Assembly ball. She had lived on swank North Park blvd., and had attended the private Hathaway Brown School there.

Virden believes his daughter a girl of high ideals who is "simply being exploited."

Printers Reelect Randolph by 3-to-2 Margin

Indianapolis, May 22 (AP).—Incumbent officers of the International Typographical Union were returned to office in the union's 1948 election, an unofficial count showed today.

The Progressive Party, headed by President Woodruff Randolph, claimed victory with more than 55,000 votes counted of the estimated 70,000 cast. Randolph's ticket led by a 3-to-2 margin.

In Washington, John R. Evans, candidate for president of the Independent Party ticket, conceded victory to the Progressives.

Don Hurd, secretary-treasurer, Don Hurd, secretary-treasurer, was leading the Progressive ticket with 33,677 votes to 19,714 for his opponent, Leland Shores of St. Louis, as figures on the unofficial count were released today. Randolph had 31,948 to 22,247 for Evans.

The official count of votes will begin May 29.

The Gallup Poll:

77 Pct. of Voters Want Commie 'File'

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

THE majority of American voters polled in a Nationwide survey think that most members of the American Communist Party are loyal to Russia, not to the United States.

The general feeling is that something ought to be done about the Communist Party. The public is in a mood to accept almost any program which the experts think will work. For example:

One of the principal provisions of the Mundt-Nixon bill is that members of the Communist Party and officers of Communist front organizations file their names with the Federal Government.

This proposal is approved by an overwhelming majority of voters, as follows:

Would you favor or oppose a law requiring all members of the Communist Party in this country to register (file their names) with the Justice Department in Washington?

Favor	77%
Oppose	12
No opinion	11

Whether outlawing the party is constitutional or feasible is a technical matter which perhaps should be left to experts. But insofar as the general principle is concerned, the last time public sentiment was tested on the subject, in December, 1947, 62 per cent favored outlawing the party, 23 per cent were opposed and the rest had no opinion.

Whether the Stassen-Dewey radio debate and other public discussion has changed opinion since last December will be shown in future surveys.

Institute surveys show that a slightly higher proportion of voters now believe American Communists are loyal to Russia than did last December. The trend follows:

In general, do you think most American citizens who belong to the Communist Party in this country are loyal to America or to Russia?

	Dec. 1947	Today
Loyal to U. S.	19%	16%
Loyal to Russia	59	65
No opinion	22	19

Another provision of the Mundt-Nixon bill prohibits Communists from holding Government jobs. Sentiment in favor of that proposal was found overwhelming as far back as a year ago. In April 1947, the Institute found the following vote:

Should American citizens who are members of the Communist Party be forbidden to hold Civil Service jobs (regular Government jobs) or should they have the same rights as others to hold Government jobs?

Should be forbidden to hold Government jobs	67%
Should be allowed to hold such jobs	19
No opinion	14

Until such a proposal does become law, however, the public is in favor of giving any Government employe whose loyalty is questioned a fair hearing on the charges. In September the Institute polled on the question of loyalty purges without a trial and found the following vote:

Employes should be fired	24%
Employes should have right to present case	68
No opinion	8

The present mood of the country toward Communists further is illustrated in the results of another survey completed in April.

Do you think all Communists should or should not be removed from jobs in United States industries that would be important in wartime?

Should	80%
Should not	12
No opinion	8

Meat Strike Ends At Most Plants

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—The CIO meat handlers' strike was over at most plants throughout the country today and industry sources forecast this good news for housewives:

1. Meat supplies probably will start spurting next week as some livestock believed held back on farms is shipped to market.

2. The additional supplies may result in lower retail prices.

There are some "ifs" in the price outlook—the principal one being how strong a demand for meat develops. Even if receipts at livestock markets boom Monday, it will be a week or 10 days before these additional meat supplies reach the Nation's butcher shops in volume.

Although the strike never caused any important meat shortages throughout the country, weekly meat production was only from 75 to 85 per cent of normal.

The CIO United Packinghouse Workers Union called off its strike yesterday against Swift, Armour and Cudahy, but continued it against Wilson & Co. The strikers accepted the nine cents an hour wage boost they rejected before leaving their jobs.

The AFL union and independent union workers accepted the nine cents boost in January, but the CIO demanded 29 cents. For the strikers, the nine-cent boost will be effective as of the day they return to work. However, their seniority rights and other conditions are maintained as of the day before the strike.

The strike settlement spread today to the Kingan & Co., plant at Indianapolis, where some 2300 production workers accepted the nine-cent boost.

A union spokesman in New York said 50 Wilson workers would return to some of the company's branch houses there Monday despite the strike. These workers are covered by contracts different from those of the packinghouse workers.

However, the union continued its strike against the Rath packing plant in Waterloo, Iowa, and against the Morrell packing plant at Ottumwa, Iowa. The National Guard still is on duty at the Rath plant where a picket was slain Wednesday.

National Guardsmen were withdrawn from South St. Paul, Minn., scene of picket disorders.

Meat Strike Probers May Go to Kansas City

Chicago, May 22 (U.P.).—Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.), head of a House subcommittee which heard testimony on meat strike violence, said today the group "may go to Kansas City to investigate violence there."

"We intend to turn over some of the photographs and affidavits gathered there to Attorney General Tom Clark, calling his attention to possible violations of the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act," Hoffman said.

Plea to Congress

Antitrust Action Asked On UMW

By the United Press

The National Coal Association demanded last night that Congress put the United Mine Workers under the antitrust laws and forbid collective bargaining on welfare and pension plans.

It said in its weekly bulletin that coal and other industries will ask Congress for such a law "in due course of time."

At the same time UMW President John L. Lewis again called for immediate payment to miners from the 35 million dollar union welfare and retirement fund.

The union released a statement and report to show that this fund can pay $100 a month pensions to miners at age 60 without going bankrupt. Payments have been held up by court action by the operator's trustee, Ezra Van Horn.

Meanwhile, negotiations for a new soft coal contract remained at a standstill. The present agreement will expire June 30. Lewis and the soft coal operators are deadlocked over the question of seating at the conference a representative of the Southern Operators Association. Lewis insists that Southern operators signed the current contract as individuals and should bargain on a new contract as individuals.

Lewis will begin negotiation Thursday in Philadelphia for a new contract covering 72,000 hard coal miners. The current anthracite agreement can be terminated July 10.

The Coal Association said the industry believes "labor unions should be put under the antitrust laws and be held responsible for their acts in exactly the same manner as any business group that attempts in any way to interfere with or obstruct the free flow of interstate commerce."

UMW Is Charged By 2 Former Members

Harlan, Ky., May 22 (AP).—Charging unfair labor practices under the Taft-Hartley Law, two Harlan County coal miners today filed petitions with the National Labor Relations Board at Cincinnati against the United Mine Workers of America.

The miners, E. J. Williams, Evarts, and Richard Collins, Wallins, former members of Local 5355 at the Woods Mine of Harlan-Wallins Coal Corp. at Evarts, state in their petitions they were threatened and man-handled by union representatives after their refusal to pay a $50 fine imposed by the UMW for working three days during the recent soft coal walkout.

but are rather symptoms of the sicknesses of our society. The truant is usually running away from the failure of the school to meet his fundamental emotional needs and his capacities; the gangster is trained for his career of killing by the slums. Consequently, punishment of lawbreakers to get revenge generally gets no better results than did the former practice of whipping the insane."

The institute's sessions were attended by more than 500 persons, many of them outstanding experts of the Nation on law. The institute's purposes are to gather the controlling decisions of the courts, to restate the law as it exists and to codify the law according to the demands of modern society. Much of the current sessions were devoted to the commercial law codification, which began in 1944 and is to be completed in 1949.

Newspaper Vendors Backed on Security

A drive against the Gearhart bill to bar independent news vendors from Social Security coverage will be opened at the Statler tonight by the National Council of Salesmen's Organizations and 56 affiliated groups.

Speakers at the meeting, slated for 8 p. m., will include Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.), Louis A. Capaldo, president of the council, and Mitchell M. Shipman, counsel to the organization.

150 Pathologists Will Have 2-Day Meeting Here

Medical pathologists of five States and the District of Columbia to the number of 150 will meet here Monday and Tuesday in joint technical sessions, under auspices of the College of American Pathologists.

The scientific sessions will be held Monday at the U. S. Naval Hospital and the National Cancer Institute, both in Bethesda, Md., and on Tuesday at Walter Reed Hospital. More than 30 papers are scheduled for presentation.

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will be the principal speaker at a banquet session, 7 p. m., Monday, at the Hotel Mayflower.

Men of St. John's To Hold Second Banquet With Sons

The second annual father-son banquet of the men of St. John's will be held 7:30 p. m., Monday, in the Hotel Statler. More than a thousand persons are expected to attend.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, D. D., Archbishop of Washington, and Rev. Brother Athanase Emile, FSC., Superior General of the Christian Brothers, will be the guests of honor.

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, is expected to attend the banquet. Awards of trophies will be made to athletic teams of St. John's College here.

House to Debate Home Rule

indorsed the idea of home rule for Washington, and the 1944 Democratic campaign platform carried this note: "We favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia."

To match the bipartisan backing, there is bi-partisan opposition to the bill.

The home rule bill has brought the drive for suffrage in Washington to its most advanced legislative mark since the status of voteless District residents became an issue in Congress and in the party political conventions.

Now by a paradox, the approach of the presidential conventions forms a legislative hazard for the Washington home rule bill. The hazard could prove more crucial than the powerful opposition slated to be thrown against the measure in the House. The coming conventions mean early adjournment of Congress. The home rule bill, once clear of the House, could be caught and squeezed to death in the adjournment rush of the Senate.

Regardless of the chance the measure might have in the Senate, House sponsors of the home rule plan, after working on it for more than a year, are likely to go into their certain fight on the House floor in a fighting mood. So are the opponents.

Floor managers for the bill will be Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee and an eight-term member of the House, and Representative Auchincloss.

Leader of opposition to the bill is expected to be Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), former chairman and now ranking minority member of the House District Committee.

First test on the measure will come Monday with the question of whether the House will adopt the Rules Committee resolution that would grant two hours of general debate on the home rule bill and waive points of order against it. Defeat of the resolution would stymie the bill. Approval of it would clear the way for the House to act on the bill itself.

The big decision, whether the bill passes the House or is defeated, is expected to come Tuesday.

In its present form, the home rule bill would abolish the present board of three appointed District Commissioners, and in their place set up an elected city council. The council would appoint a city manager, and most city agencies would be streamlined under his office into 12 major departments. Washington's public schools would be in a separate department under an elected Board of Education.

The council could enact ordinances, and write the annual city budget, subject to advice but not instructions from the proposed joint congressional District Committee at the Capitol. The council could not enact, but could only propose, general District legislation. Its "proposed enactments" of major changes in the local laws would be sent to the Capitol. There a formal joint resolution approving the council proposal would have to be introduced and referred to the Joint District Committee. The resolution would have to clear both Houses and be signed by the President to make the council proposal take effect as law. Apart from this procedure, Congress and its members could legislate as now for the District.

The plan also calls for an elected District Delegate to the House of Representatives. He would be like the Delegates from the American Territories with the right to debate and make motions but not to vote.

If the home rule bill cleared Congress and the President, it would go into effect only if approved by a majority of qualified District voters in an official referendum in November. Actual operation of the new home rule government then would begin next year.

A main target for opposition to the bill has been the proposed election system. It is based on the idea that people who work and live in the District should have the right to take part in the strictly municipal elections here, without losing any voting rights they may have in the States.

In line with that idea, the bill makes a year of residence in the District a basic qualification for voting in the referendum in November, and for voting in the elections of council and School Board members. In contrast, the basic qualification for holding elected District office, and for voting for the Delegate, is legal domicile in the District.

The plan to let District residents vote here, even though they may vote in national and State elections elsewhere, survived its first test in the House District committee by a tight 12-11 vote. Opponents of the plan are slated to make another strong fight in the House to restrict voting in the school board and council elections to persons domiciled in the District. At stake are the home rule voting rights of an estitmated 100,000 persons here, mostly Federal employes.

Sponsors of the present voting plan say it would make the composition of the electorate as broad as possible and improve its quality by including Federal employes.

Opponents have protested that a man should be allowed to vote in only one place. They have protested, too, that the plan would lead to legal complications for those with residences in the states.

A second main target of opposition is expected to be the new formula in the home rule bill for measuring the size of the Federal payment to the District, which is now 12 million dollars a year. The new formula would fix a ceiling of 15 million dollars. Within that limit the basic payment would be calculated each year as 14 per cent of the non-Federal city revenue in the preceding year.

Federation of Churches Urges Home-Rule Passage

The Washington Federation of Churches yesterday announced its approval of home rule for the District and urged Congress to vote for it.

Bishop Angus Dun, president of the Federation, declared it is sending copies of a resolution urging home rule in the District to all members of Congress. Debate on the bill begins Monday in the House.

Courts May Get Clerks' Election Plea

Rebuffed by the National Labor Relations Board in an attempt to hold a union shop election in Virginia, officials of the Retail Clerks local 1501 (AFL) yesterday were weighing an appeal to Federal courts.

The NLRB, in a 3-2 vote Friday, decided it would not hold an election to determine whether employes of three Giant Food Stores Inc., in Arlington, Rosslyn and Alexandria, Va., want a union shop.

The decision was based on a section of the Taft-Hartley Act which permits a union shop if the majority of employes in an NLRB election vote for it; and if State laws do not forbid it. Union shops are forbidden under Virginia law.

"We have not had time to determine if we will carry the matter to the courts," Truman Kennedy, secretary of the local said.

Kennedy said that "all the retail clerks, totaling about 50, in the three Virginia stores "belong to the local. He said his local had a membership of about 500, including retail clerks from the Giant stores and other grocery establishments in Washington and within a 25-mile radius of the Capital.

Kennedy declared the petition for a union shop election was filed several months ago as a test case. A petition for a similar election in the District, which does not ban union shops, has been acted upon favorably, Kennedy said, and only the date remains to be determined.

Under a union shop agreement, all employes must join the union after they are hired if they are not already members.

N. M. Cohen and Jacob Lehrman, executives of the Giant stores, were not available for comment.

Margaret Truman Plans to Marry

ROMANCE IN NAMES—Airline clerks in Independence, Mo., yesterday thought they had discovered a White House romance when Margaret Truman phoned for reservations to fly to Shreveport, La., to be married. Miss Truman explained, however, that she was not related to President Truman, that she is a 23-year-old nurse in his hometown and like the President's daughter, her name is Mary Margaret not have been spent anyway and would have been a cash carryover into the 1950 fiscal year.)

Moreover, Senator Cain declared he was prepared to ask upon passage of the sales tax that all District income taxes be eliminated for persons earning less than $8000 yearly. Cain said the tax would apply whether the individual was a resident or only domiciled here. He would be permitted to deduct any income taxes paid to other States.

Oppose Increase

The conferees declared opposition to any increase of the real estate tax to make up a budget deficit. However, they agreed also that the real estate tax would be the only alternative at this session if Congress adjourns after approval of the pay raise but before action on a sales tax and increase in the Federal contribution.

That would leave the District with an eight-million-dollar deficit which could only be financed by increasing existing real estate taxes from $2 to $2.55 for each hundred dollars of assessed valuation.

6000 More 'Phone Employes Sign New 3-Year Agreement

Agreement on a three-year contract without change in wages was announced yesterday by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and the Communications Workers of America, Division 36.

The contract completes negotiations by the company with 6000 telephone workers in the Greater Washington area, General Manager F. G. Macarow of the company announced. A similar contract was signed Monday with operators.

Included in the contract announced yesterday are plant, accounting, commercial and engineering employs

"No change has been made in basic wages," Macarow said. "The new contract is to run for three years from May 22 with provisions made for two reopenings for consideration of basic wages during the life of the contract. It also provides that there shall be no deliberalization of the pension plan while the contract is in effect."

Glenn E. Watts, division president of the union, said the contract also includes minor changes in job classifications and improvements in termination pay allowances."

Bootlegger Gets 20 Days in Jail

David Douglas Davenport, 33, a confessed bootlegger, was sentenced yesterday in Municipal Court to serve 20 days in jail for illegally selling whisky last July in the Washington Terminal.

It was Davenport's 101st appearance in the courts here within a year. On his last appearance May 15, he was given 30 days in jail and a $100 fine for indecent exposure. The penalty for selling whisky will run concurrently with the indecent-exposure offense.

Good News For Folks Who Suffer From ✓ STOMACH GAS
✓ SOUR FOOD TASTE
✓ ACID INDIGESTION
Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief from this nervous distress.
Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.
To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.
Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Legion Withdraws From Colors Ritual

The District American Legion has withdrawn from participating in the annual Massing of Colors to be held at the Washington Cathedral amphitheater at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Legion is miffed at not being allotted a place of prominence in the ritual.

The local department of the Legion, with some 20,000 members and 5000 auxiliary members, is the largest veterans organization in this area, and had planned to participate in the exercises with the flags of 59 posts, 30 auxiliary posts, together with the 100-man National Guard of Honor.

Commander Owen C. Holleran disclosed yesterday he had instructed all post heads that the executive committee of the department has decided against taking any oficial part in the combined patriotic and religious ceremony, but that individual posts may participate on their own if they wish.

The Massing of Colors, an annual rite initiated after the first world war, is sponsored by the District Department, Military Order of the World Wars.

To Proceed as Scheduled

A spokesman for the Military Order said that the ceremony would continue, as scheduled, with or without Legion participation. He said more than 100 veterans and patriotic organizations would join in the rites.

"It's all over a misunderstanding," the spokesman said. "Actually, there is no precedence involved. There's to be no formal parade. The only marching is from the point at which the flag-bearers gather to their seats in the amphitheater. It appears that a group of high school cadets will be immediately in front of the Legion, according to an arrangement, when they march into the amphitheater toward their seats."

Commander Holleran said that the District Legion wasn't seeking to raise any fuss or furor, but that the executive committee of the department had felt that the Legion's prestige is at stake at any public gathering.

"We are the largest and most active veterans' group in the city," Holleran pointed out. "In the Army Day parade, early in April, the Legion was shoved way back in the line of march, and many of our posts protested to the department later.

"We feel, so far as the color massing ceremony goes, the Legion should be preceded only by the Military Order, which is sponsoring the ceremony, and such older organizations as the Grand Army of the Republic or the Spanish War Veterans. We feel the Legion's position should be recognized."

The Legion protested the order to Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., adjutant general of the national Military Order and adjutant of the local chapter, but, according to Commander Holleran, "we couldn't arrive at a satisfactory solution." Bettelheim was out of town yesterday and could not be reached for comment.

Maj. Gen. Carl Gray, administrator of veterans affairs, will be principal speaker at the Massing of Colors this afternoon. Bishop Angus Dun and the United States Marine Band will participate in the ceremonies.

At Arlington

Catholics Honor War Dead Today

Memorial services, topped by the tenth annual military memorial field mass, will open here this morning—a full week in advance of Decoration Day.

Patriotic organizations, schools and civic groups will hold rituals in honor of the Nation's war dead at various times throughout this week.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, will celebrate the solemn pontifical mass at 10 a. m. at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The sermon will be delivered by Msgr. John Keating Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral.

The service, at which more than 90 national and local Catholic organizations are scheduled to place wreaths on the tomb, is sponsored by the Washington General Assembly Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus.

Norway Sends Wreath

In addition, this morning the crew of a Norwegian America Line ship, Stavangerfijord, here under auspices of the Norwegian government's welfare office for the merchant marine, will lay a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb.

Jane A. Delano Post No. 6, American Legion, will hold memorial services at the Delano Memorial, in the nurses' section of Arlington Cemetery, at 1 p. m. today. Past National Commander Lynn V. Stambaugh and Department Commander Owen C. Holleran will be the principal speakers.

George Washington Post No. 1, American Legion, will hold services at 2 p. m. today at the grave of E. Lester Jones, first District departemnt commander, in the cemetery.

VFW at Cedar Hill

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will hold services at 10 a. m. today in Cedar Hill Cemetery to honor the war dead. Participating will be Col. Alfred C. Oliver, jr., past national craplain of VFW.

On Wednesday at 11:30 a. m., VFW will pay tribute to the Navy dead. Omar B. Ketchum, VFW legislative director, will present an anchor of nearly 1000 poppies to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Mark E. Andrews.

Students at McKinley High School will memorialize the school's 184 students and graduates who died in the last war at a dedication service this Friday in the auditorium. Presentation will be made of a service roster of more than 3000 former student veterans and memorial tablets bearing the names of World War II dead will be unveiled.

Alumni to Plan Fund Drive for Georgetown Gym

A special meeting of Georgetown University alumni will be held at 8:30 p. m., Monday, in Copley Lounge on the campus to brace the fund-raising campaign for a new gymnasium.

Georgetown is aiming at more than $800,000 for the proposed McDonough Memorial Gymnasium. At present, it was reported, Washington has raised $23,607 and on a percentage basis is in last place among 96 cities organized for the campaign. The goal for Washington is $100,000.

Campaign leaders said the poor local showing is due to the failure of the campaign committees to cover the 5000 alumni here. Fewer than 10 per cent have been solicited in person, it was said.

3-Day Program

4th of July Celebration Meeting Set

Leon Chatelain, jr., recently elected president of the Washington Board of Trade, has been named by the District Commissioners to head the Fourth of July celebration committee for the 100th anniversary of the Washington Monument cornerstone laying.

Chatelain

Chatelain has called a meeting of civic and business leaders at 4 p. m. May 27 in the board's office, room 531, Evening Star Building, to lay the groundwork for the program.

Plans call for the three-day program, July 3, 4, and 5, instead of the customary one-day observance.

GWU Gets $3000 Fund for Journalism Prizes

A $3000 fund for an annual student prize in journalism in memory of Jesse Frederick Essary, chief of the Washington bureau of the Baltimore Sun for 30 years, has been given by his widow to George Washington University.

Mr. Essary's widow, now Mrs. William J. Murphy, who made the gift on behalf of herself and her three daughters, specified that the fund "should provide an annual $100 prize to a student whose work on college publications is of the highest character.

Her daughters are Mrs. Clyde Bruce Aitchison, jr., 2101 Connecticut ave. nw., the former Ruth Essary, who attended the university; Miss Elene Essary of the same address, and Mrs. Samuel T. Ansell, jr., 3804 East-West hwy., Chevy Chase, Md.

Announcement of the gift was made by Robert V. Fleming, president of the university's board of trustees, after a meeting in which the prize fund was accepted with appreciation. Fleming said the first award will be made in the next academic year.

The prize will be awarded each year by a special committee of the president and two faculty members.

The late newsman whose newspaper reporting will be commemorated by the awards retired from the Sun bureau several months before his death in March, 1942. Previously, he had been chief of the Sun's bureau in London, England. He had also been a reporter on the Norfolk Ledger, the Baltimore Star and the Baltimore News.

The dean of active Washington correspondents at the time of his retirement, he had covered recent history from the Wright Brothers' first flight in 1903 to the events leading up to Pearl Harbor.

McKellar Enters Primary Battle

By The Associated Press

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D. Tenn), jumped into the Tennessee Democratic senatorial primary yesterday to support Judge John A. Mitchell for the seat now held by Senator Tom Stewart (D., Tenn.).

McKellar, who will be 80 next January 29, hinted he may seek another Senate term in 1952.

GU Hospital Went in Red $201,358 in '47

Charity and part-charity care ran Georgetown University Hospital here more than $200,000 in the red during 1947 operations, it was disclosed yesterday.

Most of the over-all deficit, approximately $150,000, came from losses in running the institution's 41 clinics for out-patient care, according to Dr. Frank S. Horvath, director of that department.

The axact 1497 deficit was revealed as $201,358.30 by Sister M. Antonella, hospital administrator. The hospital, she said, operates on a policy of turning no one away for inability to pay, and restricts it admissions and clinic care only on the basis of facilities available.

Part of Program

Financial plight of the hospital was made public as continuing part of the "Know Your Hospital" program of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area. On Monday, G.U.'s 405-bed hospital will observe "Open House" activities in the council program.

Included in Monday's event will be guided tours of the hospital, and inspection of the 41 clinics functioning under the out-patient department. The ladies board of the hospital, under direction of Mrs. Elsie Martell, president, will assist hospital personnel in conducting the tours.

Dr. Horvath, explaining losses incurred by his department, said that about 40,000 patient visits are recorded annually at the out-patient department.

Although the cost per clinic visit averages about $4.50, he said, the Community Chest reimburses the hospital at only $1 a person while the hospital gets nothing for treatment to tax-eligibles, the city's indigents. In 1947, he said, about half of the patients treated at the clinics were indigents.

Carbon Monoxide Detector Expected To Save Lives

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Development of a small machine about the size of a portable radio that can detect tiny quantities of deadly carbon monoxide gas in the air was announced today.

The National Foundation for Science and Industry said the machine "promises to be one of the most beneficial lifesavers given to the public in a long time."

William C. Darby, who invented the machine, said it registers the amount of gas on a meter. It also has an electric warning system which can be set to go off at any desired danger point. It also will register the accumulation of gas over a given period, showing exactly how much a person has breathed in the same amount of time.

2 Fishermen Die As Boat Capsizes; 31 Are Rescued

Manasquan, N. J., May 22 (U.P.).—The pleasure-bound fishing schooner Squirt capsized off Manasquan Inlet today, drowning 2 men and endangering the lives of 31 other holiday fishermen aboard.

The cause of the tragedy was not known, police said. The Squirt pulled out of Kens Landing with a load of city workers seeking a day of deepsea fishing at 6 a. m. and overturned a few minutes later.

A Coast Guard lifeboat crew rushed to the aid of the passengers as they splashed about in the sea. They were able to save 31, including one woman. The overturned boat was towed ashore.

Silver Spring Group to Meet

Proposed increases for Montgomery County police, a compromise Capital Transit Co. bus line proposal, and delay in completing Silver Spring's main artery will be discussed at a meeting of the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring Monday at 8 o'clock in the Liquor Control Board Building.

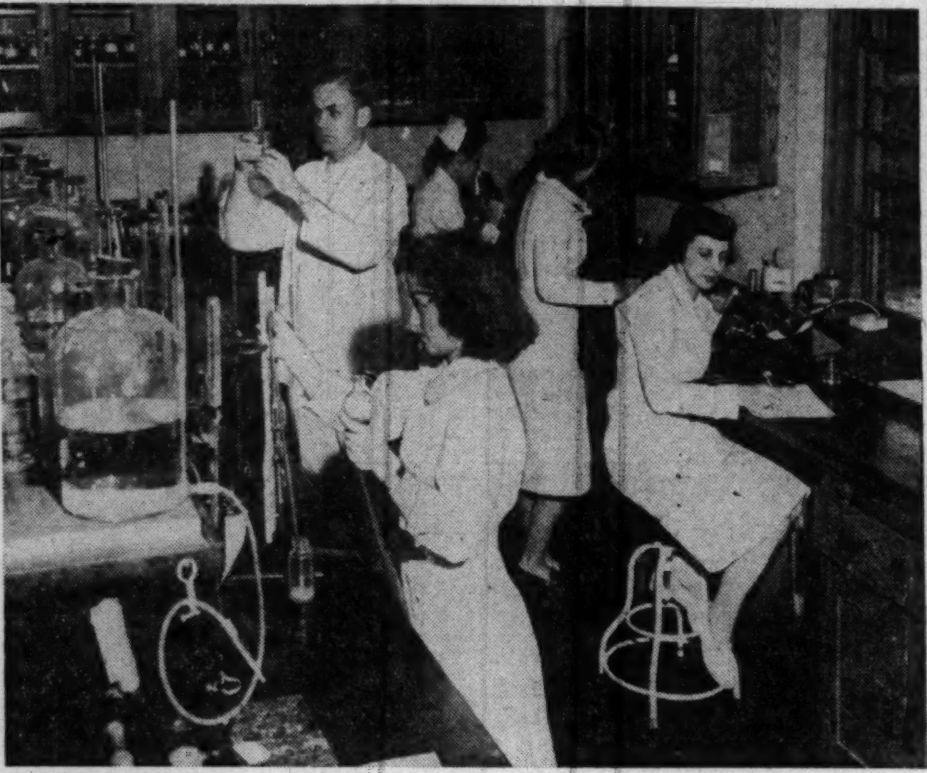
A nominating committee to prepare a slate for the annual election will be named by President Victor J. Richter, and a report will be made on plans for celebration of the opening of Georgia ave. and the Baltimore & Ohio underpass will be given.

Electrical Union Local Expels Communist

St. Louis, May 22 (U.P.).—William Sentner, District 8 president of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union, an avowed Communist, today lost his membership in Local 1102, which represents employes of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co.

He was expelled from the local by a vote of 950 to 2, but the action had no effect on his position as a district officer. Henry Costa, plant chairman and local executive board member, had charged Sentner with trying to further the aims of the Communist Party through his union activities.

Where Hospital Funds Go...



The Washington Post

STAFF AT WORK—Hospital technicians and nurses work in Arlington Hospital's laboratory, where blood counts, slide cultures and chemical analyses are studied. Hospital equipment such as this accounts for 14 per cent of the institution's costs.

Drive for $85,000 is under way

A hospital is just as vital a part of its community as a church, a school, or fire and police protection — and people need to know it.

This view was expressed yesterday by John Anderson, Arlington Hospital's new administrator, who stepped into the job just as the hospital launched its 1948 drive for $85,000 on May 10.

But the drive is lagging. As of last Monday, only 6 per cent of its quota had been received. And hospital officials say the $85,000 quota is "absolutely necessary" if the hospital is to continue its present services.

Emergency Need Cited

"The only time you begin to realize the need of maintaining a hospital in your community is when little Johnny wakes up at 2 a. m. with a high fever. Then, you know," emphasized Anderson.

After 10 years' experience as deputy administrator at Children's Hospital before coming to Arlington, Anderson gives two reasons why funds are needed.

1. Hospital costs have soared 120 per cent in the past three years. It now costs $15 daily to feed, clothe, treat and keep a patient. It cost about $7 three years ago.

2. Despite these more than doubled costs, the price the Community Chest and county welfare agencies pay to have the hospital treat indigent patients has increased only slightly—or not at all.

Where does the hospital dollar go? About 61 per cent pays the salaries of hospital employes from telephone operators to highly-trained physicians. Arlington Hospital has 180 employes for its 100 beds, nearly always full.

Also taken from total costs—$550,736 in 1947—is the 13 per cent for food, 12 per cent for medical supplies, and 14 per cent for equipment, other supplies, and miscellaneous.

About 78 per cent of these costs are returned in fees charged paying patients, Anderson estimates. That leaves a shortage of 22 per cent on charity cases.

The Community Chest, through the Health Security Administration, pays $5 daily for each patient it refers to the hospital. The hospital finds it costs them roughly $15.

To illustrate the loss, Arlington Hospital spent $20,582 on HSA-referred patients, but received only $7927. Net loss, $12,655.

'Tax School' Planned By Maryland Women

Wilton T. Allen, supervisor of assesors for Montgomery County, and Dr. Joseph Ray, head of the political science department, University of Maryland, will speak at a "tax school" Tuesday in Baltimore as part of the two-day convention of the Maryland League of Women Voters.

Negro Woman Continues Try to Enter Law School

Oklahoma City, May 22 (AP).—The efforts of a Negro woman to gain admission to the all-white University of Oklahoma Law School will go back to the courts Monday.

Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, who has carried her case through to the United States Supreme Court once, will reenter the Cleveland County District Court at Norman, Okla., in an effort to force the State of Oklahoma to enroll her.

This time she will attempt to prove that a hurriedly-established branch law school of Langston University, Oklahoma's Negro College, is not equal to the University of Oklahoma.

The State opened the Branch Law School after the Nation's highest court last January ordered Oklahoma to provide substantially equal facilities for Negroes as soon as for whites.

Opposition Party Leads in Panama

Panama City, Panama, May 22 (U.P.).—With 80 per cent of the returns from the May 9 presidential election tabulated, opposition candidate Arnulfo Aris today was leading his nearest rival by 2008 votes.

Returns from 438 out of the total 576 precincts gave Arias 59,707 votes; Domingo Diaz Arosemena, candidate of the government Liberal Reform Party, 57,699, and Jose I. Fabrega, of the National Revolutionary Party, 34,401.

Ninety-three of 173 precincts in vital Panama Province gave Arias 26,067 to Diaz 16,025.

AEC Aide, Professor Head College Drive

John L. Burling, legal official with the Atomic Energy Commission, and Dr. W. Montague Cobb, Howard University professor, have accepted the cochairmanship of the 1948 United Negro College Fund drive here, it was announced yesterday.

The national goal for the campaign is $1,400,000 of which the quota for Washington is $40,000. The campaign here opens Wednesday at the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, at Howard University.

UAW Ascribes Strikebreaker Plan to Chrysler

Detroit, May 22 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers today accused Chrysler Corp. of planning to use foremen and office workers as strikebreakers Monday and hinted the plan might lead to violence.

Norman Matthews, leader of the UAW's 11-day Chrysler strike, made the charge when informed the two nonstriking groups would be used next week to take inventory, a task normally assigned to UAW members.

"Responsibility for any disorder on the picket lines resulting from this policy will rest squarely on the shoulders of the company and we are so informing law enforcement agencies," Matthews declared in a telegram to Chrysler officials.

Robert W. Conder, the company's director of labor relations, had proposed the plan to speed the return to production when the dispute is settled. But a Chrysler spokesman said any accusation that the corporation is "trying to break the strike or provoke violence is sheer nonsense."

"EVEN I Owe a lot to Reddy Kilowatt!"
"I'm just The Pup—but don't think I don't do some thinking! Pretty grateful thoughts they are, too—and back of a lot of them is that dependable fellow, Reddy Kilowatt. I never take-him-for-granted, either—and here's why:
"From the day my folks put in that Electric Kitchen and Laundry, things have pepped up for me. Every time they bring home another Electric helper (like that vacuum cleaner, last Tuesday) my life gets brighter. You can see WHY. With electrical living, Junior, Bess, Mrs. Smith and all of them have more time for lots of things, including me! Nowadays, I get more romps, more rides in the car, more attention—and I want to add: some mighty tasty table scraps! THAT'S why I wag my tail when another electric helper arrives. It means Reddy is ready to do more time-taking work for my family. It means I'm going to be a still luckier dog!"

Recreation Fund Of $55,000 Voted

A $55,000 annual recreation program—largest in county history—was voted yesterday by the Arlington County Board.

The 1948-49 program, to be paid for out of surplus county funds, will provide supervised recreation at five more school playgrounds than does the present allocation.

Arlington's School Board recently dropped the entire summer recreation program from its own budget, after the county board had slashed $227,000 from the requested school budget.

The County Board, which took over the summer program, now will pay $35,000 to operate year-around playgrounds at 25 schools, eight county-owned sites, and at eight lots privately owned.

In addition, the county will have $11,000 to operate the Arlington Recreation Center, a Community Chest agency, with $9000 more to cover office and administrative costs in the Arlington Recreation Department.

At yesterday's County Board meeting in the Arlington Court House, Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker told the legislative body it could transfer to schools any unbudgeted surplus funds available.

He gave the opinion in response to a question from County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan, who then said he felt the income from a proposed tax for business licenses should be given to the School Board. Dugan had voted against the school budget slash.

County Board Member F. Freeland Chew said that when other taxes on autos are authorized by the board, "it is my purpose to ask that they be used for highway purposes." Chew had voted for the school cut.

Yesterday, the board agreed to establish a Department of Finance under the county government, including divisions of accounting and auditing, punch card and tabulating, and purchasing and stores. It would be headed by the present auditor, Elmer Newell.

A $147,239 contract for sidewalk, curb and gutter construction in Arlington's Barcroft area was awarded to Payne & Oliver Construction Co. of Baileys Crossroads.

4 Mules Race Express Train And Beat It

Greenville, Miss., May 22 (U.P.).—Four flop-eared mules raced an Illinois Central Railroad "express" train today and won handily.

It was supposed to be a secret, but the race wasn't strictly on the up-and-up. The mules had some sub-rosa help from a speedy, late-model sedan. But everybody had fun except railroad officials. They were more than a little irked.

The race was the idea of Hodding Carter, editor of the Greenville Delta-Democrat Times. He wanted to prove what everyone "knew"—that a man could travel the 38 miles from Cleveland to Greenville faster on a mule than the "express" train.

Engineer T. G. Patterson backed his "Delta Express" into the Greenville station one hour and 16 minutes after leaving Cleveland, to find a frisky mule munching on a huge horseshoe of fruits and vegetables.

"Do you mean to say that this long-eared hybrid beat me into town?" Patterson asked.

The winner was "Nature Boy," who was ridden by State Legislator Larry Pryor. The heavy-set planter and "Nature Boy" were anchor in the relay involving three other mules and their riders.

Mayor George Archer read a proclamation inaugurating Mule Express day and his wife hung the wreath of carrots and vegetables over "Nature Boy's" perspiring neck. Then a golden nail was driven into one of "Nature Boy's" shoes.

Public Meeting To Open College Fund Drive Here

The Washington Area Campaign for the United Negro College Fund will open with a public meeting at Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, May 26 at 8:30 p. m.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, and John L. Burling, campaign chairman, will speak.

This will be the fifth year the fund has made its appeal for funds to meet the gap between operating costs and income in Negro colleges. Thirty-two of the Nation's 36 private Negro colleges are grouped together under the fund's auspices for this purpose.

The District's quota is $40,000 of the national goal of $1,400,000.

Flynt Promoted To Education Post

Ralph C. M. Flynt, 9 Russell rd., Alexandria, Va., has been named executive assistant to the Commissioner of Education and director of the division of central services, the Federal Security Agency announced yesterday.

Flynt, an employe of the Office of Education since 1934, was promoted from assistant director. He succeeds Kenneth O. Warner, recently made director of the institutional resources survey staff of the national defense establishment.

Lane C. Ash of Philadelphia, Pa., chief of personnel relations and training for the Veterans Administration, was named to fill the vacancy created by Flynt's promotion.

Arlington Woman, 53, Hangs Self From Bed

An Arlington woman who hanged herself from the folded-up "Murphy bed" in her closet yesterday, was listed a suicide by County Coroner Dr. W. C. Welburn.

She was Mrs. Lilly T. Hutcheson, 53, whose body, suspended by electrical wire, was found at her apartment at 2007 Key blvd. Friday by her husband, William A. Hutcheson, 57.

A suicide note left in the apartment blamed 15 years of poor health for Mrs. Hutcheson's act.

Her death nearly duplicated that on Thursday of another middle-aged woman, Mrs. Verena M. Kidwell, 54, who hanged herself with a vacuum cleaner cord in the basement of her home, 3206 Morrison st. nw.

Hutcheson is an illumination engineer with the Army Institute of Pathology.

Police said they understood Mrs. Hutcheson had recently undergone an unsuccessful operation after 15 years of illness. Coroner Welburn said he did not know the nature of the illness.

Surviving Mrs. Hutcheson, in addition to her husband, are two sons, Charles E. Hutcheson, Clarksburg, W. Va., and Ernest L. Hutcheson, 2002 N. Troy st., Arlington. Three grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hutcheson will be held at 3 p. m., Monday, at the Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington, with burial in National Memorial Park Cemetery.

War Widow Picked For Academy Honor

Reelected

D. S. Walker Again Heads Navy Alumni

Donald S. Walker, vice president of Combustion Engineering Co., Inc., of New York, yesterday was reelected president of the United States Naval Academy Alumni Association.

Walker

Walker, who was graduated from the Academy in 1924 and later entered the U. S. Naval Reserve, is one of the few civilians to serve a second term in the history of the association.

The report listing achievements of his 1947-48 term included establishment of a Nation-wide placement service for all Naval, Marine and Wave officers in and out of service, and completion of the association's clubhouse headquarters, in Annapolis.

Officers Elected

Other officers whose election was announced following the association's board of trustees' spring meeting are:

H. McCoy Jones, of Washington, chairman of the United States Naval Academy Alumni Foundation and a consulting engineer here, vice president of the association's Eastern area; A. Arnold Brand, of Chicago, Ill., vice president for the Central area, and John Falge, of San Francisco, Calif., vice president for the Western area.

Rear Admiral Sinclair Gannon, USN (retired), of Annapolis, Md.; Rear Admiral Harold C. Train, USN (retired), of Annapolis, Md.; Vice Admiral Thomas C. Sprague, USN, of Washington, Navy Chief of Personnel, and Clyde W. King of San Francisco, Calif., were elected trustees at large by a world-wide vote of association members.

Robert Henderson of Los Angeles, Calif.; Norman O. Winkoop and Walter E. Ditmars, both of New York; Comdr. William F. Bullis, USNR, head of the Bullis Preparatory School in Silver Spring, Md., and Renwick S. McIver of Merion, Pa., as trustees elected in their local area to serve a one-year term.

Walker broke Navy Academy tradition with a speech this past week to the academy's June, 1948, graduating class. At that time, he invited class members and their guests to attend the association's open house party on June 1, at the alumni clubhouse in Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., May 22 (AP).—A 26-year-old war widow, Mrs. Katherine Wainwright Austin, was named today to reign as color girl, toast of the Navy, during June week at the Naval Academy.

She will officiate at one of the Nation's most sentimental ceremonies, the presentation of the colors in a graduation-eve parade of midshipmen.

She was the choice of Midshipman Frederick L. Nelson, 23, to be the fortieth academy color girl, an honor which debutantes and junior misses have yearned for since 1871.

Color girls who have blushed at the cheers of the midshipmen in ceremonies held on and off for 77 years usually have been sweethearts of the midshipmen who commanded the brigade's foremost company.

Mrs. Austin, a registered nurse from North Andover, Mass., is a sister of one of Nelson's buddies in the graduating class.

She is the widow of Lieut. Arthur Austin, Marine flier who died at Okinawa three years ago.

Midshipman Nelson from Alaska is commander of the Tenth Company, winner of the midshipmen's annual brigade flag competition for all-around excellence among 24 companies.

Nelson said he does not have a steady "drag" for Annapolis weekends and decided to ask the sister of one of his closest friends, Midshipman Robert E. Wainwright.

The brigade parade will be held June 3 on the eve of graduation day.

Mrs. Austin, a brunette, is the daughter of Mrs. Edith Wainwright of North Andover who will arrive here May 29 with Mrs. Frederick L. Nelson of Petersburg, Alaska, Midshipman Nelson's mother.

GWU to Award Diplomas To 1500 Students Wednesday

Fifteen hundred students from George Washington University this week will lead the parade of graduates receiving diplomas from universities in the Greater Washington area.

George Washington University commencement exercises will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Constitution Hall, climaxing three days of activities.

Baccalaureate services will be held at 8 tonight at National Cathedral. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, president of New Brunswick Theological Seminary and former minister of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will preach the sermon.

A tea honoring students who will receive awards will be given by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, at 4 p. m. Monday in the boardroom of the university library, and at 10 p. m. the graduates will be guests of the alumni association at a dance at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Truman will receive the graduating class at the White House at 3 p. m. Tuesday and Dr. and Mrs. Marvin will hold a reception for graduates and their parents at 8:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

Graduation exercises at American University will be held out of doors May 31 at 7:45 p. m. in the campus quadrangle, Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. nw.

Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, will deliver the commencement address. President Danial Marsh of Boston University will preach the baccalaureate sermon at 4 p. m. next Sunday in Metropolitan Memorial Church, adjoining the campus.

Maryland University with more than a thousand graduates will move commencement exercises from College Park to the Fifth Regiment Armory in Baltimore to accommodate the crowd. Graduation will be held June 5 at 10:30 a. m.

Catholic University will grant degrees to more than 700 students in exercises in the university gymnasium June 9 at 10:30 a. m. Fulton Oursler, senior editor of the Readers Digest, will be the speaker.

Jan Ciechanowski, former ambassador from Poland, will deliver, the commencement address at the Georgetown University graduation June 14 at 5 p. m. on the university campus. Degrees will be awarded 1046 students.

Graduation activities at Georgetown will begin June 12 with a baccalaureate mass June 13 at 10:30 a. m. in Dahlgren Chapel. A lawn party will be held at 5 p. m., and at 8:30 p. m. Tropaia exercises will be held for the first time since the war.

During the program prizes will be awarded to outstanding students and the Cohonoquroton Address, an annual speech given by a selected graduate, will be delivered.

Red Cross Girl Shot In Prisoner Exchange

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 22 (AP).—An International Red Cross employe, Florence Collins, from Switzerland, was wounded seriously today when fired on while making a Jewish-Arab prisoner exchange under an agreed truce.

Insect Allies Enter War on Jap Beetle

Montgomery County (Md.) officials this year are using two new allies in their war upon the Japanese beetles.

These allies are other bugs—the tithia moth and the milky white spore. Both kill the beetle grubs before the beetles hatch. The milky white spore, a minute, reproductive body, feeds on the grub in the ground. The tithia moth lays its eggs in the beetle grub, with fatal results to the grub.

In addition, county officials, the Farm Bureau, and most farmers are continuing their previous forms of attack—spraying and dusting the bugs. This year the county is using tractors with a mist blower instead of the sprayer. The mist blower uses far less water, which reduces the time spent filling the tanks.

Although the beetles have only been serious to farm crops for two years, last year it is estimated they caused more than a quarter of a million dollars damage to Montgomery County corn alone. They have been serious to garden plants and shrubs in the suburban area for about six years.

Almost as serious as the loss to corn has been the damage to pastures and meadows from the beetle grubs in the ground. They feed on the grass roots, weakening them so the grass pulls out of the ground when cattle feed on it.

The Government Bureau of Plant Industry is furnishing the county with milky white spore dust, and also the soil in which the spore has been raised. This has been found to be as valuable as the dust, particularly when scattered in pastures.

So far the war against the beetles, on which thousands of dollars have been spent, has been a losing one. Although last year it was estimated that 65 per cent of the beetles were killed, more are expected this year because each female lays from 300 to 400 eggs a season. But as with former wide infestations with insect pests, officials expect nature to furnish biological remedies in the form of insects that prey upon them. The moth and the spore are expected to drive off the beetles, or reduce it to a minor pest, eventually.

Wilson Heads Fund Group

Robert W. Wilson, executive assistant to the president, Potomac Electric Power Co., will head the United Community Services' budget committee.

Twenty-three others have been named to serve with Wilson, William J. McManus, chairman of the interim committee establishing the UCS, said in making the announcement.

The new budget committee already has been given authority to distribute funds received for Red Feather agencies through the annual Community Chest Federation campaign, McManus said.

Announcing that the former Washington Community Chest budget committee has been dissolved, McManus said the operation of the new budget committee is the first official function of either the Chest or the Council of Social Agencies to come under their successor, the UCS.

Named with Wilson to the UCS budget committee are:

Joseph Ball, Col. David S. Barry, USMC (ret.), Mrs. Henry T. Bodman, Everett J. Boothby, Col. Henry P. Erwin, W. W. Everett, jr., E. W. Fay, Karl Fenning, John Galvin, Frederick R. Gobbs, Mrs. Henry Gichner, Dr. Euphemia Haynes and Eugene R. Hubbard.

Also, Mark Lansburgh, Dr. Howard Long, Duane M. Paul, Mrs. George Petticord, F. Elton Rogers, Philip Schiff, Mrs. W. N. Streeter, Dr. Katherine Symmonds, Miss Dorothea Sullivan and Samuel Zibit.

1894 Central High Graduates Gather 25 Strong at Reunion

The Washington Post

THEY WENT TO CENTRAL HIGH—Three members of Central High School's graduating class of 1894 clasp hands at last night's reunion. They are (from left) Ralph S. Warfield, president; Mrs. Sally Mason Selke, secretary, and Rudolph B. Behrend, vice president

"Brecky co-ax, co-ax,
Brecky co-ax, co-ax,
Hairo, Cairo, wally-go,
Wally-go, wally-go-ax,
High School Central!"

Faintly, the strident old Central High cheer echoed—if only in memory—in the Council Room of the Statler Hotel last night.

Of course, the 18 women and 7 men of the Class of 1894 felt too dignified to roar out the cheer.

But Class President Ralph S. Warfield, patent attorney of 1613 Harvard st. nw., did repeat the cheer softly. And that seemed to lead his classmates on to conversational strolls down the lanes of memory.

It soon was an evening of "Remember when . . . ?"

Guest at the dinner was Mrs. Gertrude Jochum Collamer of 1245 Crittenden st. nw., former librarian at the school.

Those at the reunion, the first since graduation which was held jointly with Washington and Eastern High Schools, in old Convention Hall, 5th and K sts. nw., were:

Mrs. Juliette Wineld Weitzel, 2303 39th st. Mrs. Juliette Winfield Weitzel, 2303 39th st. Heaton, architect, 3041 Segewick st., nw.

Also Frank E. Eastman, manufacturer's representative, Falls Church, Va.; Mrs. Florence Behrend Stewart, 1442 Clifton st. nw.; Louis I. Doyle, accountant, 3725 Jocelyn st. nw.; Miss Elizabeth M. Dawes, retired schoolteacher, 4427 Q st. nw.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hints She'll Quit U. N. Post

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 22 (U.P.). Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, widow of the late President, hinted today that she may soon relinquish chairmanship of the United Nations Human Rights Commission.

She told an audience at Vassar College that the commission's work was now approaching the "legal" phase and indicated she believed leadership should be taken over by someone versed in international law.

Publicity Men To Meet Here For 4 Days

The third annual convention of the American Public Relations Association will start Monday at Leonard Hall, American University campus, and last four days.

Highlight will be an international public relations institute in which experts from the United States, Guatemala, the Netherlands, Britain, China, India, Turkey and other countries will discuss world relations and what can be done to improve them.

The institute will be held from 2 to 6 p. m. Monday. According to Charles T. Dockarty, executive director, this is the first time professional public relations men have tackled the problem of promoting better international relations.

Other events include presentation of awards for the outstanding public relations program of 1947, a film festival and exhibition of media and methods.

Blood Bank Plan Of Red Cross Bolted

New York, May 22 (AP).—The New York State Medical Society has set up its own program on blood donors and blood banks and is opposed to the American Red Cross free-blood-for-all plan.

The society ended its 142d annual meeting yesterday, attended by more than 5000 physicians.

One resolution said "there has been a feeling in the medical profession that the control and collection of blood and blood elements is gradually being taken out of the hands of the medical profession."

The society represents more than 22,000 physicians in the State.

Under the Red Cross program, blood is donated by the public. Anyone needing blood or plasma gets it free. The Red Cross bears the cost.

The society wants banks decentralized and kept under control of physicians in each county.

A society resolution said that "free service for all economic levels of the population is not compatible with established patterns of American life." The society urged that patients, when financially able, be required to pay for blood bank services.

Must Have Full Accord, McIntire Declares

Dr. Ross T. McIntire, director of the national blood program of the American Red Cross, said here last night he was awaiting details of the New York action.

"The national program," Dr. McIntire said, "is based on a proposition of community need, and unless the county medical societies are in complete accord we make no effort to set up services there."

In Rochester, said Dr. McIntire, the city and 11 surrounding counties are being serviced by the Red Cross plan "in complete cooperation with the medical societies involved." The Red Cross, he said, "could not possibly consider" charging for the blood it receives free from volunteers.

Press Club, B&O Singers Harmonize

By Paul Hume

Get a bunch of railroaders and a crowd of press men together to do a little singing and you have quite an evening.

Last night the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club and the National Press Club Chorus sang a joint concert in the Press Club Auditorium. James Allen Dash directed the B. & O. men and Reinald Werrenrath led the local talent.

The program was drawn from what Dash described correctly as "regular glee club repertoire". Nothing heavy, plenty of harmony, lots of chances for fortissimo, but a fine mixture of real shading. An audience which filled every seat seemed happy at all they heard and was presented with encores for its applause.

Gertrude Smallwood Mockbee and Charlotte Reid accompanied the Washington and Baltimore singers respectively and with that unique sense of timing and support men's choruses require.

Werrenrath, for three seasons a Metropolitan Opera baritone, sang a Verdi aria and a Schumann song in his accustomed manner. Dorothy Simmons, soprano, joined the combined choruses in Schubert's "Omnipotence." She should not have done so for she is prepared neither vocally nor musically for the demands of this majestic song. Such treatment will make that increasing vibrato in her voice impossible to eliminate. Her teacher should give her these comments too.

Aside from the Schubert song's failure to stir the excitement it deserves, the concert was a complete and rousing success.

X-Ray Survey Lacks 200,000 To Meet Goal

With an estimated 200,000 persons still to be examined, leaders of the Washington Chest X-Ray Survey yesterday expressed hope their campaign to uncover tuberculosis would meet its goal by closing day, June 15.

The campaign, which began here January 13, seeks to X-ray the chests of some 600,000 Washingtnoians, 15 years of age or older. By last night, the total number of persons X-rayed had passed 400,000.

"It's strictly up to the public, now," declared William E. Leahy, general chairman fo the anti-tuberculosis campaign. "We are locating the X-ray machines for the greatest convenience of the greatest number of residents. We'll reach our goal if those who haven't been examined will make use of the service."

Sponsored by the D. C. Health Department, the U. S. Public Service and the D. C. Tuberculosis Association, the city-wide survey seeks to eliminate tuberculosis as a continuing threat to community health. Of the 400,000 already X-rayed here, less than 13,000 have been advised to report for more thorough examinations at Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw.

Only a small minority of those X-rayed a second time at the "retake" clinic are found to have tubercular lung infection, survey specialists reported.

The service is free, including up to two years of medical supervision and advice, when necessary, in newly discovered active cases of the disease.

You can drop in for a free confidential chest X-ray at any of the following locations:

Mother's Cigarette Burns Baby

A 19-months-old baby girl burned the cornea of her eye when she walked into a burning cigarette held by her mother last week.

She was one of 105 persons treated at local hospitals during the week for home accident injuries, the District Red Cross Prevention Service reported yesterday.

An infant who suffocated, an adult who set his bed afire with a cigarette and an aged woman, who fell out of bed, were listed as fatalities.

A baby boy, who crawled from his crib onto a dresser and fell, suffering a possible broken leg, and a young man who accidentally shot himself in the thigh while taking a gun from his car, were included in the report of those injured.

So far this year, 114 deaths and 2043 injuries from home accidents have been reported in the District, the Red Cross stated.

Canadian Ring For Baby Export Is Investigated

OTTAWA, May 22 (AP).—A ring selling babies for export to the United States is under investigation in Canada.

At St. John, Deputy Police Chief P. F. Biddiscombe said a baby market international in scope is operating. And at Fredericton, provincial Premier J. B. McNair disclosed he has asked Canada's minister for external affairs, Louis S. St. Laurent, to help. Royal Canadian Mounted Police are already aiding.

The baby market allegedly operates with regular "solicitors" and front men. Runners contacted unwed mothers and arranged for adoptions through a woman who posed as a relative. Most New Brunswick babies were reported "sold" into New Jersey and New York areas at prices up to $1500 with slight consideration for the welfare of the child, parents or foster parents.

One case was reported where a 15-year-old girl was being sent to the United States.

Firemen Go to Fire, Which Comes to Them

Philadelphia, May 22 (AP).—Firemen, answering a telephone alarm today rushed to a northeast Philadelphia intersection.

They found no fire.

Then three railroad men walked up.

"Don't get impatient, fellows," one of the railroaders said. "Your fire will be along in a minute."

The firemen waited. A Pennsylvania Railroad locomotive came along, pushing a blazing boxcar onto a siding. The firemen went to work.

Federal Pay Boost Seen Languishing For Want of Leader

A little aggressive leadership at this point by either the President or GOP congressional bigwigs could cinch a satisfactory pay raise for Federal workers.

That needed leadership could be supplied this week when House Speaker Martin and Senator Taft, the Senate GOP leader, hold their long-promised meeting to discuss the pay and fiscal problems. However, there is good reason to believe that the two men already have talked over the matter informally.

But the President is reliably reported to have rejected a proposal that he enter the pay fight with an indorsement of specific increases. His advisers have convinced him a hands-off policy is the best strategy and the best politics. His position leaves the matter up to the GOP Congress.

The delay by Congress in acting on the pay bills has inspired all sorts of rumors. Federal employes are bewildered and confused by the many now-you-have-it-now-you-don't stories and statements. Unfortunately, the plain economics—the merits—of the pay bills appear to have been lost in the jockeying of the leaders for political positions.

In a sentence, private employes have been given a far larger percentage wage increase since prewar 1939 than Federal workers. For example:

The record shows that employes in the coal industry have been given a 218 per cent increase in that period; apparel and finished textiles, 120 per cent; building construction, 119 per cent; electrical machinery, 103 per cent; steel, 102 per cent; printing and publishing, 93 per cent; autos, tires and tubes, 88 per cent, and so on.

What has the Federal worker received in this same period? Not counting promotions which are not computed in the above figures, he has received an average increase of approximately 32 per cent. The cost of living in the same period has shot up about 67 per cent. These are the plain facts of the problem. In other words, the Federal worker needs a sizable increase to restore his 1939 buying power.

One of the unhappy developments on Capitol Hill is to play off postal workers against the so-called Classification Act employes. It's an open secret that many congressional leaders—both Democratic and Republican—would prefer to vote postal employes a good pay raise and then ignore the rest of the Federal force. Repeatedly, the postal employe is pointed to as Uncle Sam's "forgotten man"; that other Federal workers have the Government gravy.

The fact is, of course, that postal employes have received a bit better deal since 1939 than the 800,000 Classification Act people. Roughly, postal employes have received an average wage boost of $800 compared to around $725 for Classification people. Both groups have been given two pay raises.

But the kindly congressional feeling toward the postal employe has its good points, too—and the Classification employe stands to benefit from it. Here's why:

The postal employe is well organized and he's respected on Captol Hill. He's the big push behind the pay bills. If a general pay raise bill is enacted, the disorganized Classification Act employe will owe his postal colleague a debt of thanks. The postal employe and his representatives have missed few bets to speed action on the pay legislation. On the other hand, the Classification people have few strong voices on Captol Hill.

It's more or less taken for granted that any general pay bill will provide a larger increase for postal workers for the very simple reason he has "sold" his case to Congress.

But if Congress does vote the postal employe a better pay raise, it will be saying, in effect, to the Classification Act employe: "Organization pays off. Join a good union and your case will be given more consideration."

Despite the rush toward adjournment, it's a 10-to-1 bet that a general pay raise bill will be approved by the Congress and that it will be signed into law. It's difficult to see how the GOP leaders, despite their stalling and feet-dragging, can renege on their promise to pass a pay bill.

The real argument is over the amount of the increases and the form of the bill. The amounts will be fixed, it appears, by Taft and Martin. The bill's form must be argued out between the Senate and House committees.

At the joint meeting last Friday on the pay raise subcommittees, each Senator present, it was learned, spoke up in support of two vital provisions in the Senate bill which are:

1. Revision of the Classification Act, and (2) lifting of the $10,000 ceiling on Classification Act salaries and pay raises for Cabinet members and other Federal officials.

As to amounts, the one plan known to have been discussed in secret conferences would give postal employes a flat $600 each, and an average of $500 to the Classification Act people.

Cab Driver Rearrested When Man He Hit Dies

$75 Fine Imposed For Hit-and-Run Injury March 17 Of Pedestrian, 62

D. C. traffic deaths, 1948...... 32
Deaths this date last year..... 32
Total traffic deaths, 1947...... 72

A 62-year-old man, critically injured when struck March 7, by a taxicab which failed to stop, died shortly before midnight Friday.

The District's thirty-second traffic fatality, the victim was Arno Otto Teumer, a waiter at the Hotel Raleigh, who lived at 2831 27th st. nw.

A suspect arrested five days after the accident was identified as Ernest F. Lee, 24, of 4521 Fairfield dr., Bethesda, Md.

He was fined $75 in Municipal Court for leaving after colliding and failing to give full time and attention to his driving May 6. He was rearrested yesterday and released under $500 bond for his appearance at a coroner's inquest Monday at 11:30 a. m.

The light fine was imposed by Judge Nadine Gallagher after Lee pleaded guilty to the hit-and-run charge and nolo contendere to the charge of failing to give full time and attention.

She explained later that she had not been informed as to the seriousness of the victim's condition. Teumer at the time was in St. Elizabeth's Hospital with two compound fractures of the left leg and a skull fracture. He was transferred there from Gallinger Hospital. Lee's cab struck him at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Lee was arrested five days after the accident.

Judge Gallagher last night refused to comment on Teumer's death.

"I like to be cooperative but I decline to discuss any past cases," the jurist said with finality.

A native of Germany, Teumer came to this country in 1910 and settled in Newark, N. J. A resident of Washington since 1933, he was employed in the dining room of the Hotel Raleigh at the time of the accident.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Martha Teumer of the 27th st. address, and two brothers, Max and Gido, and three sisters, Emmy, Lydia and Gertrude, all of whom live in Germany.

Seven persons were injured, two seriously, in traffic accidents yesterday and late Friday.

Susan B. Swartz, 37, of 3816 24th st. ne., was admitted to Gallinger Hospital with a possible skull fracture after she was struck by an auto when she stepped from a streetcar loading platform at Rhode Island and S. Dak. Aves. ne. Friday. Police listed the driver of the car as Robert S. Gray, 26, of Morristown, N. J.

Also injured when he stepped from a streetcar loading platform at 14th and Belmont sts. nw. was Garnet A. Owens, 52, of 1446 Belmont st. nw., who was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a possible skull fracture. Police said he was struck by a taxicab operated by Robert L. Carnes, 27, of 415 3d st. nw.

William J. Copen, jr., 20, of 4305 30th st., Mount Rainier, Md., suffered a possible concussion when the auto he was driving collided at 9th and F sts. nw. with another auto, operated by George Sóter, 33, of 1122 Penn st. ne., early yesterday morning. Copen was admitted to Casualty Hospital in undetermined condition.

Three persons were injured when the car in which they were riding missed a sharp turn on Annapolis rd., just north of Ardmore rd., skidded 177 feet, broke off a telephone pole and skidded another 30 feet.

The driver of the car, William Janof, 21, a printer, of 1141 3rd st. ne., who suffered cuts and bruises, was charged with reckless driving. He will appear in Hyattsville police court Monday.

His brother, Robert Janof, 19, received a fractured jaw and face lacerations, while Joseph Massey, 18, of 818 8th st. ne., suffered a fractured collarbone.

Suspected Peeping Tom Is Wounded

JAMES DUGGINS,

A 27-year-old prowler suspect was in serious condition in Gallinger Hospital yesterday, felled by one of four shots by a former expert Army rifleman.

Charged with housebreaking and under police guard was Lucius Livingston, 110 M st. nw., shot down as he attempted to break into a first-floor apartment at 44 New York ave. nw., according to police.

His captor, James Duggins, 26, second-floor resident at the New York avenue address, told police Livingston attempted to escape after ordered to halt. He said he caught the man in the rear alley after a nightly check for a Peeping Tom suspect who had plagued the neighborhood for some time.

Duggins apologized for his "poor shooting." Holder of expert medals for marksmanship with the rifle, carbine and machine-gun in military service, he said he couldn't understand the "misses" until he checked by daylight.

"Two of the shots," he declared, "were intercepted by a narrow rail of the fire-escape between me and my target."

Duggins said he was retiring about 10:30 p. m. Friday, when he peered out his bedroom window "to see if the Peeping Tom was around." Seeing a man in the alley, he told his wife, Dora, 23, to call police. He grabbed up his .22-caliber automatic rifle, stepped out on the fire-escape landing, and ordered the suspect to surrender.

Instead, he said, the man attempted to flee into the apartment of Michael J. Dunningan, who lives below the Duggins. Duggins fired after the suspect had broken the glass of the apartment door. One bullet tore through Livingston's lower abdomen, physicians said.

Duggins is employed at the Guild Photographers, 915 19th st. nw.

Publication Sues Stores, Association

Monthly Citizen Charges Boycott By Merchants Cut Its Advertising

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Inc., and four department stores here were charged with illegal restraint of trade in a $225,000 civil suit filed yesterday in District Court.

The action was brought by the District of Columbia Citizen Publishing Co., Inc., and its president, Paul P. Walsh, 1462 Chapin st. nw. The company prints the District of Columbia Citizen, official organ of the Federation of Citizens Associations here.

The newspaper, published once a month, claims in the suit that the Merchants and Manufacturers Association has "blacklisted and boycotted" the publication. As a result, the numerous members of the association refuse to advertise in the Citizen, it is said.

The stores named as defendants are The Hecht Co., S. Kann Sons Co., Woodward & Lothrop, Inc., and Young Men's Shop, Inc. At least 19 other large retail merchants here have also refused to use the Citizen as an advertising medium, it is averred.

Edward D. Shaw, executive secretary of the merchants association, refused to comment on the suit, but said: "We do not forbid our members to advertise in any publication. Our Committee on Donations and Advertising does make recommendations. But the members don't have to abide by the recommendations."

In response to a question, he said that no punitive action would be taken against anyone who advertised in other than "recommended" publications.

According to the suit, the Citizen was founded in March, 1947, and has reached a circulation of more than 36,000 a month.

The suit says various stores have consulted with the donations and advertising committee and then refused to place advertising in the Citizen. "Such refusals of approval of the District of Columbir Citizen as a medium for newspaper advertising and newspaper information on merchandise available for purchase by the public, have been arbitrary, capricious, and for the purpose of injuring and destroying the competition of said newspaper and the potential competition of said newspaper with other publications and some in which some of the defendants and coconspirators have a financial interest," the suit states.

The action was filed under the Sherman Antitrust Act and the Clayton Act. Attorneys for the Citizen and Walsh are Eugene R. Ditto and Harold L. Schilz.

Dr. Rossiter, Gallinger Staff Chief, to Retire

Ex-Surgeon General Of Navy Has Served Hospital Since 1939

Dr. Percival S. Rossiter, chief of staff at Gallinger Hospital, will retire September 1, it was announced last night.

Dr. Rossiter

Dr. Rossiter, who retired as Surgeon General of the Navy with the rank of rear admiral before assuming the District post in 1939, is now 74, four years over the mandatory retirement age at George Washington University.

G. W. and Georgetown University jointly pay the salary of the Gallinger chief of staff and their medical school officials will nominate a successor, Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the G. W. medical school, said.

Dr. Bloedorn, who preceded Dr. Rossiter in the Gallinger post, praised the official for his "extremely valuable service which was most eminently satisfactory." He said the retirement had been delayed in the past few years because Dr. Rossiter was "indispensable."

Rev. Paul A. McNally, S. J., dean of Georgetown University Medical School and Regent of the university's medical center, said:

"Dr. Rossiter has made a magnificent contribution to the education of Georgetown men at Gallinger Hospital. The university is deeply appreciative of this substantial contribution."

The retiring official was in the Navy for 35 years after graduating from the University of Maryland in 1895. He was born in Shepardstown, W. Va.

Baltimore, May 22 (AP).—A charter bus on a trip to take a group of young girl scouts to the Washington zoo crashed into a trolley pole in East Baltimore today. Five children and two of their leaders suffered minor injuries.

Choked by String

Baby's Death Accident, Ruling Says

The death of a 14-month-old baby found strangled by a rattle string was ruled accidental by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday.

Daniel Andrew Hewat, son of Mrs. Mildred Hewat Ennis, of 826 N. Randolph st., Arlington, was found unconscious in a play pen where he had been placed with another baby at a nursing home, 2916 Vista st. ne.

He was found, the rattle string pulled taut in an apparently accidental slipknot, by a maid, Mrs. Valentine Reed, 30, of 2113 I st. ne., about 6:45 p. m., Friday.

Mrs. Reed called the director of the home, Mrs. Myrtle Byrum, who cut the string, then called a physician and police. Fire Rescue Squad No. 2 was unable to revive the child with a pulmotor.

Relief Client Use of Taxis Challenged

Welfare Officials Want Information Before Probing

Charges that relief clients traveled in taxicabs to pick up welfare checks were challenged yesterday by two District welfare officials.

Commenting on the charges made by Kimball Sanborn of the Senate District Appropriations Subcommittee staff Friday, Edgar Morris, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, said he would immediately investigate if specific information was furnished.

Sanborn said last night that he did not take down the names and addresses of the cab-conveyed relief recipients, but "there was no doubt that they were getting welfare checks. We watched them enter and come out, check in hand," he declared. Sanborn scoffed at reports that some of the persons may have been department employes, rather than clients. He indicated additional spot checks will be made at fund distribution days.

Acting Welfare Director Raymond F. Clapp also challenged Sanborn's charge that four of every 10 persons who called for their checks arrived in cabs. He said that most relief checks are mailed and pointed out that public assistance grants do not include cab fares.

Federal Workers' Help Sought by Salvation Army

A hundred thousand Government workers have received pledge cards for donations to the Salvation Army's drive for a $350,000 rebuilding fund here, it was reported yesterday.

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, chairman for the Federal division, said that key men in 40 departments and agencies are aiding the drive.

No official tabulation of funds raised has yet been made. The drive closes June 17.

General Cox Backs Nevitt In Battle Of Colonels

Mann Is Rebuffed In His Claim of Interim Command Of National Guard

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, back in town yesterday after a European business trip of a month, flatly declared that he had left Col. Peyton G. Nevitt in command of the D. C. National Guard during his absence.

Despite the "Battle of the Colonels" which developed while he was away, there was never any question in his mind as to who was commanding the local outfit.

Colonel Nevitt, despite the contrary claims of Col. Le Roy S. Mann, has authority to issue orders whenever necessary while he is out of the city, said the commanding general of the local Guard.

Some days ago, Colonel Nevitt's authority was challenged by Colonel Mann, who asserted he should be in command because, he explained, he outranks the Adjutant General by the seniority of the date of his rank.

A letter he wrote to Nevitt directing him to recognize him as commander brought a quick general order to the contrary. Any orders issued by anyone other than Nevitt, D. C. Guardsmen were told by Nevitt, were illegal and of no effect.

Mann thereupon appealed to the White House, filing charges against Nevitt, and Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, is expected to ask General Cox for a report on the whole battle.

"You may be sure I will get into this on Monday," General Cox told The Washington Post after reading over newspaper clippings on the Battle of the Colonels.

Mannikin Stripper Caught Under Bed Given Fine or Jail

Edward T. Hill, 27, who police said they saw busily undressing mannikins in a show window, was given a $100 fine or 120 days in jail yesterday for unlawful entry and petty larceny.

Hill, who lives at 1800 7th st. nw., was sentenced in Municipal Court. Police said they found him early Friday in the window display of the Cavalier Men's Shop, 1128 7th st. nw.

They said that when he darted up a hallway, Police Pvt. L. R. Harris fired one shot after calling on him to halt. The shot missed when Hill stumbled, Harris told reporters.

Police said they arrested Hill by hauling him from under the bed of a sleeping man on the third floor above the men's shop.

Mount Vernon Library Gets Washington's Weather Comment

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A small leather-bound book crammed with neatly written comments on the weather has been added to the library of manuscripts at Mount Vernon.

The volume is the journal of George Washington for the year 1797. To his daily comment on the elements Washington added terse factual acounts of how he spent his time.

On February 22 he briefly noted: "Went in the evening to an elegant entertainment given on my birth night."

Worth Bailey, Mount Vernon research associate, said that other manuscripts at Mount Vernon show that Washington preferred to mark his anniversaries on February 11, the date of his birth before revision of the calendar, but that official celebrations were held on the 22d.

The journal was among "valuable relics" acquired through gift, loan and purchase during the past year, noted by the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association at their eighty-second grand council held at Mount Vernon last week.

To its collection of 60 volumes from the library of the First President the association added a fine calf-bound edition of "The Poems of Robert Burns."

Washington signed his name in large bold script at the top of the title page and placed his bookplate inside the front cover.

A covered cup and saucer, part of the "States China" brought from China and presented to Martha Washington by Andreas Everardus Van Braam Houchgeest, a Pennsylvania merchant, was given to the association to display with the dinner plate and soup plate it already owns from the set.

The bluish-white china is ornately decorated with the initials MW in the center surrounded by a burst of gold. The border is a chain of 15 links with the name of a State within each link.

Already on display in the music room of the mansion is a mahogany card table inlaid with maple. It returns to Mount Vernon after an absence of 146 years. The table was purchased at the Mount Vernon sale following the death of Martha Washington in 1802.

Among gifts to the association are a gold locket containing strands of hair of Washington and President Zachary Taylor and a portrait of Washington mounted in wax.

The Washington lock is of a sandy gray and Bailey believes it was snipped late in life.

The portrait in wax was preserved by the family of Samuel Collamer of Vermont who served under Washington at West Point and presented to the association.

Other acquisitions are a cup and saucer of white and gold Sevres china which belonged to the Washingtons, two books, owned by Nelly Custis, granddaughter of Mrs. Washington, silver salt dishes and a fragment of a silk dress, said to have been worn by Mrs. Washington.

Area News in Brief

Police Chase Ends When Car Hits Pole

A 3-and-a-½-mile chase after an autoist at 70 to 90 miles an hour on the outskirts of Washington was reported by police here yesterday.

The chase ended when the automobile went out of control and crashed into a telegraph pole near Kenilworth ave. and 48th st., shortly before 2 a. m.

Taken to Prince Georges General Hospital were the occupants of the automobile, identified as Thomas Keeting, 20, of 3401 Bellevue ave., Cheverly, Md.; Donald Staples, 18, of Decatur Heights, Md., and Reginald Nearing, 16, of Cheverly, Md.

According to police, Keeting, the son of Alden T. Keeting, vice president of the Yellow Cab Co., was the driver, and escaped with minor injuries. Staples suffered a fractured shoulder. Nearing has a broken nose.

No charges were placed yesterday against the youths.

Keeting's 1947 automobile was spotted, police reported, by Police Motorcycle Pvts. E. L. Cave and Francis Raymond near South Dakota ave., and Bladensburg rd. They gave chase out Bladensburg rd., onto the Defense Highway via the Peace Cross. When the car crashed, it was demolished, it was said.

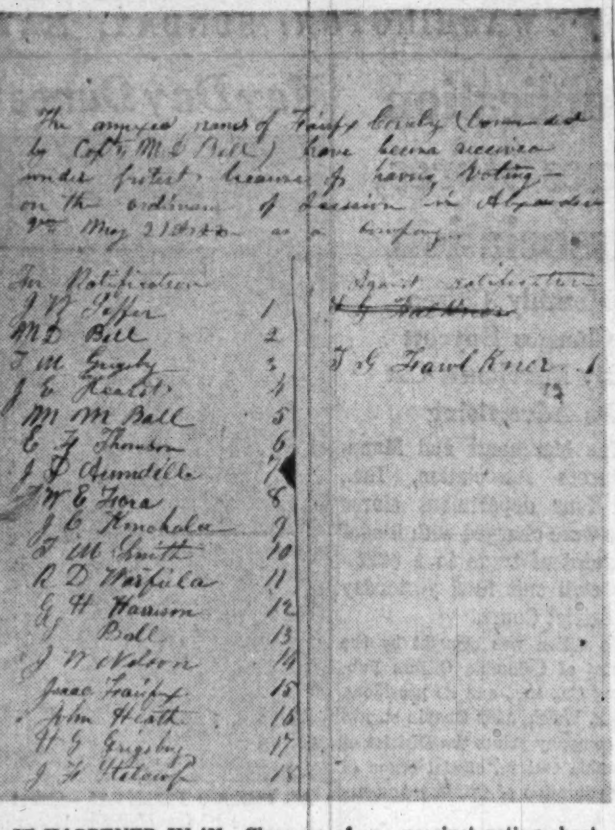
Mr. Daly was born in Washington September 24, 1861, and lived here all his life. A former District plumbing inspector, he had his own plumbing business for 40 years at 1724 15th st. nw. No immediate relatives survive.

Most Important Fairfax Vote Was Taken 87 Years Ago



The annexed names of Fairfax County (commanded by Cap't M. D. Ball) have been received under protest because of having voting on the ordinance of secession in Alexandria

IT HAPPENED IN '61—Close up of one precinct voting sheet in the Fairfax County election on the issue of secession May 23, 1861. This page, which is one of two, is the vote of a portion of a group of 28 men who had voted in Alexandria on the same issue two days earlier and had then gone to Fairfax to try it again

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Eighty-seven years ago today (May 23, 1861) Fairfax County voters went to the polls to help decide the most solemn question ever put to popular vote.

The question, which had been drafted by a State convention in Richmond: Should Virginia secede from the Union? By day's end, 1231 voters had decided she should, by a vote of 942 to 289.

The records of the election were recently discovered in a package of long forgotten and otherwise routine court papers by a researcher tracing family histories.

Nothing like them could be produced today. The secret ballot had not come into use, and the practice was for an election official to write the voter's name under one of two columns headed "for" and "against."

The result was to give not only a tally of the vote and a permanent record of who voted which way, but also an indication of the high feeling surrounding the election.

In a sense, the Fairfax election was an anticlimax. The convention had convened originally in February to act on the question of secession. At first, a Union majority held sway. But Lincoln's attempt to hold Fort Sumter and his action of calling up 75,000 volunteers on April 15, the day after its surrender, turned the tide.

The convention, by an 88 to 55 vote, decided on April 17 to put the question to the people. But the State was actually placed under Confederate orders before the verdict was in.

Still, the Fairfax election has significance, because with the exception of Alexandria County, it was the closest Virginia community to Washington.

No records are available on the number of qualified voters at the time. The county's population was about 12,000. Taking into consideration the fact that women did not vote it seems probable that 1231 was not far from the total of eligible voters.

Union supporters carried 3 of the 15 precincts. These were Lewinsville, which was close to Washington; Accotink, which had a large Quaker population, and Lydeckers.

The vote for secession was unanimous in four precincts—Ross', Bailiss,' Centreville and West End. However, five voters in Bailiss' had a hard job deciding. They had originally voted for the Union, but the record shows their names heavily stricken out and a notation by an election official: "By the desire of the voters of rejection (rejection of secession) their votes have been changed."

Whether they were motivated by their consciences or by public opinion is not clear. But the action seems to show the feeling of the election official.

One novel form of stuffing the ballot box showed up. A group of 28 men, who voted 27 to 1 for secession, were found to have voted in a similar election in Alexandria two days earlier. Their vote was "received under protest."

The next day, Union troops occupied Robert E. Lee's home in what is now Arlington. On June 1, Capt John Q. Marr, first man to die in action in the war, was killed during a skirmish with Union troops 100 yards from Fairfax Courthouse.

Clerk of the Court Thomas P. Chapman, jr., hastens to point out that the record is not a true indication of how men stood after war came. He had to reassure several embarrassed Daughters of the Confederacy that their granfathers became good Southerners when the shooting started.

Joseph C. Clark

Joseph Claypole Clark, 89, a retired painter, died Friday at his home, 4804 Kansas ave. nw. A native of Mount Holly, N. J., where he attended school, Mr. Clark had lived in Washington intermittently for 41 years, and for the past six years had lived with his daughter, Mrs. Helen Q. Jackson, at the Kansas ave. address.

He had spent most of his life in Philadelphia, where he was a painter.

The body will be at the Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw., until 1 p. m. Monday. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Webster st. and Rock Creek Church rd. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Besides Mrs. Jackson, he leaves another daughter, Mrs. Louise H. Gallaher of Falls Church, Va., a son, Lieut. Col. Albert G. Clark, USA of Washington, and a brother Arthur D. Clark of Philadelphia.

Fairfax Police Still Lack Clews In Alleged Rape

Fairfax police yesterday still lacked conclusive evidence of a suspect in the story of rape or attempted rape told by an 11-year-old Fall Church girl.

The girl told detectives she was walking home from a friend's house Wednesday night when a masked man carrying a red-handled pistol grabbed her, tied her hands, and tried to rape her.

Police admitted yesterday they had not yet found substantial proof the attack occurred. The girl's family doctor said he could not state definitely from his examination whether the child had been raped. In the Saturday edition of The Washington Post, the word "not" was inadvertantly omitted in quoting the doctor that the girl apparently was not raped.

George Polk

Athens, May 22 (AP). — Funeral services were held at the Anglican Church today for George Polk, CBS correspondent whose body was found in Salonika Bay last Sunday. Burial was in an Athens cemetery.

Attending the services were U. S. Charge d'Affaires Karl Rankin and four Greek Cabinet officials—Minister of Public Order Constantine Rentis, Minister of Justice George Melas, Minister Without Portfolio Dimitrios Mavrogordato and Michael Alianos, Press Minister.

Despite investigation, both here and in Salonika, police have not announced any progress in determining who killed Polk.

Gen. George Tsalakoglou

Athens, May 22 (AP). — Gen. George Tsalakoglou, first Greek Premier under the Nazi occupation, died today at a military hospital.

Tsalakoglou distinguished himself in the Italian campaign but later signed an unauthorzed truce with the Germans. Immediately afterward he became Premier.

After Greece's liberation he was sentenced to execution, but the penalty was not inficted because he was ill of leukemia, which caused his death.

Col. Arthur K. Evans

Atlanta, May 22 (AP). — Col. Arthur Kelly Evans of Hot Springs, Va., died in a private hospital yesterday. Funeral services will be held Sunday. Evans was formerly of Toronto, Canada.

Col. Ralston, World War I Hero, Is Dead

Montreal, May 22 (U.P.).—Col. James Ralston, 67, Canada's wartime Defense Minister, died of heart disease early today.

Ralston, a World War I hero, was twice Minister of Defense in the Mackenzie King government. His first appointment was in 1926 and his second in 1940.

Ralston also was a member of the House of Commons and served as Finance Minister. He represented Canada at the London Naval Conference.

Mrs. Natalie H. Zirkle

Funeral services for Mrs. Natalie H. Zirkle, 68, of 1450 Clifton st. nw., who died Friday at Garfield Hospital, will be held Monday at 11 a. m. at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Staunton, Va.

Mrs. Zirkle had suffered a stroke last Monday at her home.

A native of Staunton, she came to Washington as the bride of the late Frank L. Zirkle. For many years she was an active member of the Central Presbyterian Church, American Red Cross, Columbia Heights Citizens Association and the Mary Baldwin College Alumni Association.

She is survived by several cousins, including Miss Lena Ralston, of the Clifton street address.

Adm. Schulten Dies; Retired Here in 1947

Rear Admiral Leo Byron Schulten USN (retired), 51, who was assistant chief of the maintenance division of the office of the Chief of Naval Operations here prior to his retirement in January, 1947, died Friday at St. Mary's Hospital in Jefferson City, Mo.

The Associated Press reported Admiral Schulten suffered a cerebral hemorrhage on Wednesday.

A native of East Helena, Mont., Admiral Schulten was born in 1896. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1902. He retired from active duty in 1947 on his own request, after serving from October, 1944, in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.

Admiral Schulten received three Legion of Merit awards and the Croix de Guerre. He served as commanding officer of the Eighth Amphibious Force with transport duty and assault unit command prior to his 1944 appointment.

He had also been commanding officer of the USS Dorothy Lee Dix and in 1942 was navigation officer and executive of the battleship Pennsylvania.

Admiral Schulten is survived by his wife, Mrs. Martha Luther Schulten and his 4-year-old son, Leo, jr., both of Jefferson City, and a sister, Mrs. Theresa C. Beech, of Oxnaide, Calif.

Funeral services will be held in Jefferson City, with burial in Arlington Cemetery Wednesday with full naval honors. Classmates and friends will be pallbearers and a Navy Catholic chaplain will officiate. Time of service has not yet been announced.

J. J. Bradley, World War I General, Dies

Detroit, May 22 (AP).—Brig. Gen. John Jewsbury Bradley (retired), hero of the first World War, died here last night at the age of 79.

Bradley, an 1891 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, served as a brigadier general on the staff of the Eighty-second Division in 1917-18.

His decorations included the distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star and Purple Heart, in addition to French, British and Italian honors.

Retired in 1929, he practiced law in New York, where he was a trustee of the Disabled American Veterans service foundation. He was here visiting relatives.

His son, Brig. Gen. Joseph Sladen Bradley, commands Army forces on Guam. Other survivors include a daughter, Mrs. John S. King of Ann Arbor.

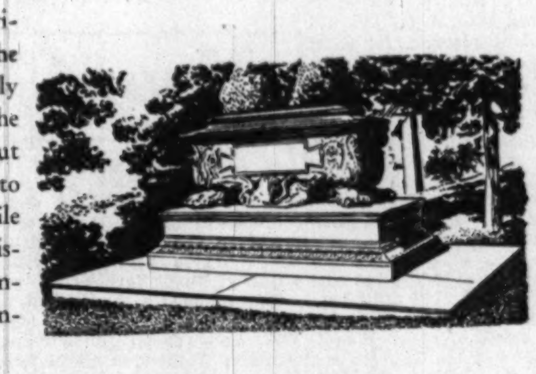
Washington's Most Beautiful
Rock Creek Cemetery
NON-SECTARIAN NON-SPECULATIVE

Have you given serious thought to the matter of a family cemetery lot? the time to think about it, to talk about it, to act—is now, while you are able to discuss the subject calmly and without strained emotions.



Within the peaceful sanctuary of Rock Creek Cemetery, there are many attractive lots available. This centuries old "Glebe" has been enlarged to provide a spot safe from encroachment in the midst of busy Washington where prices are still reasonable.

Come with us on a drive along its winding roads. You will be deeply impressed by the well-balanced landscaping which provides a background for the beautiful monuments. More than any other, Rock Creek Cemetery is noted for monuments designed and executed by world renowned artists, and considered by them to be their masterpieces. Here, you will be imbued with a sense of peace and composure. Perhaps you will be inspired to make inquiries about available lots. The office is open every day for your convenience.

VISITING HOURS: 9 A.M. to sundown daily and Sunday
OFFICE HOURS: Sundays and Holidays, 9 to 12.

Experimental Group Studying Government

23 Attending 'Washington Semester' at A. U.

By Elsie Carper

OUT on the campus of American University 23 young men and omen from six colleges are parcipating in an educational exeriment called "Washington emester."

American University President aul F. Douglass considers the xperiment such a success that ext year it will be expanded to nclude six additional colleges.

The 23 students, housed in forer Wave officer quarters on land djoining the school, have been ngaged since February in indeendent study on some phase of overnment.

Three of the students spent two eeks in the office of Representaive J. Caleb Boggs (R., Dela.) reparing a report on operations f a freshman Congressman. Another working with the House Un-American Activities Committee as compiled a paper on "Comunist Infiltration in the United tates."

Others have examined congresional committees, the Foreign ervice and various executive ranches of the Government.

The students gather all of their aterial first-hand. The Houses f Congress, the Supreme Court nd other Government buildings re their classrooms. Participatng students are undergraduates. ost of them are juniors. Genrally such freedom to study does ot come until graduate school.

Herbert Wood, teacher of political cience and coordinator for the "Washington Semester" program, aid that some of the papers subitted compare favorably with a aster's degree thesis.

The students spend six hours a eek attending American Uniersity classes. All are enrolled n a semester on "American Proserity in the World Economy" hich deals with the Marshall Plan and its relation to internaioinal economic and social probems.

They also attend special lecures. They visited the office of Representative Fred A. Hartley, r. (R., N. J.), for a special briefing on the Taft-Hartley Act. Mariner S. Eccles, director of the Federal Reserve Board, lectured on inflation. The remainder of he time the students are on their own.

A group of students participating in the "Washington Semester" program at American University gather on the lawn for informal discussion with Herbert Wood, political science teacher at American. Brooks Sloss, teacher from Westminster College, is at right

Back Home Credit

THE students were selected to attend "Washington Semester" by the faculties of their colleges. They receive credit for their work, not from American University, but from their home schools.

Colleges participating in addition to American are Westminster, Fulton, Mo.; Allegheny, Meadville, Pa., and three Ohio colleges, Oberlin, Hiram and Wooster.

The plan calls for each participating school to take a turn loaning a professor to act as adviser to the group. This year, Brooks Sloss, head of the mathematics department at Westminster, is assisting.

Five of the students are women and of the 18 men all but 3 are veterans. Ages range from 20 to 33 and 6 are married. Most are majors in political science and government but others are in economics and sociology.

Don Buzard and Roy A. Kinnard, students at Westminster, with Barbara Negus, American University student from Brooklyn, N. Y., compiled the report on a freshman Congressman.

They made a statistical analysis of his correspondence, charted his bills through Congress, sat in on conferences with constituents, and kept a record on how he spent his time.

Don Oglivee, junior at Hiram College and former Navy pilot, studied functions of the House Rules Committee, while Ed Snell of Wooster studied recent interpretations of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Clark Shoaff, political science student at Wooster, prepared the report on communism. George Strong of Allegheny College wrote on "Union Unfair Labor Practices" and Sally Owen of Hiram College on Hawaiian statehood.

Dr. Douglass, who planned the program with the assistance of top Government officials, says:

"The insight and first-hand knowledge of government that these students gain here will have its effect on their thinking now, and in later years will make for stronger democratic processes."

2771 Potential Lawyers Take 'Cram-Proof' Exams

PRINCETON, N. J., May 22.—The first standard law school admission test given on a Nationwide scale was taken here recently by 2771 potential lawyers throughout the country. Designed to help law schools select the most eligible students from their many applicants, the test was prepared, in consultation with representatives of leading law schools, by the Educational Testing Service, which also prepares college entrance examinations, aptitude tests for medical students and other qualifying examinations.

Impossible to "cram" for, according to the E. T. S., the law school test contains questions which measure verbal aptitudes and reasoning ability rather acquired information.

For example, a random sampling of the verbal aptitude section shows sentence completions, analogies and perception of word relationships; the section on reasoning includes analysis of debates and the determination of contrary and irrelevant statements in a given context. All applicants have been given practice booklets to familiarize them with this type of question.

Administered in 72 testing centers throughout the country, the tests will be scored by the Educational Testing Service at its office here, and scores will be reported to the law schools within a month. There are no "pass' or "fail" marks. Scores will be reported on a standard scale, which will compare each student's performance with that of the total group. Each law school then will judge a candidate's score as it compares with those of the other candidates applying to that school.

This score will then be carefully weighed with the candidate's college grades, letters of recommendation and personal interview.

Therefore the test score is actually intended as an additional rather than a crucial means of determining admission, especially in this first year of the testing program.

The test was developed in conjunction with a number of law schools, which are helping to determine policy, cooperating in research studies and taking an active part in all phases of the program.

Participating law schools include those of Boston University, Columbia University, Cornell University, Harvard University, New York University, Northwestern University, Ohio State University, Rutgers University, Stanford University, Syracuse University, University of Buffalo, University of California, University of Chicago, University of Michigan, University of Nebraska, University of Pennsylvania and Yale University.

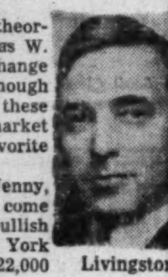
Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Rip Van Winkle Reaches Wall Street

For nearly 21 months—from September, 1946, through May 14—the stock market was in a trading rut. Then industrial stocks pushed to new highs (see chart). Wall Street, for so long indifferent to the boom in production and profits, suddenly decided that maybe it belonged in the United States after all.



Livingston

People scrambled to get aboard what Dow theorists proclaimed to be a "bull market." Thomas W. Phelps, partner in the New York Stock Exchange firm of Francis I. duPont & Co., got bold enough to conclude his market letter of May 14 with these words: "To those who have not yet bought, market history says run, do not walk, to your favorite broker."

All this is hard to take. One minute, like Jenny, Wall Street's on the fence; the next, "Whee, come on in, the swimming's fine." Brokers are bullish about their own business. On May 18, a New York Exchange membership sold for $68,000, or $22,000 more than on March 9. Arithmetically, that's nice going: 47.8 per cent appreciation in less than three months.

Turnover Heavier

The explanation is simple: Trading, during the recent upsurge, reached the highest level since the break of September, 1946. So commissions are rolling in.

And yet, the economic, political, social, or business outlook has not changed overnight. The troubles that faced the country when the market took its spill 20 months ago—when Wall Street shouted "Bear Market"—are still with us. Only people seem to have become more accustomed to them:

1. Russo-American relations are still tense, notwithstanding the Molotov-Smith exchange of notes and Stalin's willingness to accept Candidate Wallace's proposals as a basis for discussing differences. Secretary of State Marshall quite properly suggested that deeds, not words, were called for.

2. Strikes still impede production. Railroad unions are under an injunction. Chrysler is down and the United Auto Workers are threatening General Motors. The CIO meat-packing strike is just winding up. The President has named a fact-finding board in the dispute of American Telephone & Telegraph with its long-lines workers. And wage negotiations between the United Mine Workers and the coal operators got off to an inauspicious start when John L. Lewis refused to accept Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, as a negotiator.

3. The same reasons which led people to talk "recession" in '46 persist. It can even be argued that a recession is closer. Manufacturers have had time to fill immediate postwar demand. Supplies of electrical equipment are more plentiful. Department stores have had to hold special sales to maintain volume. Cotton consumption in April was only 830,000 bales as against 882,000 bales in April, '47. Even youth has had its fling. Bowman (Bubble) Gum lost money early this year.

Tax Cut Helped

Speculators and investors, however, have become gradually convinced that the demand for automobiles, housing, new plant and machinery, military equipment and Marshall-Plan supplies will be a sustaining force in the economy. And with good grade stocks offering 5 per cent to 7 per cent yields and more, and with earnings still high, people with excess cash have become less cautious. For one thing, the change in the tax law put more money into the hands of investors. Indeed, the market began perking up in late March, when it became clear that the tax cut would pass and probably survive President Truman's veto.

This belated Wall Street enthusiasm is dangerous. Throughout the postwar period, most businessmen haven't gone hog wild in purchasing inventories. For this, the stock market deserves an assist. Businessmen often take their cues from Wall Street if for no other reason than that they frequently own stocks. But now, if businessmen become intoxicated with the paper inflation that's occurring in Wall Street and forget what happened after the last war, then it might happen.

After all, this is still a tight economy. Basic commodities, like steel, petroleum, copper, are still in heavy demand. Corporations are still buying machinery to expand capacity. Manpower is scarce. Unemployment last month was down to 2,200,000 from 2,400,000 in March. So there's no reserve of manpower, materials, or machinery. Thus, a rise in prices doesn't bring out more production.

And prices are rising again. The wholesale commodity index, which made a low of 159.2 in late February, is now back to 163.5, not far from the 165.5 high in January. And the cost of living is up to an all-time top of 169.3. Thus Wall Street's Rip Van Winkle awakening to the facts of American economic life might add to the inflationary pressures within the economy. Which wouldn't be good.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Showers in parts of the Western Plains wheat belt sent the bread cereal lower on the Board of Trade today. The easiness of wheat finally spread to corn, which closed lower after showing a firm trend in early dealings. Oats were little changed.

With the May contracts out of the way, more attention was expected to be paid to the weather. May contracts not closed out totaled 8000 bushels of wheat, 512,000 bushels of corn and 210,000 bushels of oats. Actual grain must be delivered on these contracts by May 31.

Wheat ended 2 to 1½ lower, July, 2.34¾@2.35; corn was 1 to 1¾ lower, July, 2.13¾@2.13⅞; oats were ¾ lower to ¼ higher, July, 91¾@91⅞, and soybeans were 4 cents lower, July, 4.01.

The range follows:

Maryland Tobacco

Upper Marlboro, Md., May 22 (AP).—Prices dropped on most grades as the southern Maryland tobacco auction markets rounded out their second week of selling but offerings of better leaf brought up the price average.

Sales slumped markedly at the end of the week because of bad weather for handling and the fact many growers were busy planting their 1948 crop.

Auction sales for the week totaled 2,397,368 pounds at an average of $43.56 a hundred pounds.

This brought sales for the selling season to 4,703,704 pounds at an average of $42.36. An additional 5,819,934 pounds has changed hands on the hogshead market in Baltimore.

With the exception of "thin crop" leaf, all grade prices were down from the previous week. Thin crop continued in good demand and the majority of these grades picked up $1 to $3 a hundred.

The losses on other grades were mostly $1 to $5, but some grades were $5 to $6 down. These were principally red and greenish offerings of heavy crop, seconds, and fair cherry-red tips.

Stocks Rise Further But Volume Drops

New York, May 22 (AP).—The stock market advanced for the fourth day running today but failed again to match the 21-month high hit on Monday.

Backbone of today's market were oils, rails and metals. Most other issues moved around more or less aimlessly, few changing more than fractions either way from the previous close.

Volume of 830,000 shares was comparatively good for a Saturday but looked small alongside of 2,590,000 shares a week ago, the largest for any weekend session since 1933.

Among the fastest stocks were Skelly Oil and Mission Corp. Skelly pulled out of a 3-point losing streak to close unchanged at 155 while Mission sprinted ahead 3 to 69½.

Putting 2 and 2 together to make MORE MONEY

Fortunes have been made by those quick to see relationships in far-flung business events. That is the mark of the astute investor. And that is why Barron's National Business and Financial Weekly can prove so profitable for you.

Barron's gives you an integrated report of current business and financial activities. It puts you "on top" of the whole investment scene . . . enables you to anticipate trends and grasp profitable investment opportunities that lie ahead.

But Barron's never attempts to tell you which stocks or bonds to buy or sell. It does tell you the facts that affect securities—the underlying trends, the immediate outlook, the vital news and statistics that indicate the intrinsic values. Your own good judgment can then operate on a sound factual base.

No other publication is like Barron's. It is the only weekly affiliated with Dow-Jones, world's largest, fastest business and financial news-gathering organization.

If you save $1,000 or more a year . . . or are worth over $10,000 . . . you will find in Barron's the information and guidance that will help you build your financial future wisely, profitably.

Try Barron's for clear, concise, integrated facts on which to base your investment decisions. Year, $10; six months, $5. Just send this ad with your check. Or tell us to bill you. WP-5-23

New Oil Field Discovered in Mexico Gulf

New Orleans, May 22 (U.P.).—A vast new oil belt under the deep waters of the Gulf of Mexico may enrich the Nation's oil reserves by more than five billion barrels, oil men said today.

Humble Oil & Refining Co., officials escorted newsmen on a three-day tour of their new operations.

The feature of the trip was Humble's structure," as it is called, a steel "mesa" 7 miles out in the gulf where a drilling tower has been erected over 54 feet of water. It is the deepest ocean oil operation in the world.

Gales Lash Structure

Gales Selash the structure and waves of 18 and 20 feet may isolate the oil workers for days at a time. Newsmen had an unanticipated thrill there.

Converted Navy crash boats had just left Grand Isle and passed crumbling Fort Livingston on the way to the oil structure when the weather closed in. Seven oceanic cyclones developed to threaten the boats and the structure itself. Gulf fish were tossed into the boats by the waterspouts stirred up by the winds.

Humble, an affiliate of Standard Oil of New Jersey, spent $1,250,000 on its deep-water structure before turning a drill. Now the cost is $1,500,000 and it probably will run another $250,000.

They struck 10 feet of oil-bearing sands at around 7900 feet but decided it wasn't of commercial quantity. Now they're going down another thousand feet or so.

Gamble On Side Wells

Humble not only is gambling on its big structure—from which seven separate wells may be drilled and which is nearly half the size of a football field, but also is erecting five other, smaller, structures in the same gulf area.

Some 50 men live as salt-water cliff dwellers on Humble's steel structure out in the gulf, working in shifts of five days on and four days off.

It may sound like a lonely life, but where else can you buy your food for $1 per day?

GOP Will Press For Extension of Old Age Benefits

By The Associated Press

Republicans disclosed yesterday they intend to press for legislation extending old age insurance to 3,500,000 persons not now covered by the Social Security program.

This development came on the heels of a statement by Democratic leaders that President Truman soon will send to Congress a message calling for a broad expansion of the security program.

Representative Reed (R., N. Y.), chairman of a Ways and Means Suboommittee studying legislation in this field, issued a statement saying the bipartisan group would present a Social Security bill to the full committee next week.

Approximately 40 million employed persons now are under the program. Another 18 million, including self-employed, domestic help and farm workers, were excluded when the program was launched.

Methodist Pastors Shifted

Wilmington, Del., May 22 (AP).—The peninsula conference of the Methodist Church aanounced 74 new pastoral appointments as it closed its annual session last night. A third of them involved churches in the Easton, Md., district, with 21 changes in the Salisbury district.

UAW Chief Says Wolcott Is Filibustering TEW Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Walter Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, last night accused House Banking Committee Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) of filibustering the long-range TEW housing bill.

Reuther's statement came shortly after it was disclosed that House Republican leaders have decided there will be no housing legislation this session unless the public housing features of the TEW bill are dropped.

The House GOP decision, it is reported, has been conveyed to Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chief author of the measure, who steered it through the Senate. House leaders said they are in general agreement with the bill except the public housing section, which would provide Government-built homes for low-income families.

Reuther, in a statement issued through Emil Mazey, UAW secretary-treasurer, charged that Wolcott is conducting a filibuster against the bill by "stringing out committee hearings."

On the basis of reports he has received, Reuther said, the House Banking and Currency Committee would approve the bill, 14 to 13, if Wolcott would permit it to come to a vote. Wolcott's committee, however, will resume hearings Monday, spending another week or 10 days listening to witnesses before getting down to the business of amending the measure.

Reuther said 61 national organizations, "including labor, veterans, church, welfare and civic groups," have united in demanding that the House be allowed to vote on the bill. He said the UAW wants the public housing provision left in. He urged "friends of low cost and public housing" to write or wire their representatives to get behind a petition to force the bill out of the committee intact and onto the House floor for vote.

"The neediest citizens must not be sacrificed for passage of a bill trimmed down to the specifications of the real estate lobby," Reuther said.

The TEW measure is designed to encourage private construction of 15 million homes in the next 10 years. It also contains a provision for 500,000 federally financed housing units for low income groups to be built in the next five years.

Riggs to Start Work On Branch Parking Lot

Riggs National Bank will start work soon on building a parking lot adjoining its Chevy Chase branch, President Robert V. Fleming said yesterday.

The bank recently purchased the property at 3808 Morrison st. nw., and the Board of Zoning Adjustment last week granted permission to establish a parking lot for convenience of the branch's patrons. Fleming said that a study is being made of the advisability of also establishing drive-in tellers windows at the branch.

Whisky Fight Broadened By Baptists

Memphis, Tenn., May 22 (AP).—Southern Baptists challenged their ancient foe—alcohol—today as they completed the business sessions of their 91st annual convention.

The remainder of the weekend will be given over to evengelism. Some 30,000 persons are expected to hear the new convention president, Dr. Robert G. Lee of Memphis, at Crump Stadium Sunday.

The convention agreed to broaden its fight against whisky by calling on all Southern Baptists to pledge their votes against the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages.

The body reemphasized its refusal to join the world council of churches, and turned down an invitation that it send an observer to the council's meeting in Amsterdam this summer.

In another resolution, it voiced opposition to "communism, fascism, political ecclesiasticism, and anti-semitism."

Movies Show Television Without Film

Los Angeles, May 22 (AP).—The movie industry, long fearful of television's effect on box-office receipts, was breathing easier today.

Video projection adequate for a full-size theater screen without the use of film was demonstrated for the first time last night to radio and cinema technicians.

This process, kept under wraps for months, uses the same principle as that of the 200-inch Mount Palomar telescope.

Movie executives predict this advancement ultimately will provide theaters with a new lure.

Some 2000 delegates to conventions of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the National Association of Broadcasters attended what probably will be chronicled as a historic showing of direct vidio, on a screen 20 by 15 feet. The image quality, unlike earlier efforts to adapt television to theaters, was amazingly clear.

The audience saw telecasts from KTLA, local Paramount station. They also saw pictures of themselves, picked up by video cameras scanning the audience.

Senate to Probe Court Decisions

By The Associated Press

Chairman White (R., Me.) yesterday appointed a Senate Commerce Subcommittee to inquire into two recent Supreme Court decisions affecting United States consumers and business.

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), who called for the investigation, was named chairman.

Other members are Senators Brewster (R., Me.), Hawkes (R., N. J.), Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and McMahon (D., Conn.).

The decisions upheld Federal Trade Commission contentions against the Morton Salt Co. and the Cement Institute, with questions of price and competition involved.

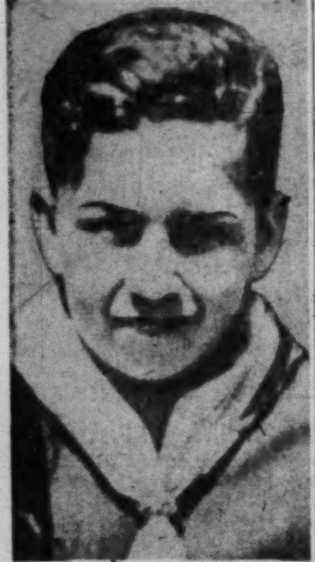
Farm Boy Trapped In Harrow for Hour

Los Angeles Boy Feared Kidnaped



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ALAN D. McCAULEY, 12, was missing yesterday from his home in Los Angeles. Police found a ransom note demanding $1500. His parents found his room ransacked when they came home at 2:30 a. m.

Screaming in pain and fright, a 12-year-old farmer boy yesterday lay trapped in the discs of a two-horse harrow for more than an hour before help arrived.

Only the patience of the horses saved the Prince Georges County lad from being sliced to death, said police who rescued him after a woman tenant farmer reported hearing his screams.

The boy, John Hall, told police he fell from his stand into the path of the keen discs as he was harrowing his father's tobacco land, near Glenn Dale Sanitarium. The horses stopped at his cry after one leg, straddled by two of the gleaming discs, was painfully pinned to the ground.

His cries were heard nearly an hour later by Martha Garner, tenant on the adjoining farm of Brice Duckett, Seat Pleasant, Md., bank official. She telephoned Hyattsville, Md., police that "a woman was screaming in the woods near Enterprise rd. and Defense hwy.

Police Corp. E. Le Pumphrey and Officer Wallace Baker, responding, found the lad in the farm clearing beyond the woods. His sole injury was bruises and abrasions of the trapped leg.

He is the son of Francis Hall, tobacco farmer.

Mere 14 Million Communists Are Altering Globe

Ten thousand Chinese Communists turned out to celebrate the "end" of China's civil war in February, 1946. A part of the throng at Yenan, then the Communist "capital," is shown above. The armistice was short-lived. The soldiers in the center are from the famous Eighth Route Army

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

ONE hundred years ago—in February, 1848—two middle class Germans published the Communist Manifesto. The fathers of the new doctrine were the poverty-stricken Karl Marx, who existed chiefly on $5 a week earned by writing articles for a New York newspaper, and the more prosperous small manufacturer, Friedrich Engels. Their document caused no excitement and very little interest in a lusty young Nation overseas. The United States of America had many other things to think about in 1848.

That was the year gold was discovered in California, the year which saw the end of the Mexican War, the year in which the Republican Party might be said to have been conceived.

Today, the "specter" evoked by Marx and Engels has materialized, and there is no single question which so absorbs the interest and efforts of the United States as the preservation of Western democracy against communism.

The question of whether or not this Nation should outlaw the Communist Party is a major issue in the Republican presidential race. The House of Representatives, by a vote of 319 to 58, has passed the Mundt bill providing drastic curbs on the activities of domestic Communists, although it does not outlaw the party.

And throughout the world, not a nation, not a territory has remained unaffected by the Communist Manifesto. If ever evidence were needed that the pen is mightier than the sword, let this document of Marx and Engels be proof.

Domain of the Bear

THE first Communist state, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, is the absolute ruler of 200 million Russians, of whom some 6,300,000 are members of the Communist Party.

Since 1939, by annexation, the USSR has gained the following territories: Finland's Petsamo and Karelia, Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Koenigsberg in East Prussia, eastern Poland, Ruthenia, Bukovina and Bessarabia. In the east, the USSR has gained the Kuriles, southern Sakhalin and Dairen.

There are the Soviet zones of occupation in Germany, Austria and Korea. And there are seven satellite nations under the control of local Communists, supported by the USSR: Poland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Albania and Czechoslovakia.

In China, some 2,800,000 Communists govern a vast area in which live at least 90 million Chinese. There the Communist Party has mushroomed from an estimated 100,000 members in the early days of the Sino-Japanese War.

Communism swept postwar Europe like a prairie fire. The Communists claim two million members each in France and Italy. There is good reason, however, to cut that claim to 1,300,000 each.

The global network of Communist parties —all subservient to the mother state— include an estimated 12 million to 14 million members.

High Mark in 1947

THE bare figures of Communist Party membership, however, give no indication of real strength. Everywhere, by following the carefully worked out system of Marx and Engels, supplemented by the coldly brilliant plans of V. I. Lenin, who led the 1917 Russian revolution, and the refinements of Josef Stalin, the influence of the party far exceeds its numerical strength.

The greatest strength of the Communist Party today is in the Soviet Union, its periphery, eastern Europe, China, Italy and France.

The party, which by design makes its gains in a series of advances and retreats, reached a peak in 1947. The years 1944 to 1946 saw a phenomenal growth of communism not only in Europe and the Near and Far East, but in Latin America, our next door neighbor.

It was not until 1947 that the United States began to take steps to counter Soviet aggression. On March 12, 1947, President Truman called for direct aid to Greece and Turkey, threatened by Soviet expansion.

In "Strategy and Tactics of World Communism," the national and international movements subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee points out that this so-called Truman Doctrine has probably cost the United States 300 million dollars in Greece alone. And, the subcommittee adds, the threat to Greece probably cost Russia nothing. That, of course, is because within each country is a native arm of the Kremlin, ready to do its bidding.

In Greece and Turkey, however, our experts agree communism has been checked. The Communists in Greece even lost friends by urging their followers not to accept the "imperialist" aid.

This advice was not welcomed by those whose children were starving.

Stalled in Europe

THE Truman Doctrine was followed by Russia's formation of the Cominform. The Communist Parties of the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Poland, France, Czechoslovakia and Italy established a new information bureau at Belgrade and compared the United States to Nazi Germany.

Then, from the United States, came the Marshall Plan and the six billion dollar European Recovery Program. The reaction was immediate. Our experts feel that communism in Europe has been halted.

The Communist parties of France and Italy have not lost membership, it should be noted. Each still has about 1,300,000 members. What has happened is that they have lost their political allies in great part.

Italy is about the only country left in the non-Soviet sphere where there is a truly voluntary coalition of the Communists and another party. There the Communists are allied with a majority of the Socialist Party, led by Nenni.

That points up one world-wide development of incalculable importance. Now, as never before in the whole history of communism, the Communists are isolated from former liberal and moderate allies. Their program stands or falls on its own feet.

There are two reasons for this: First, the Communists themselves have taken the position that they will not compromise on basic principles of communism; and second, the lesson of Czechoslovakia stripped the last illusions from liberals the world over.

Up untli the coup d'etat in Czechoslovakia last February 20-25, there had been some confusion about liberal and Communist aims. Seizure of power in Czechoslovakia, followed by the tragic suicide of Jan Masaryk, made it crystal clear that the conflict did not lie in terms of an economic program but in terms of democracy versus a dictatorship governed by the foreign policies of the Soviet Union.

Liberals discovered they had gone to bed with a dream and waked up with an octupus.

The revulsion of left-wingers in England was typical of non-Communist left-wing reaction everywhere. It is questionable whether the economic and strategic advantages won by Russia in Czechoslovakia offset her psychological losses the world over.

World-Wide 'Battle'

THE Czechoslovakian coup enormously spurred defense moves in the United States, which are also designed to strengthen western democracy.

In rapid order Congress is passing legislation to increase the air force, to provide modern naval weapons and to institute a peacetime draft. All of these moves—Greek-Turkish aid, ERP and military defense—are the outgrowth of Communist aggression.

It should be noted here that it is not the power of Russia as a nation which Western democracy feels it must combat, but rather the world-wide fifth columns composed in each nation of native citizens who owe their allegiance to a foreign power and who have fully demonstrated they will do its bidding.

This is indeed something new under the sun, although it was envisioned by Commu-

Jersey Plan Even Gives Soapboxers a Hearing

New Jersey's civil rights report marks a far advance over a decade. Just 10 years ago next week Socialist Norman Thomas was rotten-egged when he attempted to speak in Newark's Military Park. The splattered but still smiling Thomas is shown above behind one of the flags allegedly used as clubs

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

NEWARK, May 22.—While Southern States have been plotting political vengeance for President Truman's civil rights program, New Jersey has been quietly developing a dynamic plan to make it effective.

An 18-member committee of educators, newspaper editors and labor, religious and women's club leaders, appointed by Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll, has made an intensive study of the status of civil liberties in the Garden State and has issued a report on how better to protect them.

This makes New Jersey the first of the 48 States to carry out a study of civil rights as recommended by the President's Committee on Civil Rights. Actually, New Jersey's achievement stems from its own constitutional reform.

The first problem facing the New Jersey group was how to prevent recurrence of incidents where "the enjoyment of rights of free speech and assembly are claimed to have been denied to Communist or other minority groups," the report said.

The committee was referring to mob action in Trenton last winter in breaking up a meeting sponsored by the Communist Party in an auditorium across the street from the State House, and to similar interference with a gathering in Newark addressed by Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.).

The committee said that such denial of freedom of speech and assembly necessitated action by communities. It considered it a "duty of the governing body of every municipality:

"1. To provide a place of assembly for scheduled political meetings, upon request. Such place of assembly need not be indoors.

"2. To provide a place for unscheduled discussions where 'soapbox orators' may hold forth at will.

"3. To preserve law and order while such meetings are being held."

The reason: "The crank, the fanatic, the announced enemy of our system of Government, is less dangerous when given opportunity for self-expression. The zealot who is not allowed to express his ideas in public becomes a martyr and draws adherents who otherwise would have laughed at him.

"For all these there should be a Hyde Park or Union Square in every large community in our State," the group declared.

The committee suggested that since public schools frequently offer the only public halls in a community, school boards should permit their use for public affairs discussions.

The committee pointed out, however, that in addition to protecting the rights of minorities, the State "has an equal responsibility to protect the rights of the majority." It urged, therefore, that a procedure of public disclosure of the origins and motivations of groups be devised, so that "the public can properly determine whether they come from an ingenious mind, from a 'crackpot' or from the subversive propagandist."

This principle of disclosure should also be applied to anonymous writings on government, politics, race, creed and other matters of public concern, it added.

Praising newspapers in general for "steady improvement of reporting, and the separation of opinion from fact in newspaper columns," the committee remarked that a "newspaper, particularly where it is a monopoly, has the responsibility to see that all sides of every public question are presented in its news columns."

Protection of the person from "third degree" police methods is another recurrent civil liberties problem. The committee pointed out that "two temptations confront our law enforcement officers:

"1. A desire to secure a confession, even at the expense of impairment of civil rights of the accused.

"2. A tendency to use evidence obtained as a result of a search warrant, for purposes unrelated to the cause of the issuance of such warrant."

The remedy, the committee said, is "strict and able police administration, fully conscious of its responsibility to maintain law and order in its own ranks."

In discusing generally the rights of legislative committees, the group declared: "A legislative committee has no judicial powers and may make no pronouncement as to the consequences, criminal or civil, of an individual's conduct as brought out by interrogation at such hearings, nor should it permit itself to be drawn into side issues, personal to the individual affected, which do not advance the real purpose of the investigation."

The committee considered the question of loyalty investigations for State employes, but concluded that, unlike the Federal Government, a State government has few diplomatic or military secrets and that there is "no possible need for wholesale loyalty checks in New Jersey."

In individual cases of suspected disloyalty, the committee urged that the person be informed of charges against him and be given the opportunity to defend himself.

To secure equality of educational opportunity, the committee asked that all school boards make effective the new constitutional prohibition against segregation in public schools. There are only 50 such schools remaining in the State.

The committee further urged that quasi-public educational institutions cease discrimination

"Every democratic government is dependent upon and conditioned by public opinion," it said. In the last resort, the protection of civil rights is a matter of creating a healthy public opinion, and that public opinion is largely formed by the educational experiences of the individual citizen."

Hull Writes Off Some Big Names in Little Black Book

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

CORDELL HULL has had to wait a long time to settle old scores.

He has watched others in Roosevelt's Administration, and Truman's, rushing into print to claim their passports into history. He has spent most of his years of retirement in the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, saying little and biding his time.

Now, in two gigantic volumes of recollections, he has his say at last. He must have kept a little black notebook under his hospital pillow, with a private list of everyone who ever crossed his path.

In "The Memoirs of Cordell Hull" he ticks them off one by one, sometimes with the bored finality of a man who squashes a mosquito. Like Ko-Ko in "The Mikado," he's kept a list of such offenders, and as far as he's concerned

> . . . they never would be missed,
> they'd none of them be missed!

The Tennessee statesman is going on 77 now, and his health is frail, but his grudges are vigorous and his memory clear.

Moley's 'Secret' Cable

ONE grudge he still remembers after 15 years is the case of Raymond Moley, whom President Roosevelt sent as a special emissary to the London economic conference in 1933.

Hull was the leader of the American delegation in those half-forgotten days. As he tells the story now, neither forgetting nor forgiving, Moley arrived almost as a royal personage, dealt importantly with foreign leaders, by-passed his own Secretary of State, and then ran to Hull for help when his plans went wrong.

Hull still enjoys telling of the tremendous dressing-down he gave Moley on the steps of the Hyde Park Hotel in London. "You had better get back home," he told the professor. "You had no business over here in the first place."

And he does not fail to retell how Moley secretly cabled the President "a rigid inspection report on the delegation," disparaging almost every member, but sending it by State Department code, with the result that every delegate knew of its contents within a few hours.

There were many others on Hull's "little list." One was Henry Wallace, "in many respects an extreme leftist . . . inclined to explore new theories and embrace them if they appeared plausible," and addicted to "excursions into foreign affairs." Another was Harold Ickes, "often quite far to the left," with an approach "which not infrequently antagonized others."

Morgenthau Irked Him

STILL another was Henry Morgenthau, jr., who "often acted as if he were clothed with authority to project himself into the field of foreign affairs," although he was "not at all fully or accurately informed on many questions with which he undertook to interfere."

This was no perfunctory or merely personal grudge. Hull considered the so-called Morgenthau Plan for Germany "catastrophic," a scheme of "blind vengeance," and he cannot forgive the former Treasury Secretary for persuading Roosevelt and Winston Churchill to accept it. He says the episode drove him to the verge of the physical collapse that made him resign from the Cabinet.

He revered Roosevelt and he respected Harry Hopkins and Frances Perkins, but he had no respect for some of the leading New Dealers of those days. He had no use for "some of the extreme left-fringe people who kept the President stirred up from time to time against the State Department."

"I was frankly glad (he writes now) not to be invited into the White House group where so often the 'liberal' game was played on an extreme basis. I was known not to be an extreme liberal or semiradical, as were some of those who were close to the President, and my presence in their gatherings would have been as embarrassing to me as to them."

Not by Omission

IN ANY list of those who stirred his wrath and scorn, the name of Sumner Welles must have been written in capital letters and red ink. Welles himself performed the feat of mentioning Hull's name only once in two volumes on American foreign policy. The former Secretary reciprocates the insult, but in a different way.

He not only accuses Welles of "disloyalty" to him, of making major decisions without consulting him, and of much more in the same vein. He also thinks Welles was "narrower and less sound" in his judgment than other State Department officials.

Again and again he blames Welles for giving Roosevelt bad advice, for failing to evaluate people and policies correctly, and on at least one occasion—the Rio conference of 1942—for handling Latin-American affairs with downright incompetence.

Hull learned from his mountaineer father how to pursue a feud to its bitter end. During the Civil War in eastern Tennessee, he writes, a guerilla shot his father and inflicted lasting injury. The father found out who had done the deed, tracked him through parts of two States, finally came upon him and without a word shot him dead.

Nothing ever happened. That was mountain Tennessee, the world into which Cordell Hull was born.

Altogether the most fascinating part of the Hull memoirs is the story of his childhood and youth in those desperately poor and backward valleys. He climbed the ladder the hardest way. He was born in a log cabin, worked on the farm as soon as he was big enough to milk the cow, later worked long days in the cornfields, and finally helped to haul logs to the river. When he was 15, he and his brothers ran rafts downstream.

Out of this background, and with the help of a heroic father and mother, he became a lawyer, State legislator, Congressman and Secretary of State. The story is a genuine epic of America; the early chapters belong in the anthologies.

He was a hard-working, studious and effective Congressman, especially in the early Wilson days. He fought unceasingly for the first income tax law and helped to draft it. He started in 1916 with the dominating passion of his career, his crusade for the international reduction of trade barriers. He never reached the limelight in those days, but Wilson regarded him as "a very serious student of public affairs and a very admirable person."

Later, when Wilson was living his last years in retirement on S st., Hull saw him often, and was rewarded by warm and friendly letters, full of faith in the future. They appear in these volumes, and they suggest that the great war President was far from a hollow shell in those years when he could say of the isolationists, with prophetic insight: "I have seen fools resist Providence before, and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again, utter destruction and contempt."

To Hull, the men who resisted Wilsonian principles in 1919 and 1920 were worse than fools. He regarded Lodge and his coterie of Senators as blindly selfish, bent on "rule or ruin," on destroying the League of Nations for the sake of destroying Wilson. Hull is more bitter toward them today than toward the isolationists of the 30s, whom he regarded as honest but mistaken.

Myth of Amenity

THE memoirs do not bear out the growing myth that Hull, having been a Congressman and Senator, was supremely successful in dealing with Congress. There were times, such as the 1939 debate on the Historic or Histrionic?

Three Additions to the Literature of Diplomacy

THREE documents that shed light upon the issues of the "cold war" last week took their place in the literature of modern diplomacy.

All three represent departures from conventional diplomatic method and channels.

The first, a letter from Henry A. Wallace to Josef Stalin, is unusual as the communication of the private citizen of one country to the ruler of another touching upon gravest matters of state traditionally the concern of official agencies of government.

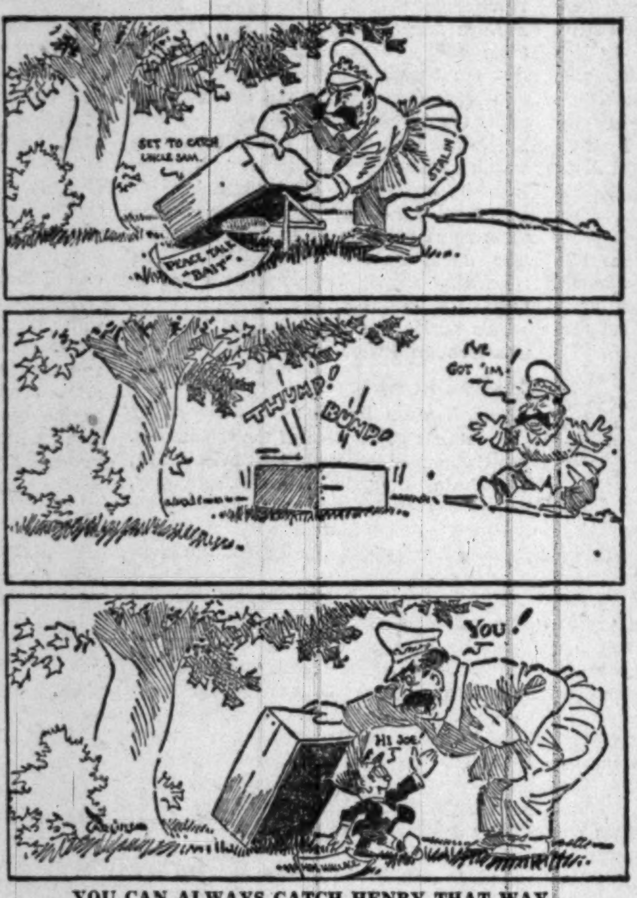
The second is a communication from Josef Stalin replying to Henry Wallace—even more unusual as the address of a head of state to the issues raised in a private communication from a person without diplomatic status of any kind.

The third is a State Department comment on the issues raised in this extraordinary communication between a private citizen and the head of a foreign government. It, too, is a most unusual statement issued under circumstances in which Foreign Offices ordinarily would have maintained an attitude of indifference.

Departures from precedent and protocol set this exchange apart and put the three statements in their proper frame. Each is an instrument of propaganda. Each is addressed, less to persons and issues than to the world. Together they may assume historic importance as part of the maneuvering preliminary to East-West accommodation. Or they may fall into inconspicuous place among the millions of words in a battle of propaganda that is part of all cold wars.

It All Began With 'Letter' 2 Weeks Ago

Text of Wallace's "open letter to Premier Stalin," as distributed at a Madison Square Garden rally May 11:



SET TO CATCH UNCLE SAM.
STALIN
PEACE TALK "BAIT"
THUMP!
BUMP!
I'VE GOT 'IM!
YOU!
HI JOE!

YOU CAN ALWAYS CATCH HENRY THAT WAY

. . . Carlisle, in the Des Moines Register

A Century of Peace

ALTHOUGH the notes of Ambassador Bedell Smith and Foreign Minister Molotov are both characterized by the same self-righteousness which has led to the international crisis, they represent great hope to those of us who have consistently maintained that peace is possible and they represent a severe blow to the propagandists on both sides who have insisted that the two nations cannot live at peace in the same world. The two letters assume what we have long contended—that the wartime cooperation between the two great powers can be rebuilt and strengthened in time of peace. The exchange of notes, opening the door to negotiations, must be followed by a meeting — an open, fully reported meeting of representatives of both the United States and the Soviet Union. With the prospect of such a meeting, I present my thoughts on the steps necessary to achieve the Century of Peace.

The Cold War Must Stop

THE United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics must take immediate action to end the cold war. This involves taking definite, decisive steps looking toward the following objectives:

1. General reduction of armaments—outlawing all methods of mass destruction.
2. Stopping the export of weapons by any nation to any other nation.
3. The resumption of unrestricted trade (except for goods related to war) between the two countries.
4. The free movement of citizens, students and newspaper men between and within the two countries.
5. The resumption of free exchange of scientific information and scientific material between the two nations.
6. The reestablishment of a reinvigorated United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration or the constitution of some other United Nations agency for the distribution of international relief.

Neither the United States of America nor the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should interfere in the internal affairs of other nations. Neither the United States of America nor the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should maintain military bases in other United Nations countries. Neither the United States of America nor the Union should terrorize the citizens of member states of the United Nations by massing land forces, establishing air bases, or making naval demonstrations. Neither the United States of America nor the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should use financial pressure, economic pressure or the pressure of secret agents to obtain political results in other countries. Both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, in the spirit of the United Nations Charter, should collaborate to the limit in furthering the political, economic and cultural health of the world. To that end the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should join the various subsidiary agencies of the United Nations, such as the World Health Organization, the Food and Agricultural Organization, and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Rehabilitation of Europe

IT IS to the advantage of both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to give maximum economic help to Europe as promptly as possible within the framework of the United Nations, proportioned to the devastation and economic need. As soon as possible the European Cooperation Administration and the United Nations and the Economic Commission for Europe should be converted into a reinvigorated and expanded United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for the purpose of building a highly productive, economically unified Europe in which there would be no barriers of trade, communication or culture between Eastern Europe and Western Europe.

Speedy Peace With Germany

THE Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United States of America, Great Britain and France should conclude a peace treaty with Germany at the earliest possible moment. The objective is the prompt reestablishment of a peace-loving German government in charge of a united Germany which is obligated to the strict fulfillment of the Yalta and Potsdam agreements. Russian, French, British and American troops should be withdrawn from Germany within one year after the signing of the German peace treaty.

Peace in the Far East

NEITHER the United States of America nor the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should send arms into China. Both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should withdraw troops from both China and Korea. There should be set up as soon as possible a government for all of Korea. Both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should adhere to the principle of equal rights for all nations in China, with respect for the sovereignty of China, and refrain from interference in the internal affairs of China. Both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics can benefit from a China which is strong and unified on the basis of economic and political democracy.

Japan

A PEACE treaty with Japan based on agreements heretofore arrived at should be made at the earliest possible moment. Both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics have a vital interest in a democratic and peace-loving Japan. All nations having occupation troops in Japan should withdraw them within a year after the signing of the peace treaty with Japan.

Veto and Atomic Energy Control

THE EXCESSIVE use of the veto and the impasse with regard to certain phases of atomic energy control are the expression of the lack of confidence between the two nations. They are symptoms, not causes. Both can be handled constructively once confidence is established in the major issues. The door should be promptly opened to the extraordinary benefits which atomic energy can bring to mankind at peace. Atomic energy for war is a crime and a curse. Atomic energy for peace can be science's greatest blessing.

Access to Raw Materials

THE ATLANTIC Charter has provision for freedom of access to raw materials by the nations of the world. This is very important for the smaller nations and both the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should carry out the spirit of Article 4 of the Atlantic Charter.

There are possibilities of increasing interchange of goods between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to a volume many times the prewar figure. Such an increase in trade excluding any discrimination will promote friendly relations between the two countries and thereby strengthen the cause of world peace.

Assurance With Regard To Russian and American Intentions

MILLIONS of citizens in the United States of America believe it is the settled purpose of Soviet leaders to conquer the world. Millions of citizens in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics believe it is the settled purpose of the United States of America to invade the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Both point to specific instances to make their point. Each nation should state definitively and categorically that it has no design on the territorial integrity of any other nation.

Communism and Capitalism

THE ideological competition between communism and capitalism is a different matter from the misunderstanding between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America. The latter can be solved in a way that will preserve peace. But the competition between the capitalist and Communist systems is never ending. It is the concern of both nations to see that this competition remains constructive and that it never degenerates into the status of such a religious war as the Thirty Years War which so devastated Europe at the beginning of the seventeenth century.

Russia cannot be held responsible for the excesses of local Communists any more than the United States of America can be held responsible for the reprehensible exploitation of backward peoples by many capitalists who are not citizens or only nominally citizens of the United States of America.

Undoubtedly many Communists and capitalists have expressed the belief that their particular system will inevitably dominate the world. But that does not mean that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America must engage in perpetual conflict. The two countries can agree to a modus vivendi while the slow process of time determines the strong and weak points of the two economic systems and the free peoples of the world make day by day the small choices which eventually will evolve, on the basis of empiricism, systems which will be best adapted for the various individual countries.

The Century of Peace Must Come

THERE is no misunderstanding or difficulty between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics which can be settled by force or fear and there is no difference which cannot be settled by peaceful, hopeful negotiation. There is no American principle or public interest, and there is no Russian principle or public interest which would have to be sacrificed to end the cold war and open up the Century of Peace which the Century of the Common Man demands.

Stalin's Reply to Wallace

"I THINK that among the political documents of recent times which have the consolidation of peace as their aim, the setting up of international cooperation and the insuring of democracy, the open letter of Mr. Wallace, presidential candidate of the United States third party, is the most important document.

"Mr. Wallace's open letter cannot be considered a simple declaration on the desirability of improving the international situation and on the desirability of settling the differences between the USSR and the United States, on the desirability of finding ways for such a settlement.

"The inadequacy of the statement of the United States Government of May 4 and the reply of the USSR of May 9 consist in fact that they go no further than declaring the desirability of settling the Soviet-American differences.

"The important meaning of the open letter consists in the fact that it does not limit itself to a declaration, but goes further, makes a serious step forward and gives a concrete program for peaceful settlement of the differences between the USSR and the United States.

"IT CANNOT be said that Mr. Wallace's open letter embraces all questions of difference without exceptions nor can it be said that certain formulations and comment in the open letter do not need to be improved, but that is not the most important thing at the present time. The main thing is that Mr. Wallace in his letter makes an open and honest attempt to give a concrete program for a peaceful settlement, concrete proposals on all basic questions of difference between the USSR and the United States.

"These proposals are known to everybody: a general reduction of armaments and prohibition of atomic weapons; conclusion of peace treaties with Germany and Japan and the question of evacuation of troops from these countries; evacuation of troops from China and Korea; respect for the sovereignty of individual countries and noninterference in their domestic affairs; the inadmissibility of military bases in member countries of the United Nations; world development of international trade excluding any sort of discrimination; in the framework of the United Nations, assistance to and economic restoration of countries which suffered from the war; defense of democracy and insuring of civil rights in all countries; and so on.

"IT IS possible to agree or disagree with the program of Mr. Wallace, but one thing is, nevertheless, beyond doubt: There is no statesman caring for peace and cooperation among the peoples who can ignore this program, since it reflects the hopes and strivings of the peoples toward consolidation of peace, and it doubtless will have the support of many millions of ordinary people.

"I do not know whether the United States Government approves of Mr. Wallace's program as a basis for agreement between the USSR and the United States. As far as the Government of the USSR is concerned, it considers that Mr. Wallace's program could serve as a good and fruitful basis for such an agreement and for the development of international cooperation, since the USSR government considers that, despite the difference in the economic systems and ideologies, the coexistence of these systems and a peaceful settlement of differences between the USSR and the United States are not only possible but also doubtlessly necessary in the interests of a general peace."

The State Department Sums Up

A summary of the State Department's analysis last Wednesday of 11 major issues confronting the United States and Russia. Most of them were mentioned in Wallace's letter or Stalin's reply:

1. REDUCTION OF ARMAMENTS—The regulation of "conventional armaments" was discussed in the 1946 U. N. Assembly, and has been under consideration ever since in the commission of the Security Council set up for that purpose.

2. ATOMIC ENERGY—"Agreement on an effective plan for international control has so far been blocked by the Soviet Union . . . Fourteen out of 17 of the nations which are or have been represented on the commission are agreed on the basic and indispensable requiremments of an international control plan; the Soviet Union, Poland and the Ukraine have been the only members of the commission to disagree." Despite the commission's failure to get agreement, "the United Nations is still confronted with the problem of international control of atomic energy and the United States Government is still ready to participate in genuinely effective control."

3. GERMAN PEACE SETTLEMENT—"Soviet opposition to virtually every proposition put forward by the United States, Great Britain and France has thus far blocked all progress on this question" in two long meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

4. JAPANESE PEACE SETTLEMENT—Nine out of 11 countries on the Far Eastern Commission have favored a preliminary 11-nation peace conference, with voting by a two thirds majority. China wants such a conference, but with the great powers holding a veto. Russia wants the Japanese treaty handled by the Council of Foreign Ministers, composed only of the great powers. "It has so far been impossible to resolve the conflict between these widely different concepts."

5. EVACUATION OF TROOPS FROM CHINA—On March 31, 1948, there were 1496 American Army personnel and 4125 Navy and Marine personnel in China, "at the request of the National Government."

6. EVACUATION OF TROOPS FROM KOREA—The U. N. Assembly last November recommended a plan for Korean independence, to be followed promptly by the withdrawal of all foreign troops. The Ukraine was elected to the U. N. Commission formed to assist in this program, but refused to serve. The Soviet Union denied the commission entry into the northern zone of Korea. "It has not only refused to collaborate in any way in the implementation of the U. N. plan, but has attempted to proceed unilaterally with a plan of its own which threatens to lead to civil war among the Korean themselves."

7. RESPECT FOR NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY AND NON-INTERFERENCE IN DOMESTIC AFFAIRS—"The facts bearing on this subject are too voluminous for presentation here. The actions and policies of the two governments in this respect are a matter of public record and speak for themselves."

8. MILITARY BASES—American policy on this subject is governed by a U. N. Assembly resolution permitting troops to be kept in the territories of member nations if those nations give their "freely and publicly expressed consent." The United States has registered all such agreements with the U. N. Incidentally, the United States has proposed, and the Soviet Union has rejected, a proposal that armed forces acting under the Security Council should have unlimited rights of passage and rights to use bases anywhere.

9. INTERNATIONAL TRADE—The Soviet Union declined to take part in the 23-nation conference at Geneva last year or in the subsequent 56-nation conference at Havana which agreed upon a charter for the International Trade Organization.

10. ASSISTANCE TO WAR-DEVASTATED COUNTRIES—"The aid being extended by the United States to other countries on a world-wide scale, through both United Nations channels and others, should be an adequate answer to this point. In the case of the European Recovery Program, in which the USSR declined to participate, the proposal to create a new organization came from the participating European countries."

11. HUMAN RIGHTS—The U. N.'s Human Rights Commission may soon recommend a draft declaration and covenant on human rights. Since this is a problem affecting many nations, the U. N. is a "wholly adequate forum" in which to debate it.

Unprecedented Job for Unique Man

Harriman's Been Tried for Size

By Sigrid Arne

Associated Press Staff Writer

MEN on both sides here—whether Republican or Democrat—make pleased remarks about the country having a man as well prepared for his new job as W. Averell Harriman.

W. A. HARRIMAN

The size of the job was what had worried people.

Harriman is headed for Paris to run the European end of the Marshall Plan. He must see that more than five billion dollars a year is put to work where it can do the most good for the 270,000,000 people of Western Europe.

His title is United States Special Representative in Europe for the Economic Cooperation Administration. He has the rank of Ambassador.

Few Americans have run enterprises large enough to prepare them for such a job. Fewer still have had Government service to boot.

Harriman has had both. Before he entered the Government, back in the '30s, he had run the Union Pacific Railroad; he had built up a shipping company; he had started a brokerage house which is still in business. For many years he has worked on high Government policy, and through the war most of the top secrets flowed over his desk. As far as Harriman is concerned, they're still top secrets.

For those reasons, and others, the Senate committee which approved his appointment to the Paris post, indulged in little talk about it, and okayed him unanimously.

Old Russia Hand

HE HOLDS a niche in Government today which appears unique. No one seems to remember any time when Harriman was under political attack by either party or any of their factions.

Most of his work in the Government has been with European and Russian leaders. Much of it has been concerned with commerce and supplies.

In March, 1941, he flew to London to get the lend-lease pipelines open. He said then that his job merely amounted to "recommendations." He added with a slow grin, "If I'm right, I'll get little glory. But if I'm wrong, I'll be in the middle."

Each time Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin had a conference, Harriman was pulled out of his Moscow embassy to advise President Roosevelt. He attended all the big international conferences, and there came to know the attitudes of many of the men with whom he must now deal again.

Back in the dark days of 1941, when plenty of military experts thought the Russians would fold, leaving the Germans free to turn on the West, Harriman was among the first to say the Russians would fight on.

He had taken several quick flights by that time to talk with the embattled Russians. He got along with them. So in October, 1943, he was appointed Ambassador to Moscow.

He immediately made the American Embassy hum. He decided to know as many of the Russian leaders as possible, and to know them well. He gave huge parties, and went to Russian parties. He asked for interviews with all the top men in the Russian capital. He has probably talked with Stalin more hours than any other man from the Western world.

He knows not only the leaders, but also the fine shading of political power that attaches to each name.

His work won him Russian admiration. When he was reassigned, in 1946, to the American Embassy at London, Russian leaders publicly wished him well.

In his first years in Moscow he believed that a peace could be worked out between the Russian and American systems. He counseled patience.

But even before the war ended he had doubts. He flew to the San Francisco conference to counsel the United States delegation to stand firm on any principle.

Now he has said publicly that Russia is "a dangerous force."

Steadfast for Peace

BUT he has not snapped all the way back to the extreme reaction of talking of war. He says rather, "The Communists believe in the inevitability of armed conflict. I am convinced we can maintain the peace, provided we will now use our efforts to help free men maintain their freedom."

He has favored the Marshall Plan from the start. He got together a large committee of leading American businessmen to figure out whether this country could afford to give such tremendous aid to other people.

For weeks they studied all sorts of figures: Our own production, Europe's needs, shipping space, costs, the vagaries of currencies, the ability of the Europeans to work.

Now, with all that special background on Europe's industries and trade, Harriman goes to Paris to watch exports and imports, government budgets, food production.

He is a terrific worker, too.

"He does everything intensely," says one man. "He tackles every Government paper that comes over his desk as though the fate of the Nation hung on that one paper. He even plays that way. He plays golf, badminton, croquet, as though it were his temporary profession."

'Bystander' A Casualty In Greece

By Robert Hewett

Associated Press Staff Writer

STYLIS, Greece, May 22.—Spyros was sitting sleepily in the sun, slouched over the little sidewalk table and sipping dark Turkish coffee.

Spyros doesn't work any more. Every sunny day for the last year he has been sitting at the coffee table. He usually is sleepy because nearly every night he sits with his rifle at the edge of town—on guard against Communist-led guerillas who lurk in the neighboring mountains.

Spyros Harlabitas went to the United States, in 1909, at the age of 14. Three or four years later he opened a cafe in Milwaukee and then served in the United States Army in World War I. Homesick for Greece, he returned to this drowsy little harbor town when his father died in 1924.

In time Spyros became a fairly prosperous man. At 53 he owns 1000 olive trees on land 5 miles from Stylis. This part of south central Greece grows some of the finest olives in the world.

But now Spyros and his fellow villagers are men afraid. For more than a year Spyros has not gone outside his village—not even to the City of Lamia, 12 miles away.

It's risky to travel lonely roads and work in isolated fields. The Andartes (as Greeks call the guerillas) recruit men for their mountain bands by kidnaping. So Spyros and thousands of his fellow Greeks sit in guarded towns, sipping coffee or the native retzina wine if they can afford it.

There are thousands of little men like Spyros all over Greece—some richer, some poorer. They are caught in the No Man's Land between the mountainous areas, where the guerillas rule with their own laws, and the more populous districts where government troops keep law and order.

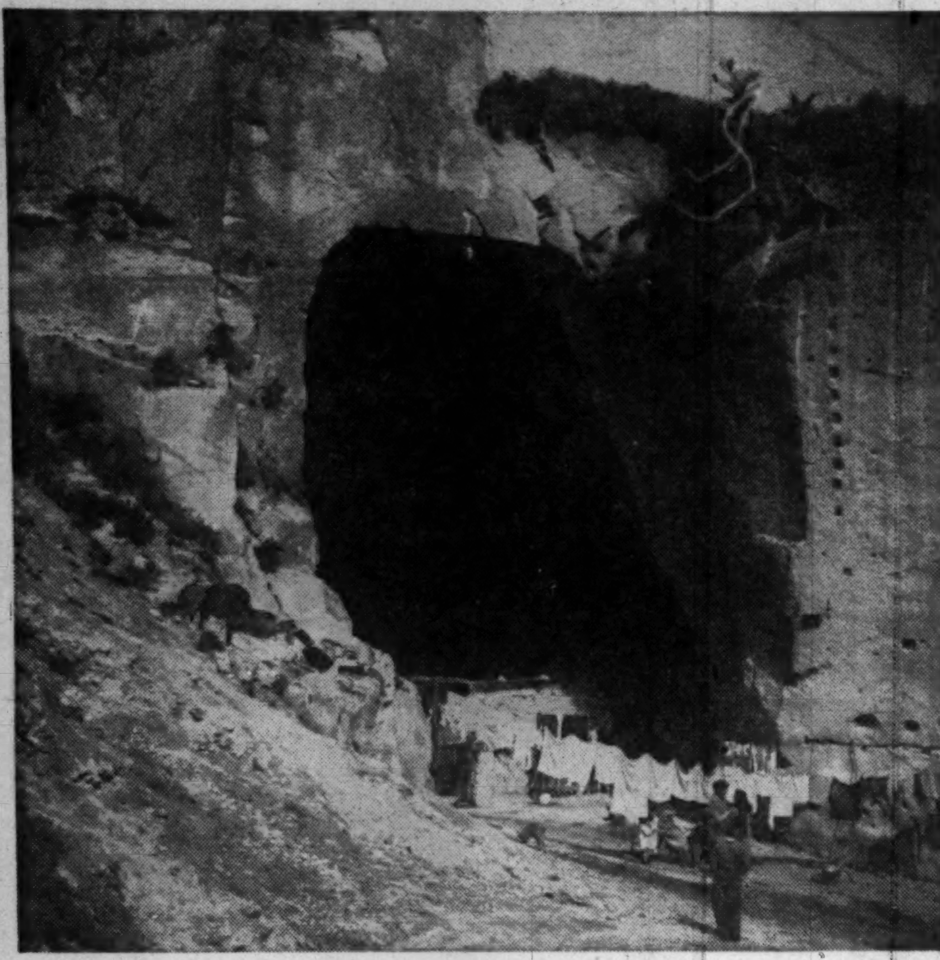
War Drove Them Underground

Naples' Cavemen Dread 'Outside'



Washday in one of Naples' large cave colonies

By Philip Clarke

Associated Press Staff Writer

NAPLES, May 22—A strange phobia has kept hundreds of Naples' cave-dwellers within their caves, afraid to venture into the city's streets.

Psychologists call it "agoraphobia"—the fear of crowded, public places.

These people prefer the dank, dark hillside caverns to which they fled when bombs and shells destroyed their homes during the war.

Many of the more than 100 caves in and around Naples were dug some 2000 years ago by men mining stones for building. Some were used as stables before the war.

Most of the younger children born in the caves still are terrified by the outside world, says tall, graying Roy A. Welker, director of the Italian Service Mission in Naples.

Shares Afflictions

WELKER, 58, is a native of Bath, Me., and a veteran of America's Congregational Christian Service Committee abroad. He has spent almost two years working to rehabilitate the most miserable of Naples' thousands of homeless war victims.

He contracted amoebic dysentry while working in the caves. Despite loss of his own vitality and energy, he has high hope for these "little people who live in the dark."

"Why, they've even developed a form of democracy," says Welker, whose slim, smiling wife works with him.

With 38 Italian, three American and two British welfare assistants, Welker and his wife are helping 59 families living in four community caves.

Each cave has appointed "chiefs" who boss community life. They are responsible for keeping the caves free of garbage and filth. They name others to help in the work.

Take Outside Jobs

"EACH cave has a representative who serves on our community board," says Welker. "The system has worked out just fine. Morale has risen considerably and the children are getting over their fear of the outside.

"We have provided better clothes for the men and many have been able to get part-time jobs. A sense of security has been reestablished in many families."

Welker's organization recently inaugurated Naples' first community housing project, known as "Friendship Village." Some of the cave people are being resettled in these barrack-type buildings.

Although Welker's budget is limited to $50,000 a year, he plans a drive for funds to build a medical clinic.

"There is a great need for medical service to care for sicknesses contracted in the caves and to treat people injured in collapse of bomb-damaged buildings," he says.

Beer's a Critical Material in Steel

China Expects More Surprises of Gen. Li

By John Roderick

Associated Press Staff Writer

NANKING, May 22.—The voice of China's new Vice President, Gen. Li Tsung-jen, grates on the ears of Chiang Kai-shek and the Kuomintang Party machine.

The wiry, florid-faced little general astonished China at the outset of his campaign by declaring he stood for reforms—not paper reforms but real ones.

General Li also made it evident he was willing to trade punches with the ruling cliques of the Kuomintang, which have run China for 20 years.

China's millions, who rarely hear such talk, waited for the slaughter of the upstart.

Then came the National Assembly. It selected Chiang as China's first constitutional President. That was expected.

Then it rejected Sun Fo, Kuomingtang regular, and elected General Li to the vice presidency. That was unexpected.

The 58-year-old Vice President comes from the peasantry of South China—Kwangsi Province. As a boy he worked on a farm, managed to educate himself, became a teacher and finally joined the army.

In the army Li made important friendships, notably with Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, now China's Defense Minister. Eventually Li became military overlord of Kwangsi Province.

Early connections with the Kuomintang and Chiang Kai-shek brought Li additional power. He gained more stature by commanding the punitive expedition against China's northern warlords in 1926.

Li sprang back into the news in 1938 when he started a revolt against Chiang's failure to resist the invading Japanese vigorously. This move led to a stiffening of Nanking's anti-Japanese stand and brought Li back as an active soldier.

Li is a quiet man of simple tastes. As a politician he has been called a liberal by friends and a Communist by his enemies. He is neither.

His closest friends say Li long has been impatient with the present government. He has been heard to express anger at government corruption and do-nothingness. He asserts it plays into Communist hands.

Li proposes that the government fight Communist fire with fire by putting into practice a land redistribution program, which now is the main Communist weapon in winning over the peasantry.

Li also insists the Kuomintang has elements of feudalism in it. He wants a housecleaning in the party from top to bottom.

The charges that he has Communist support were made in the heat of the bitter electioneering for the vice presidency. In the general opinion here, the charge is wide of the mark.

Most observers believe the chances of an open break between Li and Chiang are remote. The Communist menace makes such a step too dangerous for all concerned.

Between-Conventions Session Is Possible

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

A SPECIAL "in between conventions" session of Congress became a definite possibility last week.

Fact is, the June 19 adjournment drive has hit the worst legislative snafu in years.

With the Republican National Convention only one month away, all of the "must" legislation is piling up. Trouble is, what is "must" to the Senate isn't always "must" to the House, and vice versa. In a Republican Congress, what is "must" to the President doesn't matter very much.

Tentative plans called for Congress to complete all of its work by June 19, get out of Washington and stay out. That left barely enough time for Republicans to catch their June 21 convention in Philadelphia. Democrats, convening in the same city July 12, were not in nearly so much of a hurry

Priority on Results

THIS week, House and Senate Republican leaders will meet in one of their rare, full-dress, bicameral conferences to decide what to do about it. A few of them are still pulling the June 19 whistle. Some of the others think it isn't nearly so important to catch the adjournment train as to round out a program on which the party can run.

The "between conventions" plan, gaining more and more supporters, calls for a recess June 19, as planned, but a return to Washington June 28, after the Republican convention. Congress then would put in two more weeks of solid work before the Democratic meet.

Proponents of the encore session say there's one major political objection, from the Republican viewpoint, however. Any GOP platform approved at Philadelphia, designed mostly for campaign use, might come home to roost during the fortnight's return engagement. Democrats might demand that a still sitting Republican Congress enact the GOP platform into law.

That could be embarrassing politically. It could even stretch that two-week "between conventions" session into a summer-long ordeal.

* * * *

Lagging in Stretch

COME adjournment time, Congress has a way of getting all tangled up in its own bills and finally leaving town with many on the hook. But seldom in recent years has it jammed so badly on the big ones.

After a fast start on international measures, it is lagging at the finish line. A bare beginning has been made on defense measures. In the field of social legislation, Congress has completed practically nothing to take to the voters.

On the international list, it has passed ERP but hasn't budged appropriations for it. A Senate-passed resolution authorizing United States membership in the World Health Organization was House-blocked for 11 months but has now cleared the Rules Committee. A resolution to strengthen the U. N. is starting to move. But the 14-year-old reciprocal trade program, on which the State Department staked much of its western Europe planning, will get only a one-year extension with the President's tariff powers cut back, in a leadership-blessed slow starter.

Aerial Achievement

THE congressional defense record to date consists chiefly in stepping up the Air Force to a 70-group basis and approving appropriations to get it started. But the big War and Navy appropriation bills, carrying the bulk of defense costs, haven't reached either house. Universal military training has practically been ruled out by the House leadership even though there's a UMT bill on the House calendar and the Senate Armed Services Committee has blended it with the draft. Even the straight draft bill is getting rough treatment in the House Rules Committee.

But the most serious tieup is over domestic measures and it will take a near miracle to break it. Only two big domestic bills have been enacted, the Republican tax cut and rent control extension. The Senate-passed Taft-Wagner-Ellender housing bill is running into the same sort of House opposition it had last session, when it died with the Congress. The Senate-passed Federal aid to education bill is in a similar House stalemate. It's a safe bet both houses will pass farm price support legislation, but time's crowding in.

In fact, Congress would have to shake or break a leg to jam through in a month the already "programmed" measures Republican leaders of both houses agree are "must." That list is growing.

Besides, there's the little matter of a Southern Senate filibuster against civil rights legislation. Whether on antilynching legislation, still locked up in a Senate committee, or on the antipoll tax bill, now on the Senate calendar, it's coming.

Republicans are determined to make a civil rights showing. The Southern Senators, who have broken with their President on the same theme, are equally determined to stop it. But the row will cut at least a week out of that already crowded last month.

However you figure it, it looks more and more like a special jam session, with fireworks still popping on the Fourth of July.

South Looks West

THAT won't-be-downed "Draft Eisenhower" talk is now coming from the Alabama delegation to the Democratic convention.

Alabama, the first State alphabetically on the convention roll, is in a strategic spot and knows it.

First idea was to toss Eisenhower's name into the convention at the outset, without consulting the general, and touch off a "spontaneous" demonstration that wouldn't stop until he was nominated.

Hitch in the spontaneity angle is that Alabama doesn't want to be stuck like it was with those "24 votes for Underwood."

Now Alabama agents are [illegible] ing soundings in some of the big Northern and Western delegations, notably New York and Illinois. But mostly they will watch the President's Westward-Ho tour.

The President's reception on that Western trip, from Democratic politicians as well as trainside audiences, "will either make or break him," say the Southern king-makers.

No, the anti-Truman Southerners haven't entirely given up the notion that Mr. Truman might volunteer to step out.

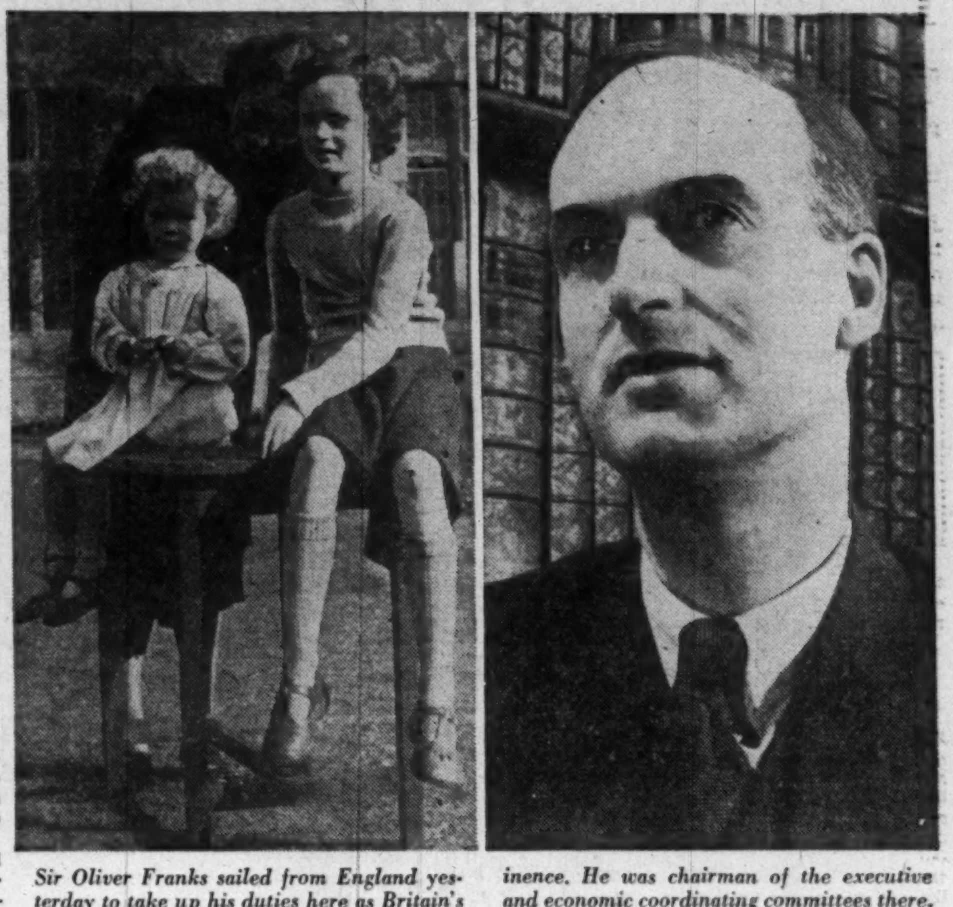
A Scholar Will Watch a Pipeline



Sir Oliver Franks sailed from England yesterday to take up his duties here as Britain's new Ambassador to the United States. His arrival will be timely, for it coincides with the American beginnings of the European Recovery Program. And it was the 16-nation Paris Conference on the Marshall Plan last summer that gave him international prominence. He was chairman of the executive and economic coordinating committees there. Above are new pictures of Sir Oliver and his family. Left, Lady Franks and daughters, Alison 3, and Caroline 8, in the garden of the Queen's College, Oxford. Russian Victory Single-Handed

Red Colonel 'Wins War' With Odd Figures

By Marshall Andrews

By the United Press

AMERICANS who thought their country did a pretty good job in the last war, which they assumed was won by the cooperation of the Allied world, should read an article in the Soviet Information Bulletin for May 12.

Or should they?

This article, by one Col. N. Nikiforov, is woven about the theme that United States and British aid had no real effect on Russia's war effort; that Russia fought practically singlehanded and that Russia's 1945 offensive "prevented the rout" of the Western Allies. All that, of course, is sheer nonsense.

Colonel Nikiforov suggests it would "be well to recall the facts," which would "make unnecessary further comment." That is a good suggestion; it is too bad Colonel Nikiforov did not follow it himself.

'Incidental' Assistance

HE SAYS THE United States and Britain throughout the war supplied Russia with some 10,000 tanks and "nearly as many" guns and aircraft. Annual Soviet production, he continues, averaged more than 30,000 tanks and self-propelled guns, 40,000 aircraft, 120,000 guns and 100,000 mortars. Thus, he says, the Allies supplied only 5 to 6 per cent of the total arms produced in Russia and only 4 per cent of other materials.

While Colonel Nikiforov concedes this aid was "necessary and useful" in Russia's "almost singlehanded" war with Germany, he insists it "never played any decisive nor even significant role."

As a matter of fact, by December 31, 1945, the United States had supplied Russia with lend-lease supplies valued at $11,141,470,000, in addition to unknown amounts of food and clothing sent over by private charity. It would be tiresome and useless to detail all these items, but some of them should be studied.

During the war, the United States sent Russia 375,883 trucks, enough to motorize the transport of 700 infantry divisions or 350 divisions plus 1814 truck companies. The Red Army rolled on American wheels, and to keep them rolling America sent 3,786,000 of the tires its own forces needed so badly. In addition, the British, terribly hard up as they were, sent Russia 4020 trucks and 72,000 tires.

This country supplied Russia with 51,503 jeeps, 35,170 motorcycles and, to a nation supposedly rich in natural resources, 2,670,000 tons of petroleum products. The 10,000 tanks Colonel Nikiforov says Russia got were actually 12,274, enough to equip 47 armored division; 7056 of these were supplied by the United States and 5218 by Britain.

Double His Figure

INSTEAD OF THE 10,000 aircraft Colonel Nikiforov says the Allies sent Russia, the United States and Britain really supplied 22,206 and these were chiefly fighters, which Russia had neglected in favor of ground-support types, and large bombers and cargo airplanes, which she had never learned to build.

And, getting back to earth, the United States supplied the Red Army with 15,417,000 pairs of military boots, 106,893,000 yards of cotton cloth, 62,485,000 yards of wool cloth and, for some reason, $1,647,000 worth of buttons. In addition, America sent 4,478,000 tons of food, a task made more difficult by Russia's insistence on butter instead of oleomargarine and on loaf sugar instead of granulated because they liked to suck their British tea through it.

Whatever Russia's domestic production of munitions may have been (and nobody knows exactly because Russia won't tell), it would not have been possible without other major contributions from this country and Britain. Of the materials which went into those Soviet-built tanks, guns and aircraft, the United States and Britain supplied 2,800,000 tons of steel and 874,000 tons of nonferrous metals. Much of all the metal was prefabricated and much of the steel already had been rolled into armor plate.

And one of the strangest features of this strange transaction, which Colonel Nikiforov now says didn't really happen, was that the United States sent Russia half a billion dollars in machine tools, electric furnaces and generators, and whole factories lifted bodily from their sites and transported to Russia. These factories included a complete tire plant, an aluminum rolling mill and pipe fabricating mills.

Russian radar was American and British, much Russian radio was from the same source and Soviet commissars practiced saying "niet" over 1,280,000 miles of telephone wire supplied by her Western Allies. The inadequate Russian transportation system was bolstered by 1981 American locomotives and 11,155 American freight cars, while rolling stock in the United States deteriorated alarmingly without replacement. To make it worse, this rolling stock for Russia was all broad gauge, requiring special construction.

Oregon Stems The Tide

Oregon appears to have put a serious crimp in Harold E. Stassen's hopes. It is not only that Governor Dewey has captured that State's 12 votes in the Philadelphia convention that will nominate the Republican candidate for the Presidency. In this last dramatic contest before the convention the New Yorker has also captured a psychological inside track. "The rising tide of public opinion" on which which Mr. Stassen had laid so much emphasis appears to have broken on the hard rocks of personal combat.

There are some indications that Mr. Stassen foresaw the trend against him in Oregon. One commentator expressed the belief before the ballots were cast that it was desperation which drove Mr. Stassen to accuse "a combined opposition," meaning Governor Dewey and Senator Taft, of spending $250,000 to defeat him in Oregon. This gave Mr. Dewey a chance to strike back by saying that Mr. Stassen knew his accusation to be false. The results tend to confirm the believe that this reckless charge hurt rather than helped the former Minnesota Governor. Certainly it will count against him in terms of increased animosity from the Taft and Dewey forces in the convention, and Mr. Stassen's invasion of Senator Taft's home State left him no margin of good will to lose.

While Governor Dewey's prospects have been notably improved, there are still formidable obstacles in his path. According to the count made by the Associated Press, he now has 146 delegates pledged, favorable or claimed without dispute. This is nearly twice the number pledged to Mr. Stassen and more than twice as many as can be counted definitely for Senator Taft. But the votes on which Mr. Dewey can rely are only slightly more than a fourth of the 548 required for nomination. The 12 votes he has garnered in Oregon from a fierce three weeks of campaigning do not loom very large beside the handicap of his defeat in 1944 now taht he is pitted against several other strong contenders.

The secret of the Republican convention is still locked up in the minds of more than 500 uncommitted delegates and various political bigwigs behind them. With so much floating strength, there is always a possibility of stampeding the convention, as Wendell Willkie did in 1940. If Mr. Stassen could have continued the sweep that he started in Wisconsin and Nebraska, he might have had a good chance to duplicate that feat. Now it seems more probable that the convention will settle down to a stiff fight between powerful rivals—a fight that is likely to enhance the chances of the strongest noncampaigning candidate, Senator Vandenberg.

First-Class Army

For all the good fun they had at the expense of the Army's general classification test Wednesday, Representatives Clarence Brown and Walter G. Andrews helped spread a serious misconception about armed forces induction standards. Mr. Brown tried out part of the test on Mr. Andrews during a House Rules Committee hearing on selective service to see whether Mr. Andrews could qualify for "the new Army." Mr. Andrews found himself unable offhand to define such words as "torsion" and "recondite" or to figure how many degrees are contained in 10 per cent of a circle. Therefore, Mr. Andrews concluded, he had flunked the test. When Representative Kilday interposed that the Army says any fifth-grade student can pass the test, Mr. Brown objected because he, too, could not answer the questions.

Actually, of course, few persons could answer all the questions on the classification test within the time allotted. The purpose of the test is to classify relative adaptability and learning ability; and it is obvious that if a perfect score were required for passing there would be no way of measuring abilities beyond the passing mark. The score of 80—which, incidentally, is not 80 per cent—is the mark below which applicants are judged undesirable for military duty.

Clearly the Congressmen have misunderstood these facts. The danger in such misunderstanding is that it plays into the hands of persons such as Chairman Leo Allen of the Rules Committee who seem determined to pigeonhole the draft at all costs. Mr. Allen has come forward with a facile and to our mind evasionary scheme for substituting an enlistment bonus for the draft. He now says—for what reason it is hard to fathom unless he intends to force his own proposal—that draft legislation could "very easily" be returned to the Armed Services Committee for rewriting. In other words, Mr. Allen sets himself up as an expert and presumes to pass on a matter to which the Armed Services Committee already has given great attention and in which the House as a whole has a paramount interest. We cannot believe that Mr. Allen's colleagues will support either his stalling or the second-rate military establishment that would result from lowering induction standards.

Eternal Vigilance

Let us all hail the vigilance of Michigan's Representative Fred L. Crawford. He discovered that the 22-year-old daughter of John C. Virden, an assistant to the Secretary of Commerce and director of the Office of Industry Cooperation, is employed as a teletype operator by the Tass News Agency in Washington. Acting at once to protect the United States from this imaginary threat to its security, he made public a letter calling upon the Secretary of Commerce to demand Mr. Virden's resignation forthwith.

It happens that Mr. Virden is an eminent and respected Cleveland industrialist whose work at the Department of Commerce has entailed considerable financial sacrifice to himself. Born in Montgomery, Ala., he prepared for the subversion of which Mr. Crawford suspects him by enlistment in the Aviation Corps during World War I and service as regional director of the War Production Board in Cleveland during World War II. In 1946, he was central commissioner for Europe, Office of Foreign Liquidation Commissioner. He is a member of the Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce and of the International Chamber of Commerce. Replying to Representative Crawford, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer had this to say about Mr. Virden:

> He is competent, honest and experienced. If he decides for any reason to sever his connection with Government service, it will be a distinct loss to the public. He himself has never by any act or word indicated the slightest interest in or sympathy with any Communist organization or group, or with the Communist ideology . . . He disagrees violently with his daughter's decision, has undertaken unsuccessfully to persuade her to follow a different course, and has had no contact with her for several months. It is obvious, however, that the exposure of this difficult family situation by the publication of your letter presents a problem to Mr. Virden which is nothing short of tragic. I shall ask him to remain, but if he feels that he does not wish to have his personal family affairs the subject of further public discussion I shall acquiesce in his decision.

Mr. Virden chose not to remain. Mr. Crawford's vigilance has thus cost the United States a devoted public servant. The Government may also lose the services of other able men loathe to expose themselves to this sort of defamation. Mr. Virden can be considered guilty of nothing more than a misfortune; apparently his daughter, like the offspring of certain other noted capitalist entrepreneurs, has tasted the wine of rebellion at an age when it is somewhat to heady for her. Men who are more charitable than Mr. Crawford, especially men with children of their own, may be forgiven if they depart from the harsh totalitarian rule of visiting the sins of the children upon their fathers—may be forgiven even if they hope that this unhappy father and daughter will be reconciled. Still, Mr. Crawford's vigilance, like Mrs. Grundy's, must be acknowledged. As for the meanness of mind that could so play upon another's personal troubles, perhaps the less said the better. Eternal viligance is, to be sure, the price of liberty. But so is tolerance and a modicum of common sense.

Miss Kellem's Revolt

Miss Vivien Kellem, head of a Westport, Conn., concern manufacturing cable-grips, is in the limelight again owing to her refusal to collect withholding taxes from her employes. The Government has won the first round in the battle with the recalcitrant industrialist by clapping a lien on her bank account and collecting the amount due, plus a 100 per cent penalty and $10 in interest.

The sum involved is small and it is quite likely that Miss Kellem considers it a small price to pay for the privilege of getting her name before the public as she has done on numerous occasions in recent years. We think, however, that in this particular instance she has called attention to an issue of real importance. She maintains that the law compelling employers to withhold employe taxes is "unjust and tyrannical in concept" and unconstitutional. Although dissenting from these views, we do think there is ground for legitimate protest against a system that compels employers to act as tax collectors for the Government without compensation.

The withholding tax method of tax collection undoubtedly serves a most useful purpose; it not only reduces losses to the Government from tax evasion, but it affords protection to those improvident employes who used to be confronted with tax bills for which they had made no provision in their budgets. It also benefits employers to have their employes relieved from demoralizing financial embarrassments resulting from inability to meet tax payments.

However, there is another side to the picture that cannot be lightly dismissed. That is the burden laid on the accounting departments of many firms by the multiple levies that now have to be withheld by employers. The withholding taxes and the old age insurance levies are the chief impositions of this nature. To them are added in many cases withholdings under contracts with unions of membership dues, and levies for group insurance. And in course of time, no doubt, other levies of a similar character will be required in connection with expansion of social security benefits. As a result, payroll computations that were once fairly simple have become quite complicated, adding substantially to operating expenses of many firms.

All of these payments are highly desirable, and there is no intention of suggesting that the system of collection should be changed or the benefits curtailed. But a question does arise as to the propriety and justice of compelling employers to bear the entire costs of extra labor involved in withholding payments imposed by law on their employes. Since the Government would have to incur extra expense if those levies had to be collected directly from millions of workers, it is pertinent to ask whether employers are not entitled to some compensation for the additional expense involved in the collection-at-source system. Miss Kellem's spectacular antics should not divert public attention from the really serious question at issue.

Nationalization

If Britain calls a halt to the industrial nationalization program of the Labor Party government, as reports indicate, it by no means follows that the threat to industrial progress stemming from overrapid transformation of private into public industries will be removed. As a matter of fact, the nationalization of a few large industries of a monopolistic character does not act as an impediment to increased production unless the nationalized industries are managed so inefficiently as to deprive privately owned and operated industries of essential services.

The greatest danger now confronting British industry stems rather from restrictive laws and regulations that destroy the incentive to achieve maximum and marketable production. For instance, the Labor Party is said to be considering a wages and tax program designed to give the workers a larger share of the national income as a substitute for an expansion of the nationalization program. The Government has already imposed what amounts to a capital levy on income from investments. It is supposedly a onetime exaction, but its effect is to alarm would-be investors and discourage saving. Now former Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton is reported to have hinted that the threat of nationalization would be used to bring down prices in industries where profits are considered excessive.

What does he mean? Prices on foodstuffs are already held down by subsidies, at heavy cost to the Treasury, while a complicated system of priorities and rationing imposes severe checks on individual initiative. Many of these controls are an unavoidable consequence of Britain's postwar poverty that has forced her to resort to extraordinary measures to conserve scarce resources, limit imports and stimulate exports. But these deficiencies call for a concerted effort on the part of all classes to achieve maximum production, and that aim will be thwarted if costs are pushed up by labor demands for an ever-increasing share of a limited output—at a time, too, when it is generally admitted that on the whole the average worker enjoys a higher standard of living than he did before the war.

Since the United States is making a heavy contribution to Britain's industrial recovery, Administrator Hoffman will no doubt have a difficult problem to face in handling British demands for ECA allocations. A mere halting of the nationalization program does not make that problem any easier. On the contrary, he might find it even more difficult to decide where to draw the line between essential and nonessential aid if the present Labor government were to embark on a more ambitious program of distributist reform tending to undermine the foundations of private capitalistic enterprises that are already handicapped by high taxes and multiple governmental controls. Our help is intended to subsidize self-help, but there is no self-help discernible in the current threat, which would emphasize division at the expense of multiplication.

Fidelity Rewarded

Washington has been extremely fortunate in the caliber of men who have been named to its Municipal Court of Appeals. Since its establishment in 1942 this tribunal has made an excellent record both in the prompt disposition of cases and in the judicial quality of its decisions. Its high standing is a personal recommendation to each of its three members. President Truman was no doubt delighted, therefore, to nominate Judge Andrew McCaughrin Hood for a second six-year term on the Municipal Appeals bench, and it is reasonable to assume that the Senate will find equal satisfaction in confirming the nomination. We feel certain also that the bar and the people who have become acquainted with Judge Hood's thoughtful, scholarly and judicially tempered work will add their hearty approval.

THE MANDMAN SINGS

There is no time for serenades of madness
A man of hungry eyes and fevered brain
Leads blinded flecks to caverns of great sadness
Where melodies are haunting and insane.

Poor sheep. Stone walls alone can hear their bleating,
And stone holds jealously their frightened cries
Within the cave's great gloom. The shadows meeting
Tremble on the madman's melodies.

The song was born in bleak and barren places:
The lifeless room, the lonesomeness of night,
The memory of sharp accusing faces,
The phantoms in the unforgiving light.

Now through the groaning belly of the darkness
The madman sings. He grins and weaves his head.

Within the cavern's overladen starkness
About the madmen's feet the sheep are dead.

Guild Minority

The Washington Post of May 18, carried an account of the action of the Washington Newspaper Guild's executive board in maintaining that the discharge of a reporter by the Washington Star for holding membership in the Communist Party could not be resisted as a breach of contract.

There was a quotation from the discharged employe which tended to make it appear that the action of the executive board was directly contrary to the wishes of the membership. Any such impression is erroneous.

A general membership meeting was said, by the discharged employe, to have voted 6 to 1 to recommend that the executive board take up the discharge of Thomas Buchanan. This is not correct. The vote was, as a matter of fact, very close.

What was not stated, also, was there were only about 40 out of some 1000 members at the meeting, not even a legal quorum. The point of no quorum was not raised; therefore, of course, the meeting could take action.

Unfortunately, in unions, as in other organizations of our democracy, voters tend to become lethargic about the performance of their citizenship duties. At this particular meeting, the well-disciplined minority to which the discharged employe belongs was, as always, out in force.

Members of the executive board are aware, however, of how little this minority of approximately 25 or 30 persons speaks for the membership of 1000. When the board was directed to inquire into the discharge, board members consulted widely with members of units they represent. The vote of the executive board actually reflects the sentiments of the majority of the Guild members in Washington.

In all fairness it must be stated that the vote on the WNG executive board refusing to process the discharge as a grievance was 5 to 4. The five-member majority, however, represented the three largest units in Washington, while the four—none of whom is a Communist sympathizer—represented a much smaller proportion of the local's membership.

This letter is simply in the interest of accuracy, so that in the future the entire Washington Newspaper Guild won't be represented as favoring Buchanan's defense by 6 to 1. The writer, not out of any sympathy for communism, but for other reasons, would not have concurred in the action of the executive board, but the writer is certain that the action has the approval of the great majority of the Washington Newspaper Guild. To The Rescue!

News to cause to rise the gorge of all loyal Americans has appeared on the front page of your paper of May 17. I refer to an item concerning the cowardly seduction of a U. S. Army sergeant by a Soviet woman operative. This not only indicates a qualitative change in the cold war (increase of temperature) but also marks a shift into a field in which the Russians are peculiarly well organized.

Your readers may not be aware of several significant facts: (1) as a consequence of their well-known ruthlessness in fighting the Germans, the Russians have several million surplus women; (2) the head of the Soviet cosmetic trust is (or at least was) none other than the wife of Foreign Minister Molotov, showing the close linkage between foreign policy and domestic practice.

All, however, is not lost. The following steps, if promptly undertaken by the U. S., will offer some hope of staving off a Russian victory. It is clear, in the first place, that adequate indoctrination of our Foreign Service personnel is essential. I propose that Mr. Adolphe Menjou and Miss Ginger Rogers be co-opted by the State Department as cultural advisers, and I further propose, as an advisory committee on intelligence, Messrs. Alsop, Coty, Lelong, Kinsey, and Max Factor, who will coordinate, evaluate, and disseminate intelligence on the capabilities and probable strategic intentions of potential enemies of the U. S.

It is clear also that prompt counterattack must be made. A theater command should be set up in Paris, under the Western Union, with provision for rehabilitation of forward diplomatic personnel and facilities to serve as a staging area for Hollywood personnel en route to active combat. Among the latter forces, may I suggest diversionary battalions led by Messrs. Gable, Young, Andrews, Power, et al.

There is not a moment to lose! The safety of free enterprise is at stake! Let every Amercian do his duty! CINCINNATUS.

UPWA Housecleaning

A salute to Mrs. Clements for her stand at the United Public Workers convention!

Maybe her action will hasten the day when the Federal and State workers' so-called labor union will become one in reality. I mean by that, an organization whose principal object will be to safeguard the interests of its members.

My own unhappy experience as a member of the UPWA is typical of many. After joining up, some year or so ago, I was informed that my immediate "union activity" was to take part in picketing the Spanish Embassy. This, and also the left handed support of a foreign power at the Atlantic City convention, was too much for me.

So, more power to you, Mrs. Clements! Here's hoping that your action will result in a housecleaning, and that very soon.

Covenant Decision

Having read the decision of the Supreme Court invalidating covenants restricting the sale of real estate to Negroes, I am writing to refer to a constitutional inhibition reading substantially as follows: Congress or the States shall pass no ex-post facto law or bill of attainder that will vitiate the terms of a contract.

If the legislative branch of the Government and General Assemblies of the States are prohibited from enacting laws which vitiate contracts previously made, what power has the Supreme Court to vitiate the terms of a contract which Congress has not the right to enact?

Britain And Middle East War

Spokesmen for our Government have stated on several occasions that the United States was most anxious to avoid an armed conflict in the Middle East because of the possibility that this might lead to Russian infilltration into the Middle East and or a third World War.

When the Arab states threatened to bring about such a conflict if the U. N. Palestine partition plan were implemented, the United States, anxious to avoid war, attempted to have a substitute trusteeship plan imposed on Palestine in place of partition—at the cost of greatly weakening the prestige of the U. N. and itself.

Assuming—despite the statement by Defense Secretary Forrestal that Middle Eastern oil would be inaccessible to the United States in the event of war—that Arab friendship could not be risked for the sake of the integrity of the U. N. or the United States, nevertheless, events of the last few days have shown that the real culprit in the Middle East—the nation which is backing the very war our Government so greatly feared and ardently sought to prevent—is one which is practically dependent upon us, Great Britain.

This is obvious in the light of Britain's energetic opposition to United States proposals in the Security Council to bring an end to Arab invasions of Palestine, coupled with the declaration by the Foreign Office that Britain would continue to supply the Arab League states with arms and ammunition, and to allow its officers to lead the Trans-Jordan Arab Legion which is now attacking the Holy City and Jewish communities in other parts of Palestine.

It seems, therefore, that in view of American desire for peace in Palestine, Arab dependency upon Britain for arms, ammunition and officers, and British dependency upon the United States for dollars the logical thing for our Government to do would be to freeze the credits allocated to Great Britain under the European Recovery Act until she agrees to cut off her financial and military support of Arab aggressor nations and to withdraw all those British officers who have been assigned to the Trans-Jordan Arab Legion.

We read that England will continue to send armaments and financial assistance to the Arabs until the Untied Nations Security Council orders the cessation of hostilities in Palestine. Yet England is using her voice on the Council to prevent any such action by that body. The argument by the British delegate that the United Nations cannot enforce any decision to stop the Arab invasion of Israel, if accepted by that organization, is sufficient reason for the U. N. to close shop and send the delegates to their respective homes.

Despite England's open and active support of the aggressors, the United States continues its embargo on war materials to the Near East—to maintain neutrality. If the Administration continues to maintain the embargo against Israel in the name of neutrality, then, in all fairness and justice, the embargo should be broadened to prevent all shipments of war materials and all further granting of credits and financial assistance to Great Britain.

In order not to make its recognition of the state of Israel an empty gesture, the United States should lift its embargo on shipment of arms to Israel to give that new nation an opportunity to resist the aggression of the invading Arab armies supported by Great Britain.

Diplomacy Or Propaganda

By Andre Visson

The Great Confusion

NEVER since the end of the war has it been more difficult to draw the line of demarcation between diplomacy and propaganda. Whatever may have been the ultimate objectives of the Soviet "peace offensive," the confusion that has been created in the minds of the people in the United States, and even more in Europe, is the immediate result of the Soviet campaign.

It is no exaggeration to say that the main effort of American policy-makers now is to make it clear to American public opinion, and especially to that of western Europe, that the foreign policy of a country should never be confused with its propaganda. Moreover, it is felt in Washington official circles that it would be most unfortunate if American policy were bent on propaganda. This would certainly be contrary to all American tradition.

Americans, who are the world's best salesmen, and who have made of advertising both an industry and an art, have not been successful in "selling" their own country to the world. It would be still more difficult for Americans to sell their foreign policy to foreigners. There is a natural trend among American policy-makers to consider American foreign policy so honest and so disinterested that it ought to speak for itself.

This explains why so many people in official circles here were shocked to learn that the British and the French resented the secrecy of the statement which Ambassador Bedell Smith made to Molotov. And this also explains why these same people refuse to believe that our friends in western Europe can really be confused by the Soviet propaganda.

AMERICAN diplomacy has succeeded in reestablishing confidence in the integrity of our intentions in both London and Paris, where for 24 hours there was strong suspicion that we were preparing to enter into bilateral negotiations with Moscow, in which we might have sacrificed the interests of our western European allies. But the harm done by the Soviet propaganda campaign—especially by Stalin's answer to Henry Wallace's "open letter"—unfortunately appears greater than we like to believe.

A quick survey of the European press and radio confirms this unfortunate impression. The London Times praises Mr. Marshall for being honest and loyal to the free countries, but says that with his answer to Wallace, Stalin is making the most of the tactical advantage he gained by Moscow's disclosure of the exchange of statements between Ambassador Bedell Smith and Molotov.

In France, the opinions expressed in most of the moderate and Rightist papers reveal that the Soviet peace offensive has found a certain psychological, if not political, response. The moderate Intransigeant describes Stalin's reply as "a remarkable document which once more proves the diplomatic mastery of the Russian leaders . . . Official Washington circles are embarrassed and with good reason. Whether the United States Government replies or not, Stalin will be the winner and Mr. Truman the loser."

The moderate France Soir states that "Washington does not believe in the USSR peace offensive," but adds that the United States Government will be placed "in a false position in the eyes of world opinion," and reminds that the Soviet campaign "causes great upheaval in world opinion and its success must be measured in terms of propaganda."

The conservative Le Monde (which the Soviets usually accuse of being the mouthpiece of France's ruling "200 families") this time brings comfort and even aid to the Soviet propagandists by writing that while Stalin's reply will probably serve Wallace's campaign, "it goes beyond the electoral field and the offer it contains is too serious to be viewed solely as a maneuver."

THIS APPEARS to be the state of mind that the Soviet propaganda has succeeded in creating in western Europe. It is to be regretted, but it cannt be ignored. It is not easy, however, to dispel the propaganda fog which has beclouded the Soviet peace offensive. American foreign policy-makers rightly refuse to make America's foreign policy dependent on every Soviet smile or frown. But at the same time they recognize that they cannot ignore the people's reactions to Soviet maneuvers, however wrong these reactions may be. Moreover, they themselves feel the urge to dissipate the Soviet propaganda fog in order to be able to get at the real Soviet objectives.

There can be no doubt that aside from the Soviet desire to create confusion, the men in the Kremlin pursue other and more important objectives on the diplomatic level. There are many indications that they they are willing to resume talks with the western powers because they believe they now have a good bargaining position.

There are, however, no indications as yet that the Soviets are willing to give convincing proof of their supposedly better intentions or of their alleged disposition to make the indispensable concessions. And there is a definite feeling in Washington that without such convincing proof, it would be useless, and even dangerous, to resume talks which have been so disappointing in the last three years.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Forrestal 'Raids' Irk Colleagues

By Drew Pearson

A SIGNIFICANT argument has broken out inside the Truman Cabinet—with Defense Secretary Forrestal in the center.

At a Cabinet meeting two weeks ago, Forrestal suddenly suggested that the President appoint a special commission to investigate the Nation's oil resources. This comes under the Interior Department, which made an oil survey last summer and was the first to warn of the impending oil and gasoline shortage.

However, without consulting Interior Secretary Krug, Forrestal blurted out his demand for a new survey, this time under his own National Security Resources Board.

Not much more was said in Cabinet, but later other Cabinet members began comparing notes and accusing Forrestal of raiding their departments. They don't like Forrestal's constant drive to put civilian duties under his brass hat.

Mr. Wiggins' Cabbage

BUMPTIOUS Harold Knutson, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, delights in browbeating Administration witnesses at tax hearings. But he got a dose of his own medicine when Treasury Undersecretary A. Lee Wiggins testified behind closed doors the other night.

The scholarly South Carolinian, former president of the American Bankers Association, registered a strong protest against "loopholes" in a revised tax bill which the committee had written. It almost seemed to go out of its way to provide benefits for inheritance, gift and other upper-bracket taxpayers.

"I hope," said Wiggins, "the statement I am about to make will be received in the spirit it is offered.

"The Treasury wants to cooperate in every way possible with this committee, but if too many of these inequities are included in the tax bill when it goes to the White House, I shall feel no restraint in advising the President not to sign it."

Knutson's face would have stopped traffic on Pennsylvania ave. Angrily he gaveled the meeting to a close.

"The Treasury witnesses will return tomorrow," he roared, "without pistols! I will not be threatened by the Administration while this committee is writing tax legislation."

How Israel Was Recognized

VARIOUS people played important backstage roles in switching President Truman away from his earlier Forrestal-dominated position against Palestine. One was Eddie Jacobson, Truman's old haberdashery partner in Kansas City, who was brought to Washington by Frank Goldman of Lowell, Mass., head of B'nai B'rith. Together with Maurice Bisgyer of the same organization, they had several talks with Truman.

Another who talked with the President just one day before he recognized Israel was venerable Congressman Sol Bloom, New York Democrat, who advised:

"Jump in fast with recognition, Mr. President. Don't wait for Russia and her satellite states to recognize. They are sure to do it, but don't let them do it first."

The next day Truman acted. In fact, he acted so fast that he had to tip off the Jewish Agency to send him a request for recognition so he could act on it. The agency hadn't even had time to make a formal request.

One for Pauley

PAUL SMITH, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, lost out on becoming a United States commissioner to the South Pacific because his newspaper criticized Ed Pauley. However, Smith is the first to praise the man who took his place—Prof. Felix Keesing of Stanford University.

During the war, says Smith, Keesing served as an expert adviser on the South Pacific for the Office of Strategic Services, has been Samoan adviser for the United Nations, understands the native problems and, is a man of outstanding ability. Other people say the same.

So it looks as if this was one time when Ed Pauley's politics weren't so bad for the country.

Postponing the Surgery

REPUBLICAN Congressmen virtually admit in private that the one-year extension of Cordell Hull's trade treaties is a sham.

They are too shrewd politically to kill reciprocal trade treaties. The system is too popular with too many people. But the extension will give them a chance to perform a wholesale surgical job on the program next spring, when, they hope, a GOP President will be sitting in the White House.

Meanwhile the trade program comes to a halt, for no country is going to sign up on a one-year basis. It takes six to nine months to negotiate a treaty.

Diner-Out Truman

THERE was a time when the President of the United States never dined out. This was a rule in the Coolidge and Hoover era, for if he dined out once he slighted a lot of other people who wanted him to grace their dinner tables.

With Harry Truman it's different. President Truman dines out so much that people wisecrack that it looks as if Mrs. Truman hasn't got a cook.

Truman loves getting away to parties and small dinners. The other evening, for instance, a Cadillac pulled up in from of the modest home of William M. Boyle, jr., and out stepped the President, the First Lady and daughter Margaret.

The occasion was a family style dinner given by the man who was Truman's assistant when he was first elected to the Senate. Now Boyle is back in private law practice.

as small a fragment of Russia's own production as Colonel Nikiforov says it did, it represented man-hours, money and raw materials which would have come from the Russian war effort without it. And if its effect on the war was as negligible as Colonel Nikiforov says it was, Russia's accepting it while the need of her allies was so great is reprehensible beyond words.

These facts must be considered against the background of what was taking place outside Russia. The United States began lend-lease shipments to Russia in November, 1941, at the height of her own preparation for the war ahead. Once in the war, the United States supplied Russia by 2660 ship round trips, mostly over the deadly Murmansk route.

While supplying Russia with all this material, the United States built the greatest Navy in the world, the greatest merchant marine and the greatest air force. It inducted, trained and equipped 14 million soldiers, sailors and marines. It fought the Pacific war alone, except for what assistance Britain could spare from her world-wide fronts. It accepted a two-front war and thus saved Russia from the two-front war that nation so rightly dreaded.

The United States successfully developed an industrial output without parallel while placing the same proportion of her manpower under arms as Russia did. It fought on both sides of the world at the ends of long, difficult seaborne lines of communication while Russia fought altogether on land and, except for a few months, in its own territory. Its armed forces made 50 amphibious assaults, the most difficult of all military operations.

The 700-Mile Retreat

WHILE THE United States was keeping Japan off Russia's back and straining to supply Russia with the means to fight, the Red Army was taking one of the worst beatings ever administered to a military force in the field. From June until November, 1941, the Wehrmacht drove it back in its own land an average of 700 miles on a 1200-mile front. By November, the Nazis were knocking at the gates of Moscow and Leningrad. In spite of a Russian winter counterattack, the Wehrmacht made further gains in 1942, while Russia and her dupes in this country screamed for a second front which at that time would have ended in disaster for Russia as well as her allies.

Finally, in July, 1943, the Red Army started an offensive before which the Nazis slowly fell back until November, when their retreat became precipitous. It was not, however, until mid-1944 that Russia was clear of Germans.

What saved Russia was not the 1941 winter offensive but the unexpected resistance of Yugoslavia to German attack in the spring of that year. This resistance delayed the attack on Russia at least six weeks, winter caught the Wehrmacht still in the field.

It is notable also that the beginning of Russian success coincided with the peak of lend-lease and with intensified Allied bombing of German industrial and rail centers. These bombings, by lowering German production and hampering the movement of troops and supplies, were of direct assistance to Russia long before United States and British troops set foot in Europe.

Colonel Nikiforov performs a curious distortion of history when he claims the Russian offensive beginning January 12, 1945, halted German pressure in the Ardennes salient, caused the withdrawal of two German armies and thus "averted the danger of a rout of the Anglo-American armies." That is pure twaddle, as Colonel Nikiforov could readily have found out for himself from German documents and interviews available to anyone. But perhaps Colonel Nikiforov is not permitted such latitude in the pursuit of his military education.

When four panzer and six Nazi infantry divisions launched a surprise attack on two United States infantry divisions, the fraction of a third and one combat command of an armored division December 17, 1944, the Red Army was busy bringing Hungary into the Soviet fold. Elsewhere the Eastern Front was relatively quiet.

The Nazi attack in the Ardennes pushed a deep salient westward toward Antwerp, wiped out a United States division in its first battle and severely mauled another. The 101st Airborne Division, rushed to Bastogne, held that strategic center against the desperate assaults of two infantry and one panzer divisions until it was completely surrounded. It held out and was relieved by the United States Third Army December 27. From that time on the salient was rapidly closed until the German position became so critical that on January 7, 1945, a diversionary attack was launched against American forces along the upper Rhine north of Strasbourg.

The Russian army, having taken care of Hungary, attacked in Poland January 12, and Colonel Nikiforov says this offensive saved the Americans and British by causing the withdrawal of the Fifth and Sixth Panzer Armies to the east. Colonel Nikiforov can find in the record that the Sixth Army was sent into Austria in March and that at no time was German strength decreased in the west or proportionately increased in the east.

It is furthermore true that on the night of December 25, while the 101st Airborne was still surrounded at Bastogne, the commander of the northern German corps notified the high command the attack could not succeed and asked for a diversion so he could extricate himself. The upper Rhine assault January 7 was the result.

What Saved Russia

NOW, ONE more thing. Colonel Nikiforov writes that "in the most decisive periods" of the war the Red Army fought "singlehanded" against the Wehrmacht.

In that he is very wrong, because the decisive battle of the war occurred while Russia was still an ally of Germany and Russian sympathizers in the United States were interfering with the production which was later to become so important to Russia.

The decisive battle, of course, was the Battle of Britain, as Colonel Nikiforov may see for himself if the Politburo permits him to look at maps.

Had Britain been bombed out of the war or successfully invaded, Russia would have had to fight Germany really singlehanded and probably with Japan on her back. There would have been no base close to Europe upon which United States and British forces could have built up for and mounted their second front. The Mediterranean would have been closed and a great many German and Italian divisions would have been freed from Europe and North Africa to hasten Russia's destruction.

Matter of Fact

Austrian Soft Spot Irks Soviet

By Stewart Alsop

VIENNA, May 22.—Secretary of State Marshall has included Austria in his list of three vital areas of conflict, where Soviet actions looking toward a peaceful settlement will speak louder than Soviet words about the peace policy of the Kremlin.

Austria is dangerous simply because the Russian zone of Austria, unlike the Russian zone of Germany, is almost the last remaining soft spot in the vast new Soviet empire in Eastern Europe. The soft spot can only be hardened, can only be consolidated into the monolithic structure of the Soviet sphere, by breaking the power of the central Austrian government. And the Russians cannot do this without provoking the most explosive crisis since the end of the war.

Moreover, although they may now have changed their minds, there is not the slightest doubt that the Soviet planners have already considered various techniques by which the anti-Communist Austrian government might be broken. One technique has indeed already been tried.

The Russians expected that by denying raw materials, and especially oil, to the Austrian economy, the position of the government would be rendered hopeless. This technique has now failed. It has been checkmated by American economic aid.

Lion-Hearted Chancellor

ANOTHER technique has also been considered, and tentatively applied. The Soviets have experimented with an attempt to spread a paralysis of fear among Austrian officials, thus wrecking the machinery of government. To this end more than four hundred Austrians, largely minor officials, have been spirited away by the Soviet secret police in the last eighteen months.

Yet this kidnaping technique (which has of course also been employed in Germany, Trieste and elsewhere) has also been checkmated, largely by reason of the remarkable courage displayed by the Austrian leaders. Such men as Chancellor Leopold Figl (a small man with a low comedy face and the heart of a lion) and Minister of the Interior Oscar Holmes, have regularly invaded the Soviet zone, putting backbone into the people and officials and purging the Communists from the Russian zone's Austrian police force.

Thus it is clear that more extreme measures will be necessary if the Russians intend to break the government's power. That is why reports of a Soviet-sponsored military organization known as the "Black Brigade" are taken with the utmost seriousness by western officials here.

The Black Brigade, in which Soviet Commander Kourasov is known to have taken a personal interest, consists of 1500 to 2000 picked Austrian Communists, heavily armed with automatic weapons, commanded by a Russian officer and stationed about an hour's run from Vienna. The brigade has been recruited from the most trusted Communists in the Russian-trained factory guard.

Recurring Opportunity

THERE is no doubt that the Black Brigade could be effectively used as the spearhead of a Soviet-sponsored "People's Revolution." The Austrian police are virtually unarmed. Since the four-power Allied security forces are commanded by Russians one month out of four, the present government could simply be ousted, replaced by a stooge "People's Democratic Government," and the Western powers thus faced with an accomplished fact.

Yet here is worth reciting a minor incident which occurred when the Russians were indulging in one of their most recent needling operations, designed to embarrass the Western powers in Vienna. The Russians announced that henceforth the usual movement orders for troops moving from the Western zones through the Russian zone into Vienna would not suffice. Special stamped passes bearing a picture of each soldier would be demanded. The British authorities thereupon decided on a bold experiment.

Thirty armed men were placed under the command of a captain. The men were given the conventional papers—but not special passes. The captain's orders were simple; to get through to Vienna, come what might. At the first Soviet barrier the small convoy was hailed and the special passes were demanded. The captain calmly made it clear that he intended to proceed. Russian heads were shaken, Russian rifles waved, and the barrier remained in place across the road. The captain then gave the order, "Troops, de-truck."

The thirty armed British soldiers scrambled out of their trucks and took up positions around them. The implications were clear to all concerned. There followed a few nervous minutes of harried telephoning inside the Russian guard house. Then—no doubt to every one's infinite relief—the barrier was lifted, the British troops climbed back into their trucks and the convoy continued without further difficulty into Vienna.

Sounding Us Out

IT IS hardly necessary to labor the point of this story. Whatever hopes may have been aroused by the Moscow peace offensive, it must still be assumed that Soviet attempts to probe and prod against the Western position will continue on the practical, operating level. Yet if the Russians are wholly convinced that in the end force will if necessary be met by force, they will not press on too far.

This rule applies if no Austrian treaty is signed and the Soviets are tempted to achieve the partition of Austria by breaking the government. It applies also if an Austrian treaty is signed, for the Western powers must have the courage to guarantee the Austrian frontiers and to make it clear that any attack on Austrian sovereignty must fail.

Indeed, the rule applies the world over. And if the rule is not discarded, through indifference or timidity, there is a growing chance, if not of real peace, at least of a kind of truce.

'Equality' Spelled Out

Pointing out that discrimination "has created a wasteful duplication of many facilities and services," the committee said it was also costly in that it "tends to depress the economic status of those who are discriminated against, and thereby to throw an increased burden of taxation upon the rest of the citizens in an effort to relieve the social, economic and physical results of such discrimination."

The committee urged elimination of discrimination against doctors, nurses and internes in public and quasi-public hospitals; expansion of public recreation facilities as a means of fighting "gentlemen's agreements" against Negroes in commercial recreation plants, and elimination of discrimination in public and quasi-public housing.

Praising the State division against discrimination, the committee recommended enlarging its scope to include the entire field of civil rights. The division was set up in 1945 after passage of a State FEPC law.

The division's report for last year told of one firm with 30,000 employes throughout the State which liberalized its entire employment policy after a complaint based on religion. In another case, a nationally known company with three plants in New Jersey hired Negroes for the first time.

Thus far, the division has accomplished all adjustments by conciliation and persuasion.

Wide Open Hearing

THE State Civil Liberties Committee has been working on its report since November. It was named as the result of the adoption of a new State constitution which added new provisions on civil liberties to the usual Bill of Rights guarantees. One of these prohibits discrimination against any person because of religion, race, color, ancestry or national origin.

The committee is headed by Dr. Wilbour E. Saunders, Peddie School headmaster, and includes the presidents of Rutgers and Princeton Universities and James Kerney, jr., editor of the Trenton Times.

Besides meeting almost weekly for conferences and testimony from experts in various fields, the committee held a seven-hour public hearing at which "anyone who wished to be heard" was given a chance to blow off steam. Among the witnesses were State officials, Communist Party leaders and anti-Communist group representatives.

Governor Driscoll has had the report since late last month. Committee members said privately they had "high hopes" for action by the State Legislature when it reconvenes in mid-August. It adjourned only last week.

Already, several developments in New Jersey seem to have stemmed from interest in the report.

New Jersey became the first State to eliminate segregation in its National Guard. In Montclair, several club officials got together and made a study of the town's practices on employment, recreation, housing, education and public health discrimination. Last week Assemblywoman Grace Freeman of Essex County introduced a bill in the Legislature to prohibit discrimination in specified public places under penalty of a one-year prison term and a $500 fine.

New Villain Is Found for Baby Defects

THE theory that poor heredity is a cause of congenital defects in babies has taken another body blow. The villain instead may be German measles, a disease so mild that it is not even reportable to public health authorities in many States, Dr. Herbert C. Miller, of Kansas City, Kans., announced.

Dr. Miller is chairman of a committee set up by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness and the American Academy of Pediatrics to study the part German measles may play in congenital defects.

In the first three months of this study, doctors filed with Dr. Miller's committee 132 reports of expectant mothers who contacted German measles during the first trimester of pregnancy. Seventy-six babies had congenital cataracts; 35 were partially or completely deaf; 38 had abnormalities of the brain; 67 had malformations of the heart. Eighteen infants were free of defects.

There were other eye disturbances affecting 13 babies. Three had congenital glaucoma, an eye disease usually resulting in permanent blindness. Five had abnormally small eyes. Two had severe squints. Two more had inflammations of deep membranes of the eye. Two had nystagmus, a defect which results in constant involuntary movement of the eyes.

Other defects were found in the teeth, feet and hands. There were also infants with cleft palates and harelips. There was one cretin, one mongolian idiot, one with an enlargement of one ear, one with an enlargement of one breast, one with a defect of the fourth rib.

Some doctors feel unsure that the virus which causes this congenital crippling is German measles in its common form. The question still to be decided is: Is this is more virulent form of the virus causing German measles or is it the common variety?

Sandy Tel Aviv A Newcastle for Berkshire 'Coals'

CHESHIRE, Mass., May 22 (NYHT).—The operators of a small industry here are wondering whether they will receive this month the order which has mystified them annually for many years.

The order, received each spring by the Berkshire Glass Sand Co., is for 20 tons of sand to be sent to Tel Aviv, Palestine, which is on the edge of the Syrian Desert and is built on a sand bar.

The purchaser of the sand is the American Porcelain Tooth Co. of Tel Aviv.

It is a costly trip for the sand, halfway around the world, and it must be sacked in triple burlap bags. Company officials are not sure what it is used for, but dentists say it might be processed into artificial teeth and porcelain fillings.

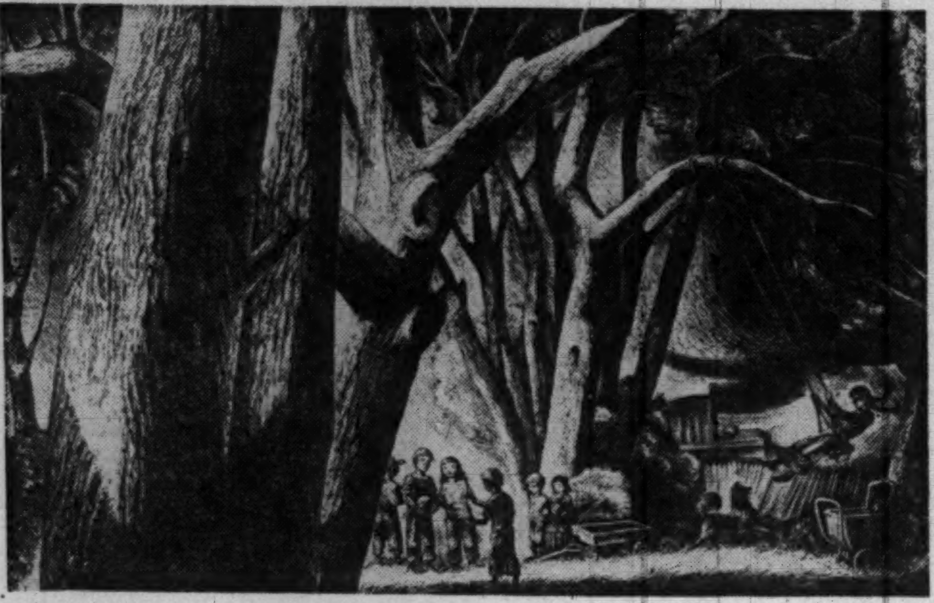
Sixth Print Show Has Broad Range



"Clouded Over," wood engraving by Lynd Ward, of Leonia, N. J.; awarded $100 prize in Sixth National Exhibition of Prints at the Library of Congress

By Jane Watson Crane

THIS year the three-man jury of printmakers sat down to review 1261 entries submitted in competition for the Sixth National Exhibition of Prints at the Library of Congress. After narrowing the field to around 400, they finally picked 244 for display.

From these the standing committee for purchase through the Pennell Fund made three awards of $100 each — to Charles Capps for "Into the Hills," an aquatint; to Benton Spruance for "Eyes for the Night," a lithograph in color; and to Lynd Ward for "Clouded Over," a wood engraving. Specially commended was "Horse Show," a lithograph by Francis Chapin of Chicago. Also a group was picked for purchase to add to the library collection.

As you enter the show, set in cases down the length of a big gallery on the second floor, the more conservative prints are the first to greet you. Further progress reveals more breadth in range, until finally the group as a whole rounds out from abstractions in the style of the English-born leader, Stanley William Hayter, to prints of the American scene in its less obvious and poster-like versions.

Strength in Midwest

PRENTISS TAYLOR, Washington artist, was one of the three on the jury of admissions. Asked to comment informally on his reactions to the 1261 submissions, he remarked on the increasing strength in work from certain regions of the country (from around Chicago, for one, and Iowa, for another). He spoke of the number and quality of color prints. He saw in the show, all representing work done during the past year, signs of a revival of artist interest in etching. In the so-called modern idiom he felt that while a few used "the vocabulary of symbols" with authority and technical skill, the vocabulary appeared surprisingly limited, so that to avoid repetition the jury picked merely what it felt to be outstanding examples by the most sure-footed.

We were particularly interested in the group from the University of Iowa, traceable we surmise to the teaching of a young Argentine, Mauricio Lasansky, whose work was one of those picked for purchase. It is to us a fascinating example of the type of international exchange among artists which without fanfare is bearing fruit throughout the country.

Lasansky, a modest print-maker from Cordoba in northern Argentina, came to the United States several years ago on a grant from the State Department. He worked in Hayter's experimental studio in New York, and when his brief visiting period was over, he elected to stay in this country. Going west, with the ideas and techniques he had learned in Manhattan added to his Argentine training and experience, he landed a position as teacher in Iowa.

In his recent work, as represented here and in other United States shows, there is little of his earlier Argentine prints. His debt to Hayter is more apparent, but he is no servile imitator. He and his pupils are evidently developing color etching along their own lines, and there is ample proof here that the results are worth watching.

Swing Around Country

THERE are several ways to enjoy this print assemblage. The most obvious, from the point of view of content, is that it gives you a swing around the country, from the trim landscape of New England to the desert of the Southwest, from the teeming industrial city to the lonely farm. As to people, there are virtually no portraits in the conventional sense, but plenty of character studies. It gives some insight into current thought—perhaps the most obvious manifestation is the preoccupation with themes relating to refugees and the rise of Jewish nationalism. There seems to be more religious themes than usual. Self-conscious dream works of the surrealist heyday are not to be found, but there are many prints, and some very thoughtful ones, which aim to express an idea in the abstract.

The show also offers a journey of exploration into the various media of print-making. And how work by some of the skilled veterans stands out! These include, besides the three jurors and the award winners, Armin Landeck, Russell Limbach, Thomas Nason, Clare Leighton, and Boris Margo, to name a few. "Studio Interiors" have been done a thousand times, but that does not prevent one coveting such a triumph as Limbach's superbly executed lithograph.

Among work by local graphic artists, unfortunately not numerous, there is a distinguished etching and aquatint, "Vesta," by Jacob Kainen, curator of prints at the Smithsonian. A few Mexicans are represented, including Dosamantes, one of the most gifted. But a strong group from the Graphic Workshop, or from other sources below the border, would enrich this notable print annual.

Russians Put Own Mark on Architecture

RUSSIAN ARCHITECTURE By Arthur Voyce. Philosophical Library. 296 pp. Ill. $5.75

IN a compact text and 189 plates, Arthur Voyce presents a survey of Russian architecture from its origins to the present.

The first section begins with an account of the two main aspects of architecture in that huge country: that of south and central Russia, subject to Byzantine and other Eastern influences, and that of the north, moulded and shaped by its own peculiar geography and culture.

In later passages the effects of successive waves of European influences and of nationalism are described, and the conclusion would seem to be that while the Russions owed much to imported styles they succeeded in stamping their imprint on them.

The second, and larger, section of Voyce's book is given over to a dispassionate account of the flounderings and achievements of the post-1947 effort to achieve a socialist architecture, concluding with the estheticians invoking the ideals of ancient Greece and Rome "as an inspiration for a new Proletarian Renaissance."

THE KING AND THE QUEEN. Ramon J. Sender. Vanguard. 231 pp. $3.

THE DUCHESS was swimming, quite naked, in her private pool in the palace when the gardener came with a message.

When the maid hesitated to admit him, the duchess, secure in the gulf that separates the ducal from gardeners, says scornfully, "Romulo a man?"

The following day came the revolution, and as republicans and Fascists are locked in struggle the duchess's scornful words and beauty penetrate the depths of the gardener's mind.

Against the background of the battle for Madrid the destiny of these two is worked out with poetic sensitivity.

Sender, a distinguished Spanish (Loyalist) novelist, is now on the University of New Mexico faculty. His novel has been ably translated by Mary Low.

TODAY IN CATHEDRAL FRANCE. By Sydney Clark. McBride. 301 pp. Ill. $4.50.

In a book frankly designed for the lay reader, Sydney Clark writes with warm enthusiasm of some 60 cathedrals in 52 French towns.

"This is not an architect's book about architecture. It is a traveler's book about one of the strangest and most exciting things the human race has done," Clark says. Accordingly, he has kept architectural terminology at a minimum and emphasized the human element through use of appropriate bits of history and through the reactions of a modern enthusiast.

COLLECTED POEMS: Robert P. Tristram Coffin. Macmillan. 446 pp. $5.

Coffin is strictly by choice a homespun Maine man who feels like poetry.

If he puts the stem end of a flower in his mouth and a bee buzzes around the petals, it is a poem—and the reader is likely to be told the obvious. As a result, Coffin is at his best when his work has story content, for "Down East" lore always has interest.

The present volume is a new and enlarged edition of the "Collected Poems," first issued a number of years ago. —LEE GROVE

Here's 'Vinegar Joe's' Version of Burma Story

By Sterling North

THE STILWELL PAPERS. By GEN. JOSEPH W. Stilwell. Edited by Theodore H. White. William Sloane Associates. 357 pp. $4.

WHEN GENERAL STILWELL emerged on foot from his defeat in Burma in 1942 he announced: "I claim we got a hell of a beating. We got run out of Burma and it is humiliating . . . I think we ought to find out what caused it, go back and retake it."

STILWELL

Obviously here was a new variety of high brass. A completely honest, salty, profane, hard-working, hard-fighting, half blind old campaigner who was willing to take the entire responsibility for a defeat.

For three long years Stilwell had to take it. Double-crossed by the feudal family dictatorship in China, disappointed by the British under Mountbatten, and given far less support than he had a right to expect from Washington, he was rewarded for his single-handed and heroic efforts by recall to the States, and water-tight censorship concerning his side of the story right up to his death in 1946.

Here is his side of the story.

Criticism of Stilwell comes from several sources. From Chiang and his circle. From Chennault. And from armchair politicos who have gained the curious notion that Stilwell was pro-Communist.

Chennault's criticism seems to be based on real and honest differences in strategic thinking—Chennault being completely air-minded, and Stilwell believing that while air power and transport were of great importance, only the infantry can take and hold invaded areas like Burma.

The charge that Stilwell was pro-Communist seems to be an unadulterated smear. Men as conservative and as informed as Stimson deny such libel. Naturally Stilwell preferred to keep down the Chinese civil war while we were fighting the Japs, and he also preferred to have American aviators who went down over Red territory returned alive. In one of his rare notations on the Chinese Reds, he makes the not unreasonable claim that Chinese peasants joined the Reds out of sheer desperation at their plight under Chiang.

These papers are made up from three sources: from Stilwell's brutally and brilliantly outspoken personal diaries; from letters to his wife, and from a few longer and more reflective papers written during his infrequent moments of leisure.

They are earthy, profane, vitriolic and often endearing. They suggest humility, courage and alternate hope and despair. They accuse some very high people in England, America and China of crimes ranging from petty larceny (one high American officer still in service forged vouchers and charged a 200-rupee wrist watch to Stilwell) to treason

On the other hand, Stilwell must have been rather difficult to please, since he has little good to say of "Frank" (F. D. R.), Willkie or even Churchill. His Cairo notes are full of dynamite.

ALL OUR YEARS. The autobiography of Robert Morss Lovett. Viking. 373 pp. $3.75.

Twenty years ago when Robert Morss Lovett was at the height of his career as a teacher of creative writing at the University of Chicago, his presence on the faculty acted as a powerful lodestone to draw hundreds of young hopefuls from a dozen States.

ROBERT MORSS LOVETT

. . . he couldn't miss

I cannot vouch for the motivation that brought Glenway Wescott, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, John Gunther, Vincent Sheean, George Dillon and a score of other brilliant poets, novelists and journalists to the university.

In my case Lovett was the attraction.

Although founded in the 1890s, the university was still young when men like Lovett, who had landed when the quadrangles were still sandy marshes, arrived to enrich their departments. The author of this gracious autobiography had, in fact, doubled as private secretary to William Rainey Harper, the first president, whose influence with John D. Rockefeller had extracted the millions of dollars which made the institution possible.

Lovett is modest about his several careers, but no one who has lived so full a life could fail to write an interesting autobiography.

Boston born and bred, Harvard educated, a liberal and humanitarian by nature, and a teacher of literature by chance (he wanted to be in the history department), Lovett always inspired by example, and taught through practice rather than theory.

Teaching was only part of his varied life. Simultaneously he was organizing the Poetry Club, instructing immigrants at Hull House, helping to edit the New Republic and fighting for the underprivileged on countless unpopular fronts. Somehow he was able to squeeze in trips to Europe, the rearing of a family and a balanced social life on and off the campus.

Probably the most important chapters in this book are those dealing with Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. As virtual acting governor of the Virgin Islands, he became the most loved and respected man who had ever held that position. Lovett pulls no punches in attacking our colonial policies in those poverty-stricken, diseased and exploited regions.

I agree with John Gunther, who says of this autobiography: "A fitting capstone to a wonderful career . . . This book is the work of an extraordinarily courageous and gallant man."

Wire Tape Eased Smith's Writing Chore

By Lee Grove

"A PRESIDENT Is Many Men," and Merriman Smith, whose book of that title is due tomorrow, wishes that he himself were at least two.

SMITH

If he were double, it would be a lot easier writing books about the White House, says Smith, who is senior wire service correspondent there.

Covering the White House, trying to write a book, being father to a 10-year-old son, and keeping the grass cut at his house in Alexandria are almost too much for one man, he finds.

For a time toward the end of the war, Smith was traveling with the presidential party so much that his wife, Eleanor, "got to be known as 'the widow Smith.'"

Smith was assigned to the White House by the United Press in 1941. In 1946 he wrote "Thank You, Mr. President," a popular account of the last years of Franklin D. Roosevelt's Administration and the start of President Truman's.

IN HIS PRESENT book he has extended his field back to George Washington. This called for a lot of research.

"My wife has to do it all for me," he says, "and from this book we have almost enough material left over to fill a filing cabinet.

"Toward the end I got into a logjam, I'd been on the road so much. So I went down and got a wire recorder. The first Sunday I dictated 12,000 words and the second Sunday 16,000. Then during the week my wife would transcribe it.

"If I thought of something at night I would just say on the wire recorder, 'go down to the Library of Congress in the morning and check so-and-so.'"

SMITH, 35, a native of Savannah, Ga., began his newspaper career by writing sports while attending Oglethorpe University in Atlanta. In 1936 he joined the UP and covered politics in the Southern States before coming to Washington.

After seven years at the White House and two books on the subject, he is full of facts—"The White House staff in Theodore Roosevelt's time was 50, now it is 500; 400 pieces of White House silver were stolen during one reception in Wilson's Administration and people are still stealing it; Indians have always been great visitors, only now they put their costumes on after they arrive . . ."

Philosophizing over the Presidency, he says, "The powers of a modern President seem to lie mostly in his ability to sell, to influence, to put across his ideas with the public.

"He can't tell Congress; all he can do is to ask, and then turn to the public for support. The Presidents have been having more and more contact with the public all the time."

The Magazine Rack, which usually appears on this page, will be resumed next Sunday.

Man of Fierce Loyalties, Passionate Hates

LaGuardia Tells What Makes a Rebel

By J. R. Wiggins

FIORELLO H. LAGUARDIA—The Making of an Insurgent, An autobiography. Lippincott; $2.75.

First Pitch of '38

Aviator, 1918

At Mayor's Desk, 1941

LAGUARDIA'S autobiography, which he had brought up to the years after World War I at the time of his death, sheds a great deal of light on one of the most intriguing political figures of these times.

It would be too much to ask a book to explain wholly his fierce loyalties, passionate hates, profound dislikes and tenaciously held affections. Men who tried vainly to understand LaGuardia by reading the man himself will not gain understanding by reading his book. His background explained a lot about him. His Latin origins explained something about his impulsive nature. Everything he has said of himself and everything that others have said leaves plenty unexplained.

It is too bad he didn't start his autobiography sooner. It is too bad because he might have got farther with it, into the years of his greatest fame. It is too bad because he might have written differently when in good health and spirits. One has a feeling that "the Little Flower" was a happier warrior than LaGuardia himself remembered, when he sat down at the end of his career, sick and a little embittered and disillusioned, to write the story of his life.

It is a good story as it is, however. It helps a little to understand him and the forces that made him an insurgent.

War on the Numbers

HIS hatred of the professional politician was started by his contempt for the patronage-produced Indian agents he saw in Arizona.

His war with the gambling fraternity started in Arizona, too. "Tinhorns" was the Western word for them and they were "tinhorns" to LaGuardia when he fought the tribe in New York City.

He was 14 when he figured out the "numbers racket." It was known as "policy" then. When it came to Prescott, Ariz., LaGuardia's mother thought it like the lotto she had played in Trieste. She bought a 10-cent policy slip each week, sometimes 25 cents. LaGuardia recalled: "She never won. No one else I knew ever won. The game did not last long in Prescott. I figured it out then as nothing but petty larceny from the pockets of the poor, and showed my mother how she couldn't win."

The boys who ran the numbers racket would have been smart to let Mother LaGuardia win. Maybe even that wouldn't have changed the contempt for gamblers described in this paragraph:

"I was astounded when I finally returned to New York to live in 1906 to find the great influence there of professional gamblers, numbers monarchs, and big 'bookies,' among others, with close political and judicial connections. They also had many, many friends among the press. I do not mean the reporters. It is easy for the scum of society, these economic vermin, to make friends, when they are able to take bets and pay cash, if the influential one 'happens' to win, and give unlimited credit if Mr. Big Shot happens to lose. They are no good. They never were any good in Prescott, or New York, and they never will be any good anywhere."

For the Underdog

ARIZONA also gave him his early beliefs about labor's rights, his resentment at racial discrimination, his hatred of political corruption. A lot of the mature LaGuardia was fashioned by these years the family spent while the elder LaGuardia served as bandsman in Western army posts.

Consular service, as a clerk at Budapest and a consular agent at Fiume, deepened his feeling for the underdog, his sympathy for little people, his irritation at red tape.

Ellis Island, where he served in the Immigration Service, gave him some more schooling in the hardships of the friendless and the helpless.

Law and politics in New York City completed the early education of the insurgent LaGuardia. He picked up a distrust of the courts, in his encounters in his profession. His political contests, even when they were victories, left their marks upon him—piling up resentments against political machines, powerful bosses, opponents and newspapers that did not agree with him.

Zest for Public

IT IS only in his second campaign for Congress and in the first of his congressional terms that there are glimpses of the zest for public life that seemed, outwardly, so much a part of LaGuardia in all the years up to World War II. This joy in public service fell from him in the later years but was so strong that even the tired and somewhat disillusioned man who wrote this autobiography in the days of his illness retained at least the memory of the days when he enjoyed the whole experience of public service.

The chapters on LaGuardia's war service and on his congressional fights after returning from the Army sound like an account of a rehearsal for the 1940's. They deal with the same problems of military morale, war supplies, allied cooperation, demobilization, war-assets disposal and adjustment to peace.

He Booted One

LAGUARDIA'S own account of his role in disarmament after World War I is a great credit to him. It is a frank acknowledgment of error. His autobiography relates the story in these paragraphs:

"In 1919 I was proud of my role in reducing the Army of the United States. I know what a mistake I made. I find that I said in the House on August 28, 1919: 'I think the best thing I ever did in my short legislative life was in opposition to the appropriation bill in which we cut down the army from 507,000 to 300,000.' But I went through another World War, and after it was over, I wrote an article which was published in the Readers Digest for April 1947 entitled 'Why I Now Believe in Universal Military Training.'

"In that article I confessed that I had helped my country to make one of the most serious mistakes in its history. As we were in danger of repeating the same tragic blunder, I wanted to confess. Secretary of War Newton D. Baker had come before the House Military Affairs Committee in 1919 and had asked for a peacetime army of a million men, half to be enlisted voluntarily and half to be conscripted. Shocking. Why on earth was Mr. Baker asking for such extreme action?

"Secretary Baker explained that our responsibilities under the peace of Versailles would be grave, and greatest of all would be our obligation to see that peace was maintained. He said unless we did our full share—and that included backing up our policy with strong armament—we, the members of the Military Affairs Committee, would live to see another—far more terrible—world war."

"It's a Beaut"

THE rejection of this program is recounted and then the autobiography adds:

"Had we followed Secretary Baker's service plans, which I helped to kill, and Woodrow Wilson's peace plans, which others destroyed, Hitler would never have dared to move beyond his boundaries."

Few men in public life have the courage to admit so frankly a major error of policy. This sort of candor was LaGuardia at his best. These paragraphs exhibit the trait in him that won and kept friends for him in spite of his short temper, his suspicious nature, his frequent reckless attacks on others. It is hard to be wholly unforgiving about a man who could make the statement that M. R. Werner repeats in a preface to this first volume of LaGuardia's autobiography:

"When I make a mistake," he said, "it's a beaut!"

How Nazis Helped Beat Themselves

By the United Press

TOO much Hitler, too much discipline and too much ignorance helped beat the once mighty German war machine, according to Defeat in the West, by Milton Shulman (Dutton, $4.50).

A former major in the Canadian army, Shulman went directly to some of Hitler's senior officers and to captured records and intelligence files of the German army to show in detail how the egomania of Hitler combined with exaggerated Teutonic discipline and unbelievably bad military intelligence to demoralize the Wehrmacht and prepare it for the kill. Shulman personally interviewed 26 senior officers, most of them members of the German general staff.

Hitler's complete and often maniacal control of the entire German war machine has been noted before as one of the major contributions to Allied victory. Shulman illustrates how in operation after operation Hitler, by defying the advice of his general staff and relying mainly on intuition, converted one potential Nazi victory after another into Nazi defeat.

The most striking revelation is that the German intelligence corps was among the worst in the world. Says Shulman, rarely in modern warfare "has there been a group of commanders so uninformed about both their own troops and those of their enemy as were the generals of the Wehrmacht in the second world war."

Germany's major mistakes are listed as: Failure to clean up the British army retreating from Dunkirk; Hitler's failure to invade England on the heels of the Dunkirk debacle; the failure then to take Gibraltar and close the Mediterranean to Britain; the abandonment of airborne tactics as a result of the heavy German casualties on Crete; the decision by Hitler to invade Russia; the encouragement of Japan to enter the war and thus bring the United States into action against the Axis and, finally, the failure to recognize the North African campaign as the last big chance to beat England.

A Filipino's View

Racial prejudice in America as it applies to the Filipino is described in I Have Lived with the American People, by Manuel Buaken (Caxton, $4). Buaken, a Filipino who came to America with high hopes and tasted the full bitterness of prejudice and oppression, makes his case without rancor.

arms embargo, when the isolationists trapped him, pinioned him and left him helpless. On many great issues of foreign policy he had less success with his own party leaders than Secretary Byrnes later had with the Republicans.

One man who hampered Hull repeatedly was Key Pittman, the Democratic chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Reading Hull's account of his long dependence upon this jealous and ignorant Senator, one wonders whether a future President may not have his foreign policy bedeviled, as Roosevelt did, by the sheer accident of having an unfit chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Hull's story of American foreign relations is encyclopedic in the vast range of its material. He says rightly, as far as this reviewer can see, that no important development has been omitted from its pages. From Afghanistan to Argentina, from Iceland to the Indies, every major subject that crossed his desk in 12 years is dealt with, sometimes sketchily, sometimes in great and bewildering detail, on the basis of the official papers and Hull's own notes and memory.

An Excellent Grapevine

HE HAD good equipment for dealing with onrushing events. In the face of Senator Borah's fatuous charge that his own sources of information were better than the State Department's—a charge that still makes Hull angry—there is repeated evidence in this book that the Foreign Service gave exceptionally correct information on many occasions.

Hull's grasp of the Japanese problem was surer than any other. He never took his eyes off Japan from his first days in office to the Ambassadors on the day of Pearl Harbor. He insists he was right to let scrap and oil go to Japan before the final break. He seems to have faltered only once, in November, 1941, when he proposed a shabby agreement with the Japanese for the sake of gaining a little precious time.

He goes at great length into the somewhat threadbare story of relations with Vichy France and De Gaulle, in an effort to defend a bitterly criticized policy. With all the ardor of a crusader, which he was in certain fields, he tells of the development of the Good Neighbor policy during his 12 years.

Triumph in Moscow

HE DEALS amply with Soviet-American relations, and with the labors that earned him President Roosevelt's accolade as "the Father of the United Nations." Although Roosevelt did not take him to the Big Three meetings, or to the wartime gatherings of the Chief of Staff, Hull had his chance to deal directly with Stalin when he flew bravely to Moscow late in 1943.

He does not hide his conviction that this was the most successful conference ever held with the Russians, or his unspoken thought that he would have known how to avoid the errors that others made in Soviet-American dealings in later years.

It is a thousand pities that a book so enormous in its scope should be so personal and in places so combative. Hull gave superb service to his country; he held a key position during many crucial years, and his character was a tower of strength in many ways. Yet Hull, like so many other writers of political autobiographies, is not content to tell the story; he must prove that he was right every time, and that every mistake was the work of others.

For this reason the Hull version of history must be accepted with the greatest caution. Hull would have it seem, for example, that he himself gave Roosevelt the idea of setting a goal of 50,000 planes in 1940; that Green Hackworth of the State Department found the formula for the destroyers-bases deal with the British; that the State Department did everything possible to help refugees before and during the war, and that it "fully cooperated" in creating and administering the War Refugee Board.

Others took part in these negotiations, and they will have different stories to tell. The Hull statements will have to be checked with others, some still unwritten, before the verdict of history can be determined.

He Never Stumbled

HULL claims in his introduction that he has tried to be "as impartial, frank and accurate as is humanly possible." A good historian will respect the old statesman's honest intentions but will be on his guard. The English historian, G. P. Gooch, has made a study of political autobiographies and has left these words of warning to others:

"The most dangerous guides are not those whose flaming vanity or priggish self-righteousness put the reader on guard from the start, but those who attempt to conceal their bias behind a smoke screen of impartiality."

If Hull, looking back on his career, had confessed that he was wrong just once, his book might have been more convincing. The fact that he has written 1800 pages so fully, and with such evident care, does not mean that the last word has been spoken.

Stricken Girl Writes Brave Novel of Hope

THE LONG WALK. By Betsey Barton. Duell, Sloan & Pearce. 282 pp. $3.

IT IS hard to believe these days that the meek shall ever inherit the earth.

In a world singularly devoid of faith, hope and charity it seems far more likely that the race is indeed to the swift and the battle to the strong, despite the paradoxical admonitions of Ecclesiastes.

But the broken bodies and broken spirits in America's hospitals for veterans must somehow be mended despite the cynicism in their own hearts and in the heartless world beyond hospital walls.

It is to this immensely important task that Betsey Barton has dedicated her tender and luminous novel. Some of these spinal cases are the results of automobile accidents or even drunken brawls.

But the problem for each is similar: "How can I accept the fact of my broken body, yet seek to mend it? How can I find the courage to go on living and hoping and struggling for health despite the known odds against me? How can I refuse the easy escape of effortless dreaming, or the even easier escape of drug addiction or suicide?"

This is a brave and distinguished first novel. S. N.

First Volume Of 13 on Bible Is Published

NEW YORK, May 22 (NYHT.— One of the most imposing works of Biblical scholarship of recent years was disclosed this week when Harper & Brothers announced publication of the first volume of "The Book of Human Destiny," a 13-volume commentary on the Old Testament by Dr. Solomon Goldman of Chicago.

The first volume, called "The Book of Books," serves as an introduction to the series. At a luncheon given for him by his publishers, Dr. Goldman said much of the material for the remaining 12 volumes is already written.

Dr. Goldman, a soft-spoken man with a shock of white hair, explained that his series of books would approach the Bible from the humanistic as well as the historical and textual aspects. His work will offer a chapter-by-chapter summary of the Old Testament and extended excerpts in a new translation, together with annotations and a study of each book's background.

Dr. Goldman laid particular stress on one section of his work which he entitled "Echoes and Allusions." This consists of thousands of quotations of references to the Bible by authors from medieval times to the present. Dr. Goldman said many authorities had advised him not to include such a section in his work.

"I thought, however," he said, "that poets and writers and even many in the plastic arts and in music understood the Bible better at times than learned scholars and exalted clergymen, and so I included this section."

More than half of Dr. Goldman's 459-page first volume consists of "echoes and allusions" on the Bible from 429 writers, ranging from St. Augustine to Mark Twain.

Wenham Does Good Job on Guide to Antiques

ANTIQUE FURNITURE FOR MODERN ROOMS. By Edward Wenham. McBride. 128 pp. Ill. $5.

Edward Wenham, former editor of the art magazine, the Connoisseur, writes with both taste and authority in his guide to antique furniture.

Wenham first describes the furniture of earlier periods and its suitability for various rooms today, then provides an analysis of the characteristic features of Jacobean, Queen Anne, Chippendale, Hepplewhite, Sheraton, and other styles so that they can be easily identified.

Approaching with the viewpoint that antique furniture is meant to be lived with, he believes the various styles can be blended with each other and with modern. Practical advice for purchasers and some words about faking are included.

A hundred large photographs of individual pieces and of rooms, and countless drawings, feature the book.—L. G.

New Claudia Book Lacks Charm of Previous Works

THE MARRIAGE OF CLAUDIA. By Rose Franken. Rinehart. 250 pp. $2.50.

MISS FRANKEN

SOMETHING should be done to discourage endless sequels. Written almost invariably because of the commercial success of the previous book, they drag on interminably, warming over the cute tricks, standard situations and other tried and true ingredients of the original best-seller.

I find "The Marriage of Claudia" very little of the wit and charm which were to be found in "Young Claudia" and "Another Claudia."

Claudia and David drag along toward middle-age through typical family episodes which may be realistic, but which have all the fascination of a laundry list.

This time the couple is selling the farm on the chance of a big contract David thinks he will land for architectural work in Iceland. A friend lends them a 12-room New York apartment (imagine) but nobody seems particularly happy. Claudia has a difficult accouchment to produce a third son. She worries about David's cough.

The boys are sent off to camp with the usual profession of unselfishness on the part of the parents. There is a romance between Claudia's friend and a boy who is to become David's partner.

If a book insists upon being grim, it should also be either tragic or profound. But the Claudia books are beginning to taste like champagne without the fizz. Miscarriages, childbirth and tuberculosis are tribulations which do afflict humanity. They are the legitimate substance of literature. But they deserve mature, sincere and deeply emotional treatment. The Franken approach strikes me as far too trivial for the subjects she has chosen.—S. N.

A realistic appraisal of the Truman Administration

Harry Truman-President

by FRANK McNAUGHTON and WALTER HEHMEYER
Authors of THIS MAN TRUMAN

If you clear away the smoke screen of politics, what is the real record of the Truman Administration? Before you judge the policies and accomplishments of Harry Truman's career as President—internationally, domestically and personally—read this frank evaluation of his Administration as a developing, coherent whole.

These new releases run the gamut delightfully from serious to farcical. You're sure to hear of them. They're good enough to read—everyone of them. And they're all right here at BRENTANO'S for you.

THE STILWELL PAPERS ($4.00)

T. H. White has worked with Mrs. Jos. W. Stilwell in collecting the general's papers, diaries and letters to his wife, and with his knowledge of China, he has edited them and made pertinent comments.

GETTYSBURG ($3.50)

Earl Schenck Miers and Richard A. Brown believe that history can be readable and exciting. To prove their point, they've told the whole story of the invasion and the Battle of Gettysburg through diaries, letters and reports and recollections of the people who took part.

BALANCE OF POWER ($3.00)

If you have wondered what effect the Negro vote has on the American political scene, here is the answer. Henry Lee Moon is well qualified from his experience with Negro Housing for the government and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to speak of this subject. He gives a highly readable and hard-hitting analysis of the situation.

HARRY TRUMAN, PRESIDENT ($3.00)

Frank McNaughton and Walter Hehmeyer are two newspaper men who have had enough White House assignments to give them a clear insight into the Truman administration. In this book, they give a realistic appraisal of his more than three years as chief executive—and just at a time when we'd like to know some facts about it.

THE JOURNALS OF ANDRE GIDE ($6.00)

The second volume of his journals by the man who was the dominating force in European letters during the twenties. Covering the period from 1914-1927, this volume shows the widening and intensifying of Gide's interests, from world politics to Shakespeare, Nietsche and Arnold Bennett.

IMPRINT OF A PUBLISHER ($3.00)

What about this man, Frank Gannett, who started as a newsboy and now owns or controls more daily newspapers than any man in the country? Samuel T. Willson has brought the legend of Mr. Gannett and his fight for freedom of the press to exhilerating pungent life.

SPRING FEVER ($2.44)

Wodehouse again . . . at his maddest and merriest. This time he gets all tangled up in Beevor Castle and London and three budding romances. Two bloom through the hilarity, the third withers slightly on the vine.

MADEMOISELLE LAVALLIERE ($3.00)

She won the wildest acclaim of Paris first nighter. Success enough for any woman, you say, let alone the urchin-daughter of a murderer? It wasn't for Eve Lavalliere. Father Murphy, perhaps the best-known popular Catholic author writing today, adds to his best-selling novels.

THE SHIP AND THE FLAME ($3.00)

The S. S. Setubal wanders aimlessly, trying to escape the death scourage of chaotic, tyrannical Europe. Her passengers are people without a future. Jerre Mangione again hits the mark as a master story teller.

China's Underestimated Communism Now Toughest Problem of West . . .

nist thinkers from the time of Mark on, and it is not surprising that the democracies find it confusing and difficult to handle.

In the foregoing the writer has attempted to sketch some of the major developments in world communism and the major lines of defense which this country is following. From this point on, for the purpose of clarity, it is easier to divide the discussion country by country or area by area.

Confusion About China

FIRST it is necessary to consider China, because there is the most dangerous and gloomy picture from this Nation's point of view.

As noted earlier, China has some 2,800,000 Communists governing 90 million Chinese.

There has probably been more confusion about Chinese Communists than about any other one Communist Party in the world. Even as recently as six months ago, so generally well-informed a student of public affairs as Lord Inverchapel remarked that the Chinese Communists should be considered an agrarian reform party, rather than true Communists.

The fallacy of any such view as this is made clear by the Chinese Communists themselves, who laugh at it. On August 24, 1945, Mao Tse-tung, the 55-year-old chairman of the central executive committee of the Chinese Communist Party, had this to say in a public address:

"Our future or ultimate program is to advance China in the realm of socialism and communism. This has been settled and cannot be doubted. The very name of our party and our Marxian world outlook definitely point to this boundlessly bright direction of our highest ideal."

Further evidence of Chinese participation in the international Communist program is found in the fact that of 29 prominent Chinese Communist leaders today, 13 received their indoctrination in Russia and four in other coutries under Communist leaders.

Policy Mouthpiece

INDEED the Chinese Communists are so important a member of the whole that frequently vital Communist policies are first expounded by Chinese spokesmen.

It was Mao Tse-tung, for example, who first—in 1940—expounded "the new democracy" line of the Communist Party. This was later to be stated in almost the same words by the Bulgarian Premier, Georgi Dimitrov.

In order to allay fears of dictatorship by the proletariat, the line emphasized a new nationalism which could create a state that was neither communist nor capitalist but socialist. In other words, the line suggested a short-cut to the socialist "heaven" without passing through the stage of absolute state control. Czechoslovakia is one example of how well the promise of that line has been kept.

Currently, Chinese Communists are clearly following a policy designed to get more popular support. Executions of political opponents have been stopped. Land seizures have been halted, save for seizures of lands of absentee landlords. And these seizures are now being made by due legal process. The Communist Party is even trying to appeal to small businessmen.

Substitute Lacking

VERY frankly, the Western democracies have not yet found a way to cope with the spread of Chinese communism. The problem is enormously complicated because the recognized government is riddled with corruption, and is badly organized.

In order to wean any nation away from communism, it is necessary to give hope to its people that their natural aims and ambitions will some time find realization. This hope does not yet seem to have loomed in China.

It is actually, in a way, surprising that communism has not made greater inroads than it has in the Far East. Here are the masses of the starving, those who might be called the children of despair. It has been recognized, however, that there is no absolute correlation between misery and want and the spread of communism.

For example, the Communist Party in Mexico, whose people suffer many privations, is negligible. The Communist Party in Czechoslovakia, which was one of the most advanced democracies on earth, on the other hand is now all-powerful.

The key seems to lie in the hope of a braver, brighter future by the methods of Western democracies. Munich, followed by six years of German occupation, left Czechoslovakia disillusioned with Western democratic methods and a ready prey to a desperate alternative.

Backfire in India

INDIA typifies the possibility of defeating communism despite an atmosphere of misery, illiteracy and starvation.

In 1940 the Communists estimated their strength in India at 54,700 members. But during the war the Indian Communist Party followed every twist of the Moscow line. It even helped to jail some members of the Hindu Congress Party, who were not enthusiastic about the war.

In 1946 the Communists began a cautious approach toward a united front policy in India, but in 1947 they violently attacked Nehru, the Congress Party leader, and the Moslem League for acceptance of the British self-government proposal of a congress-controlled Hindu India and a league-controlled Pakistan.

Here some Communist propaganda began to backfire because the Communists had said the British would never give India independence.

Last January the Congress moved in on the Communists, threw them out of any places of prominence and began to jail them. Although Nehru did not initiate this policy, he said he would support it.

Russia's gateway to India is Afghanistan. To quote Martin Ebon's "World Communism Today," "It is difficult to imagine a more barren soil for seed of communism than the Afghan people. They are fiercely nationalistic, tough and fanatically religious Moslems." (The Moslem religion, by the way, is a tremendous bulwark against communism, while the highly tolerant Buddhist religion offers little opposition.)

Poor as the soil is, Russia still cultivates it.

This writer was authoritatively informed last week that in Kabul, Afghanistan's capital, there are 600 persons on the staff of the Soviet Legation.

Freedom Preferred

ON the whole, the Southeast Pacific presents a hopeful picture. After the war, all over the Southeast Pacific there was a tremendous movement of peoples looking for independence. The Communist Party naturally sought to exploit this. The reason it was not more successful is simply that the United States and British kept their promises to give independence to the peoples in their orbits.

In the liberated Philippines, the keynote of the Communist Party's 1947 conference was moderation. Jorge Frianeza, secretary general, said the party will not now struggle "for the immediate establishment of a Socialist society." This indicates that the Communists are aware of their weaknesses in the Philippines.

Independence robbed Burmese Communists of their best arguments. The liberal Anti-Fascist League has kicked them out. Communist influence there is decidedly checked.

A Soviet-trained revolutionary Communist, Ho Chi Minh, heads the Viet Nam Republic of Indo-China, recognized in 1946 by the French government. Later, of course, war flared between Viet Nam and the French.

The Communist Party of Indonesia lost influence after November 15, 1946, when the Netherlands agreed to recognize the authority of the Indonesian republic over Java, Madura and Sumatra (about 86 per cent of Indonesia).

The Communist Party in Malaya is relatively weak. As Ebon puts it, "Communism in Malaya isn't Malay. It is Chinese." The Malays identify Chinese political activity with communism, and consequently resist it.

Socialism's Enough

IN AUSTRALIA the Communists have been steadily losing ground ever since the Commu-Nazi pact. Both the Australian Labor Party and the Australian Labor Party in New South Wales have rejected any association with the Communists. The Labor Party's moderate socialism has taken the wind out of the sails of the Communists.

In New Zealand the Communist Party is all but dead. It claims 2000 members but polls only about 1000 out of one million votes.

The picture in Japan is extremely confused. The Communist Party in 1947 claimed only 6000 members, and the party rarely underestimates its strength. Yet other authorities put party membership at 60,000.

In 1947 the Communists managed to elect two out of 466 parliamentary delegates. General MacArthur commented that the Japanese people had "firmly and decisively defeated" communism.

That is far from certain, actually. The party controls the National Congress of Industrial Unions and also the powerful Farmers Union. It is entirely possible that if occupation troops were withdrawn or even if the economic situation grew chaotic communism would take a sudden spurt.

'Boycott' in Korea

IN Korea the United States and Russia meet head-on and the picture is one of utmost confusion.

North Korea is Russian-occupied. In south Korea this month, Communist-directed violence threw elections into a turmoil, the Communists refused to enter the elections, so rightist groups won all of the seats in the constituent assembly. About of the seats went to the pro-American followers of Dr. Syngman Rhee.

Korea remains a serious danger spot in international relations. The dual occupation makes it difficult for patriotic Koreans, but the election violence appears to have lessened Communist chances in the American zone.

In Turkey, communism is illegal and there is no Communist Party as such.

In North Africa, communism has not reached serious proportions. There is a Communist Party movement under way in South Africa, supported largely by native Negroes. It concentrates on racial and labor issues but has not made great progress.

Isolated in Cuba

TO swing back to our own neighborhood, the years from 1944 to 1946 saw a phenomenal growth of communism in Latin America.

The Cuban Communists, known as the Popular Socialist Party, listed their 1947 membership as 152,000. Until recently they had tight control over the Cuban Confederation of Labor and held the balance of power between two major parties.

Juan Marinello, then titular head of the Cuban Communist Party, became minister without portfolio in the Batista cabinet in 1940. Four years later he served in Grau's cabinet as vice president of the Senate.

But Cuba, like the rest of this hemisphere, has found the Communists uneasy companions. The government party has broken with the Communists and has recognized a non-Communist as head of the Conference of Trades Unions.

For the first time in some years the party is now isolated. Experts here predict that the Communist Party will show a terrific loss of strength in next month's Cuban elections.

Most Influential

IN THE postwar period the three most influential Communist parties in Latin America were in Cuba, Brazil and Chile.

Brazil's 1947 elections brought out 800,000 votes for the Commhnist Party. The Communists in 1947 claimed a membership of 130,000. Other figures put the membership at 100,000.

In any event, shortly after the election of 1947, the Supreme Electoral Council, on May 7, 1947, ruled the Communist Party was illegal. The party quickly went underground and began to reorganize under the name of the Popular Progressive Party of Brazil.

But a hard blow had been struck at its prestige, particularly within the labor movement.

For the moment, our experts believe the back of the Brazilian Communist movement has been broken. It can no longer operate in the open.

In State of Siege

IN CHILE the Communist Party today is in a state of seige. The situation is comparable to the declaration of martial laws here. Parliament is expected to outlaw communism in the near future.

In 1947 the Comunists claimed some 50,000 members in Chile, but in the spring of 1947 Gonzalez Videla suddenly ousted Comunists from his cabinet. Later he ousted them from all high government office.

Naturally, the bloody anti-American riots at Bogata, Columbia, on April 9, 1948, have intensified this movement.

One result which does not surprise students of international politics is that the only allies the Communists now have in Chile are the extreme rightists—the Falangists.

In Venezuela the non-Communist liberal movement has challenged the Communists on their own ground and licked them.

Our experts point out that the program of repression of Communist movements in Latin America has been accompanied by the growth of liberal governments.

The people of Latin America have more reason than ever to believe that their human aspirations for comfort, well being and individual success will be realized.

This must me taken into consideration.

Prophylactic Measures

TRANSLATED in terms of the United States, it might be said that the House Committee on Un-American Activities, which has from time to time done an excellent job in exposing Communist activity here, might well begin to consider prophylactic measures. In other words, it might well study some of our domestic weak spots, our breeding grounds of communism (such as pour housing), and suggest remedies. This suggestion is offered not in a spirit of mischief but in serious purpose after study of some effects of actions the world over. There are many experts who agree.

Not incidentally, our experts warn that because domestic programs of Communist repression have been successful in Latin America and Turkey, they will not necessarily be successful in the United States.

The consensus is that the Communist Party here should not be outlawed. Experts in the field, of course, disagree on just how much, if any, fo the Mundt bill should be enacted into law.

The general feeling appears to be that the Communist Party, stripped now of its disguises, is on the run in the United States, and this Nation should be slow to give the Soviet Union a propaganda weapon by enacting anything which will allow a claim to be made that this democracy is interfering with political freedom.

Now Losing Ground

OBVIOUSLY there are still many parts of the world which have not been touched in this brief review. An omission which leaps to the eye are the Scandinavian countries—Sweden, Denmark and Norway. During the immediate postwar period Communist multiplied their votes many times in these countries, but the Communist Party never was a serious threat in any of them, is now losing ground.

The situation in Canada and Great Britain affords little comfort indeed to the Soviet Union and the Politbureau.

The reader of the daily newspaper is fairly familiar with the situation in Germany, which remains tense.

There is one last word of caution. Frequently in this country, there is expressed a naive belief that should Premier Stalin and some of his Russian cohorts pass from this earth, peace would be easier to achieve.

Any study of the international leadership of the Communist Party will show the fallacy of this belief. A dozen are ready to spring up—a dozen well-trained in Moscow—whenever one withers away.

The future no man can predict.

It is obvious from the writings of Stalin himself that the Communists count on two events to swing the world their way.

The first is a depression in the United States. According to Communist plans, this has already been too long delayed and it has somewhat thrown off the CP time schedule.

The second is a Third World War, not between the Soviet Union and the United States primarily but between two Capitalist nations with Russia going in on one side, and then licking its ally afterward.

These are the fundamental requirements, as the Communists see it, for the success of the world revolution, and establishment of Marxian Utopia on earth.

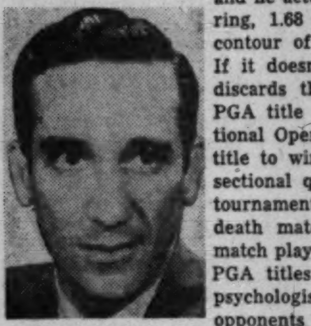
Worsham Loses in PGA; Harbert Fires 61

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern

ST. LOUIS, MAY 22.—The Babe Ruths of golf, the long hitters like Sammy Snead, Skip Alexander and Chick Harbert, draw the biggest galleries, the PGA tournament proved . . . Harbert can knock a golf ball lopsided, honest, with the power of his swing, and he actually carries in his pocket a metal ring, 1.68 inches in diameter, to test the contour of his ball after a few holes . . . If it doesn't fit through the ring, Harbert discards the ball . . . The pros rate the PGA title as more important than the National Open because they say it's a tougher title to win on account of the conditions—sectional qualifying, then qualifying at the tournament scene, then the 18-hole sudden death matches, then the grind of 36-hole match play . . . Walter Hagen, who won four PGA titles in a row and is rated the top psychologist of golf, used to mislead his opponents by playing a No. 5 iron to the green, making it look like a hard swing but hitting the ball lightly . . . His opponents, noting Hagen's No. 5 iron, would use the same type club and overdrive the green . . . the golf pros, the most feuding society in sports, are now calling for a new deal, the unseating of George Schneiter as tournament director.



POVICH

JIMMY CONZELMAN, whose Chicago Cardinals won the 1947 National Football League title, delayed signing of a new contract because of another offer . . . The new owners of the Detroit Lions offered the head coaching job to Conzelman before signing Bo McMillan as coach . . . Until he put his name to the agreement to coach the Cardinals for next season, Conzelman coached the Cardinals for years with only a verbal contract a la Steven Owen who has no written contract with the New York Giants . . . the loyalty of the Brooklyn Dodger fans, famed in song, story and verse, was painfully tested the other night. Of the 42,000 in Ebbets Field at the outset of the Bums' game with the Cardinals, only 5000 remained at the finish of the Cardinals' 13-4 victory . . . There was a wild tip last week that Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler was so outraged by Leo Durocher's ghost-authored book, "The Dodgers and Me," that he was on the point of banishing Durocher from baseball. Nothing to it. Actually, Durocher submitted the book to Chandler for his approval before publication.

THE CHICAGO BEARS next season will boast two former Redskin tackles. They already have Fred Davis, and a deal with the Pittsburgh Steelers for Paul Stenn is ready to be announced . . . Meanwhile, the Redskins are weak at the tackles . . . When Eddie Pellagrini of the Browns hit a three-run homer against the Nats the other night, the Washington club recalled Pellagrini's first time at bat in the big leagues. It was with the Red Sox in 1946, and on the first pitch he hit his first big league homer over the leftfield wall . . . Dizzy Dean has already filed his entry for the 1949 National Celebrities Tournament in Washington . . . The Chicago newspapers have been sampling public opinion on "What's wrong with the White Sox?" . . . One man who was polled countered with "What's right with the White Sox?" . . . Gil Coan's home run against the Browns the other night ended a 30-day drought for the Nats. Their only previous homer in 30 days was also hit by Coan . . . The Browns' ownership, denying charges they pay poor salaries, declare that their payroll of their eighth-place club last season exceeded the payroll of the pennant-winning Dodgers.

AT A TIME when the Boston Red Sox are foundering for lack of pitching, former Red Sox Jim Bagby has won eight games and lost only one for Indianapolis in the American Association . . . The Cleveland Indians are now threatening to outdraw the Yankees. Their home crowds have averaged more than 40,000 since the start of the season . . . Eddie Collins says Connie Mack is kidding when Mack boasts that his present infield of Fain-Suder-Joost-Majeski is better than the famed $100,000 infield of McInnis-Collins-Barry-Baker of 1914 . . . There is heavy pressure for rescinding the bonus rule that doesn't permit major league clubs to farm out young players for whom they have paid more than $6,000 to ink contracts . . . When they filmed William Bendix in Yankee Stadium a couple of weeks ago while the actor was simulating Babe Ruth's record sixtieth home run for "The Babe Ruth Story" movie, it was not without rehearsal. He practiced for two hours for the effort . . . The directors said they would be satisfied if Bendix could hit a high pop fly in the direction of the rightfield stands—they could make it look like a homer—but he actually pumped one into the seats.

Zale Says He'll Stop Rocky in 3

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—The third renewal of the blistering Rocky Graziano-Tony Zale feud for the middleweight title apparently won't last long again.

Quietly, a razo-rsharp, hollow-cheeked Zale said today:

"I'm going to get Graziano quick, maybe in three rounds."

Zale isn't bragging. Tony looks as though he could step in the ring tomorrow for a title performance.

Brownies Make Clean Sweep of Nat Set, 4-2

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

St. Louis, Mo., May 22.—Gerry Priddy, sold down the Mississippi River by the Nats last winter, bobbed up today with two hits sweet to the feel and took the Browns to a third straight victory over Washington.

Former Nat Priddy smacked home three of the Browns' runs in the 4-2 defeat of the Washington club and presented 23-year-old Ned Garver with his first victory of his major league career.

Righthander Garver held the Nats to eight hits and outlasted Sid Hudson who departed in the seventh inning after yielding three runs and putting the fourth on base. The Browns tagged Hudson, Mickey Haefner and Dick Welteroth for 10 hits.

The Nats blew a shot at a big first inning with an ill-timed piece of base-running by Eddie Yost, who opened the game with a two-bagger to right and took third on Gil Coan's single to short left.

With the hefty section of the Nats' batting order on deck, Yost and Coan attempted a double steal. Yost broke too enthusiastically for the plate and was thrown out by Pitcher Ned Garver.

Sid Hudson and Garver were locked in a scoreless duel for four innings and then Etdie Pellagrini touched off a three-run uprising by the Browns with a homer into the left field seats with one out, his second of the series.

The Browns pressed that advantage immediately with help from Sid Hudson, who lost control and walked Pitcher Garver and Stevens. With two out, former Nat Gerry Priddy wafted a double against the right field screen, scoring both Garver and Stevens.

Nats Score Twice

The Browns had a messy sixth inning in the field and the Nats cut their lead to 3-2. Ed Stewart singled to right and took second on Zarilla's bobble. Priddy followed with a fumble of Coan's grounder. Vernon flied to Zarilla for the second out, but Carden Gillenwater scored Stewart with a double to right and moved Coan to third. Jake Early beat out a single that Priddy misplayed, scoring Coan. Zarilla made a fancy catch of Kozar's fly for the third out.

Hudson was excused from the ball game after walking Dillenger at the start of the seventh, and Mickey Haefner took over. Stevens' sacrifice and a single to center by Priddy got Dillenger home to improve the Browns' lead to 4-2. Haefner was in deeper trouble when Zarilla beat out a bunt, but Yost rescued him with a stab of Layden's line drive which was converted into a double play.

The Nats flunked out sadly after raising a scoring threat in the eighth. Gillenwater walked with one out and Jake Early bashed a single off Stevens' shin. Al Kozar hit into a force play but pinch hitter Early Wynn drew a walk to fill the bases with two out.

Tom BcBride batted for Haef-

Rookie Hurls Indians to 7-0 Victory

Cleveland, May 22 (AP).—Gene Bearden, 27-year-old Purple Heart war veteran, tossed a six-hit shutout at the Boston Red Sox today as the league-leading Cleveland Indians recorded a 7 to 0 victory before a ladies' day crowd of 28,997.

The husky southpaw, who was acquired from the New York Yankees late in 1946, notched his third straight win of the season against no defeats.

The game was a scoreless mound duel between Bearden and Boston's Jack Kramer until the fourth inning when big Eddie Robinson put the Indians ahead by clouting a home run with Larry Doby on base.

The Indians counted another run in the sixth when Doby beat out a roller to short and went to second on Vern Stephens' wild throw, Manager Lou Boudreau singled him home.

Kramer retired for a pinch-hitter after six innings. His replacement, Harry Dorish, was treated rudely by the Tribesmen, who belted him for a single tally in the seventh and three in the eighth.

The win gave the Indians two out of three in the series with the Red Sox.

U. S. Golfers Easily Retain Curtis Cup

Birkdale, England, May 22 (AP).—America's links queens retained the big silver Curtis Cup today by defeating the best women golfers that England, Scotland and Ireland could offer.

The visitors triumphed in four of the six singles that made up today's program and halved a fifth despite rain and wind. That lifted their score to 6½ to 2½, equalling the widest margin of victory in the competition that started in 1932.

The United States women never have been defeated in Curtis Cup play, and the ease with which they conquered their foes and the 6735-yard seaside course this weekend resembled American conquests of British golfers last year.

In addition to the Curtis Cup, the United States now holds the Walker Cup, involving male amateurs; the Ryder Cup, for male professionals; the British men's amateur crown and the British women's title. The British Open title stayed on this side of the Atlantic last year by a single stroke.

Yesterday the United States forces won two of the three foursome matches and here is how they added to their totals today:

Grace Lencyzk of Newington, Conn., defeated Jacqueline Gordon, England's foremost woman player, 5 and 3.

Jean Donald of Gullane, Scotland, upset Dorothy Kirby, the Atlanta radio announcer, 2 up.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C., defeated Mrs. A. M. Holm of Scotland, 3 and 2.

Louise Suggs of Atlanta, U. S. women's champion, rallied to gain a halve with Philomena Garvey, Irish queen.

Walter Johnson Boys Meet Ted Williams Next Saturday

None other than Ted Williams, of the Boston Red Sox, will be guest instructor at the final session of the Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball Schools at Griffith Stadium next Saturday morning.

Williams' appearance will bring to an end the second annual four-week school conducted under the auspices of The Washington Post, D. C. Recreation Department and the Junior Board of Commerce.

Williams and his Red Sox gang will be in town for a weekend series with the Nats and he may bring along several teammates to the windup class.

Since the Nats and Red Sox play a double-header Saturday, class will begin promptly at 9:30. Williams will arrive at 10 o'clock and class must end at 11 in order that the grounds and stands can be prepared for the afternoon games.

Every youngster who has attended Walter Johnson Schools is eligible to attend the Ted Williams feature day. All that each boy has to do is be there on time and listen to what the great slugger has to say.

Although the Griffith Stadium affair rings the curtain down on the schools, the summer baseball season still has many days of fun left for the 'teen-agers. On June 12, the Walter Johnson Leagues will begin and from then until August, it will be an action-packed summer as the race for the championship goes on.

Read The Washington Post for further details of the Williams Day school.

Dickson Bats, Hurls Cards to 6-4 Victory

Boston, May 22 (AP).—Although slammed for three home runs, Murry Dickson today pitched and helped bat the National League leading St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-4 victory over the Boston Braves before 11,443 fans.

The Cards got off to a two-run lead in the first inning on one hit, Nippy Jones' single, which followed three walks issued by Boston starter and loser Johnny Sain, and an error by Bill Salkeld.

Tommy Holmes clouted his fourth homer of the season in the third inning to bring the Braves, who had scored once in the second, into a 2-2 tie.

That deadlock lasted until the seventh when Dickson doubled to left field and scored on Red Schoendiendst's right field bingle.

Erv Dusak hit to the same spot and after Stan Musial popped out, Enos Slaughter got a ground rule double when his hit bounced off the lower section of the center field fence and disappeared between the upper and lower billboards. One run was allowed to score.

Lew Beaten By Demaret, 3-2; Hogan, Snead Win

St. Louis, May 22 (AP).—A trio of slammers paced by one of the longest hitters of them all, Chick Harbert of Northville, Mich., led the way into the quarterfinals of the thirtieth Professional Golfers Association championship today as most of the tournament hot-shots came successfully through the third round.

Harbert turned in an amazing performance as he ousted the medalist, Skip Alexander of Lexington, N. C., by an 11 and 10 margin. The PGA record is 12 and 11, made a half dozen times. Harbart shot a 10-under par 61 for his morning round and finished the 26 holes 12 under perfect figures.

Not far behid him Sammy Snead, the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., clouter, and Johnny Bulla of Phoenix, Ariz., both of them noted for their long hitting, turned in decisive victories.

Snead whipped Leland Gibson of Kansas City, 5 and 3, and Bulla routed Ky Laffoon of St. Andrews, Ill., 6 and 5.

Other survivors of the 36-hole third-round matches over the par 71, 6467-yard Norwood Hills Country Club course were Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Mike Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y.; Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa.; Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., and George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa.

Hogan had to stand off the day's greatest comeback to conquer 46-year-old Gene Sarazen, 1-up.

Sarazen was five down after 24 holes and just missed a birdie that would have squared the match on the final round.

Fazio won by the same margin over Ed (Porky) Oliver of Kenmore, Wash.

Demaret turned back National Open Champion Lew Worsham of Oakmont, Pa., 3 and 2. Turnesa beat Al Smith of Winston-Salm, N. C., also 3 and 2, and Harmon, winner of the Augusta Masters Tournament this year, beat Henry Ransom of Ravinia, Ill., 2 and 1.

Lew Worsham, national open champion of Washington, D. C., was eliminated by Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., 3 and 2.

Worsham, 1 down at the end of the first 18, squared the match on the 30th hole, but Demaret won the 32nd, 33rd and 34th holes to close the match.

Demaret made the morning round in 69 to Worsham's 70.

Stymie Wins Metropolitan; Calumet's Faultless Runs Out

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 22 (AP).—Stymie, the rich old man of the equines, proved today he has not yet become senile when he won his second straight Metropolitan Handicap for his first triumph in four 1948 attempts.

Bouncing back into the form that established him as the world's top money winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' 7-year-old plodder closed with one of his old-time bursts of speed and took the $21,200 first money by a half length, boosting his total to $844,760.

He was a $12.20 for two fourth choice in the field of nine star veterans covering one mile.

Fred W. Hooper's South American gelding, Colosal, ran a smashing race to finish second, a length and a half before William Helis' fleet but tired Rippey, which proved again he is a sprinter.

Then came W. L. Brann's leading money gleaner of her sex, Gallorette, to finish fourth. She could only pick up $1250 to make her winnings reach $369,985.

The Calumet scourge failed to function today. Faultless, in the famed silks, wound up fifth. He was second choice to Gallorette.

Faultless, a week ago, won Jamaica's Gallant Fox Handicap over stablemates Fervent and Gallorette. The latter had the advantage of a three-pound weight shift today, one reason she was favorite over Faultless. Stymie finished fifth in the Gallant Fox.

Despite cold weather, there were 41,693 fans present to see the "rejuvenated" Stymie regain much of his recently lost prestige. He even bettered his Met performance of a year ago. Last season, under 124 pounds, he was clocked in 1:37 2/5. Today, topweighted at 126, he was teletimed in an impressive 1:36 4/5 under little Conn McCreary.

Jersey Joe Handles His Dough Well

By Ted Smits

GRENLOCH, N. J., May 22 (AP).—Jersey Joe Walcott, who has been on relief and performed the hardest kind of labor to support his family, knows just what he is going to do with the $250,000 or so he will get for fighting Joe Louis June 23.

"First I want to put aside enough to take care of college educations for my six kids," he says.

"Then I want to build a home for each of my six sisters and three brothers. In a poor family like mine, anyone in it would do the same thing for me.

"Then I want to see Europe, particularly England and Italy. Just for experience — historical things."

Walcott already has an attractive home and substantial savings.

Walcott gets 20 per cent of the gate, which should total one million dollars. In addition he receives 22 per cent of the movie rights, and if the fight is full of action and controversy that can mean even more than his percentage of the gate. Television rights have not been settled. Without counting training camp expenses, managerial cuts, and taxes, Jersey Joe stands to earn for an hour or so of effort from $200,000 to $500,000.

THAT IS A LOT OF money for a man who has been so discouraged of making a go at boxing that he has "retired" many times, more times than he can remember.

"No money, no fights, no breaks, nothing," he says. "I had to do something to earn a living for my family."

So he would quit the ring for a while and take any job, and if there weren't any jobs he went on relief, back in the days of PWA, CWA and the rest.

"My father died when I was 14 and I've been working all my life."

His past explains why Jersey Joe doesn't spare himself in training. His schedule is tough and he follows it willingly. His wife and children remain in Camden, although the two oldest boys, Arnold, jr., and Vincent, make the 20-mile trip on Sundays to see their father box.

Cincy Routs Phillies, 9-2

Philadelphia, May 22 (AP).—The cellar-dwelling Cincinnati Reds went on a hitting spree today, banging out 15 base hits to score their first victory of the season over the Philadelphia Phillies by a 9-to-2 score.

Danny Litwhiler's wind-blown triple with two men on base in the first inning started Rookie Curt Simmons on the road to his fourth setback against one victory. The Reds tallied twice in the first and then knocked Simmons out in a four-run, third-inning uprising.

Babe Young, Benny Zientara and Claude Corbitt each rapped out three hits, but Litwhiler's pair was more damaging, driving in three runs.

8500 Fans Expected at Ball Park

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Beau Jack and Tony Janiro, who were all set to usher in Washington's outdoor boxing season last Monday until an eleventh-hour postponement halted them, were in the same mood again last night.

Barring another delay, improbable in view of a stepped-up advance sale and a prediction for clear weather, they'll wade into each other for 10 rounds or less.

It's a second match between these two onetime fistic stars with the score standing Janiro 1, Jack 0. The Youngstown, Ohio, thumper gained his triumph via four-round TKO over the onetime lightweight champ some 16 months ago in New York.

It's Beau Jack 2 to 1

Janiro was an 8-5 underdog in that one. For the rematch, he's 2-1 to get licked by the same man who failed to do it last time.

Both wound up their training yesterday at the Liberty A. C. gym before about 100 onlookers who paid 25 cents each for the privilege. Jack, showing no signs of the busted leg which he suffered in the other Janiro clash and which kept him idle for 11 months, appeared in tip-top fighting trim. So did his 21-year-old opponent.

This is Jack's third Griffith Stadium appearance and he's out to protect his ball park record of no defeats. Sammy Angott and Danny Kapilow were his previous victims.

Janiro, only a year ago rated one of the brightest young ring prospects around, will be making his Washington debut.

One of Better Records

Beau Jack has one of the most impressive records in the book. He's fought the best in the lightweight and welterweight divisions and has a .750 batting average to show for it. Except for the Janiro meeting, he's never been knocked out, but, on the other hand, has chilled 37 of his 70-odd foes.

Baby-faced Janiro has made 66 trips through the ropes and has lost but 5, his most recent conquerors being Middleweights Jake LaMotta and LaVern Roach.

Janiro has quit trying to eat himself into the 160-pound class. Now he's trimmed down to around 150, 1 pound more than he has guaranteed to weigh against Jack, and confines his fighting to the welterweight division.

It's an important fight for both as the winner can bounce right back into the spotlight and several top-notch summer attractions. Lured on by the always pleasing Beau Jack and the opportunity of watching the only man who's ever stopped him, some 8500 are expected to be around by bell time.

Jake LaMotta Due Here Wednesday

Middleweight Jake LaMotta, who meets Ken Stribling, of Washington, at Griffith Stadium May 31, is expected in Washington Wednesday to complete training for his 10-round bout.

LaMotta, making his first start since Billy Fox stopped him last November, has been working in New York with Steve Belloise serving as his chief sparring partner.

Stribling, meanwhile, continues his drills at Billy Edwards' 5th st. gymnasium.

Tigers Rally, Top Macks, 6-5

Detroit, May 22 (AP).—Ganging up on Phil Marchild on for four hits and three runs in the ninth, the Detroit Tigers beat the Philadelphia Athletics, six to five, here today.

Vic Wertz's single with the bases loaded tied the score and Pinch-hitter Dick Wakefield's single drove in the winning run.

HE'LL GET A BANG OUT OF THIS—Although he was told that Beau Jack's busted knee cap had completely healed, 5-year-old Bobby Mathis, of Washington, wanted to find out for himself yesterday. So he borrowed a hammer and did a little experimenting of his own. Pitcher's Wild Irish Potato Was 'Mashed' by the Umpire

St. Joseph, La., May 22 (AP).—There's something new on the baseball books—the "Potato Pitch."

And there's nothing in the rules to bar it, says the inventor, Pitcher Rip Duncan of St. Joseph High School.

In a game here Thursday, Rip tossed "wild" to first to catch a runner off the bag.

As the first baseman missed the pitch, the player dashed for second. Then Duncan nailed him with the ball, which he had concealed in his glove.

That "wild" pitch to first was a fast-breaking Irish potato.

Umpires took a dim view of the play, allowing the runner to stay on second.

Undesirable Eights

Lost Angeles, May 22 (AP).—The figure eight dominates a meeting tomorrow of the California Athletic Commission in connection with the lightweight championship match Tuesday between titleholder Ike Williams of Trenton, N. J., and Enrique Bolanos of Mexico City.

The commission will act on demands by both fighters that its new 8-ounce glove weight be suspending in favor of 5 or 6 ounce mittens, and that the arbitrary eight-count on a knockdown be eliminated, leaving each fighter to get to his feet at his own discretion.

Braves' Scout Too Anxious

Cumberland, Md., May 22 (AP).—J. Hubert Radcliffe, coach of Allegany High School's undefeated baseball team, said today he would file a protest with Baseball Commissioner Happy Chandler over the "interference" of a Boston Braves scout with his star pitcher.

Radcliffe said his team was warming up yesterday for a tough intercity game with LaSalle High when John (Curly) Ogden, Braves scout from Baltimore, approached Pitcher Jim Clingan.

Clingan fanned 10, got two singles and stole home with the deciding run as Allegany won, 6-5. He has pitched 9 of Allegany's 11 straight victories.

Grid 'Hall' Considered

Syracuse, N. Y., May 22 (U.P.).—Asa Bushnell, chairman of the Eastern College Athletic Association; Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, Western Conference commissioner, and Sports Writer Grantland Rice today were appointed to the board of directors of the National Football Shrine and Hall of Fame, Inc.

Two sites have been suggested for a national football shrine similar to the baseball shrine at Cooperstown, N. Y. Cazenovia, in Madison County, N. Y., the birthplace of William Garritt Smith, the inventor of American football, and the Rutgers University campus, where the first game of college football was played, are the two spots under consideration.

Cornell Wins Carnegie Race

Ithaca, N. Y., May 22 (AP).—Cornell University's unbeaten varsity crew won the Carnegie Cup Regatta before a crowd of 5,000 spectators over a two-mile course along the west shore of Cayuga Lake.

The Big Red, stroked by Frank Collyer III, of Chelsea, came from behind in the final quarter mile to nose out Yale by a dozen feet. Princeton was a close third, Pennsylvania was fourth and Syracuse brought up the rear.

Gordon Slams 4-Run Homer, Giants Win

New York, May 22 (AP).—Pounding four hurlers for a dozen hits, including home runs by Sid Gordon and Whitey Lockman, the New York Giants blanked the Chicago Cubs, 11-0, today.

Right-hander Ray Poat limited the Cubs to six hits in registering his fourth victory, the second via a shutout.

The Giants gave Poat a seven-run lead in the first two innings, scoring four times in the second when Gordon slammed a home run with the bases loaded. Gordon had replaced Jack Lohrke at third base.

Higbe Beats Bums For Pirates, 3-1

Brooklyn, May 22 (AP).—Kirby Higbe pitched his first complete game of the year as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the stocky right-hander's former Brooklyn mates, 3-1, today to extend the Brooks' home losing streak to seven straight.

Higbe yielded only four hits and fanned eight, but bases on balls had him on the ropes in the last two innings. He walked a total of seven.

standout performances, Fazio had the toughest match of them all.

Hogan, with a 65 in the morning, was three-up after the first eighteen. He picked up two more holes on the outgoing nine in the afternoon. Then Gene began to gain.

Sarazen won the ninth and tenth holes and then the sixteenth and seventeenth, the latter with a birdie two, to whittle Ben's margin to one-up.

On the last hole, Hogan putted from the apron of the green within a foot of the cup for a sure par four. Sarazen had a 40-footer and went boldly for the birdie that would have prolonged the match. But his putt was a couple of inches off line and rolled past the cup.

Right after the match, Sarazen told his opponent: "Ben, this is my last P. G. A. championship. The 36-hole grand is too much for me."

Burning up the course under a hot sun in the first of the 36-hole rounds, the 33-year-old Harbert, runner-up for the title last year, toured the 26 holes in 89 strokes, 12 under par.

Chick 10 Shots Under Par

He had a morning round of 61, 10 strokes under par and lowest ever made in competition over the hilly, 6467 yard, par 71 Norwood Hills Country Club course.

In the afternoon he cut two more strokes off par in the eight holes he needed to finish the match.

Chesty Chick won't be credited with a record because his 61 included a couple of conceded putts, one of which he might have missed. Neither was his winning margin a PGA record, though it came close.

When Alexander, who was one under par himself for the day, won his only hole with an eagle two on the thirteenth, he knocked Chick's ball away to concede an 8-foot putt. He also conceded one of about 18 inches on the eighteenth green.

Alexander, a big long-driving young player, won the qualifying medal with a record-equaling score of 134. Today he was suffering from a toothache, but it didn't affect his play seriously.

He had an even par 71 for the morning round only to find himself 10 down. After lunch he matched stroke for stroke except on the sixth hole where Chick's birdie three put him 11-up with 13 to play.

Harbert, a noted long hitter, rarely was able to outdrive the big North Carolinian so he won by remarkable approaching putting. He needed only 26 putts on the morning round and 14 more for the eight afternoon holes.

Chick went into the lead on the fourth hole, where Alexander slipped over par, and then strung together three straight birdie threes. He pitched within 5 feet of the cup on the fifth, 18 inches on the sixth and 10 inches on the seventh. He collected another birdie on the 511-yard par five ninth after his 30-foot putt for an eagle stopped on the lip of the cup.

Coming in, Harbert chipped in from the edge of the eleventh green for his par and came out of a bunker to within inches of the pin for a three on the twelfth. That was the first of four straight birdies.

After losing the thirteenth to Skip's eagle, Harbert sank short putts on the next three greens and picked up a final birdie with a 7-footer on the 209-yard seventeenth.

Chick's only sub-par holes in the afternoon were the twenty-third where he dropped a 15-footer for a half in threes and the twenty-fourth where his 10-footer dropped for a winning birdie three.

To Men of the High School CLASS
OF '48

THERE'S a big day coming soon—the day when you get your diploma. At your graduation exercises you'll hear two things mentioned often—the opportunities and the obligations of manhood. Those aren't just words. They deserve the serious thinking of every high school graduate.

As an American citizen your opportunities are greater than in any other country on earth. And for that very reason you have an obligation to defend America and its freedoms—to make this way of life secure.

By enlisting in the Army or Air Force after graduation you will be discharging your debt to your country. At the same time you can take advantage of one of the finest opportunities ever offered a young man.

CHOOSE YOUR FIELD OF SPECIAL TRAINING BEFORE YOU ENLIST!

If you are 18 to 34 (17 with parents' consent) and a high school graduate, you can select your course of training in the Army or the Air Force before enlisting.

Under the Army Technical School Plan you can specify two different courses that appeal to you in each of two fields. The Army will check to make sure there is an opening in one of the four courses you have selected, and a place will be reserved for you in that course. Then you enlist for 3, 4 or 5 years, and after passing the physical and mental examinations and completing basic training you will be guaranteed training in your chosen field.

The Air Force offers a similar opportunity in its Aviation Career Plan, giving you a pre-enlistment choice of 3 among the more than 40 USAF Specialist Schools. There is no better way to get a start in the great and growing field of aviation.

Either plan gives you good pay, excellent training and a splendid chance for advancement in a real career. You can get full information, including lists of available Specialist Schools and Technical Courses, at your nearest Army and Air Force Recruiting Station.

To Men with 2 Years or More of College
WIN YOUR WINGS with the Aviation Cadets
If you are single, 20 to 26½ years old, physically sound, and have completed at least 2 years of college or the equivalent, you may be qualified for pilot training as an Aviation Cadet. Get full details now. Next class starts July 1, 1948.

Missouri's Record-Breaking Hurdlers Pace Big Seven Win

Gartiser, Ault Crack 2 of 3 Marks

Lincoln, Neb., May 22 (AP).—Madill (Bud) Gartiser and Richard Ault rewrote the Big Seven hurdles record sheet today, leading Missouri to a smashing triumph in the annual conference track and field meet.

Gartiser had a 14.2 in the 120-yard highs as he won easily. His time replaced the :14.5 record set 18 years ago by Bob Hager of Iowa State.

Ault nosed out Gartiser in the 220-yard low hurdles with a time of :23.3, a tenth of a second better than the previous record established by Heye Lambertus of Nebraska in 1932.

A third record was set by Rollin Prather, defending shot-put champion who tossed the ball 53 feet, 2⅞ inches. His throw wiped out the old record of 52 feet, 7⅛ inches by Bill Bangert of Missouri in 1945.

In winning its second consecutive outdoor title, Missouri compiled 143 points. Missouri now has a two-year sweep of both the indoor and outdoor titles, and becomes the fourth team to win two outdoor titles in a row.

Nebraska, paced by a fine field of 100 and 200-yard sprinters, took second with 93¾ points.

Three Triples

The meet had a trio of double winners in Harry Meginnis of Nebraska, Bob Karnes of Kansas and Prather.

Meginnis took the 100 in 10 seconds even and the 220 in 21.7. Karnes was first in the mile at 4:22.3 and in the two-mile at 9:42. Prather, in addition to his shot put record, was tops in the discus at 157 feet, ½ inch.

Oddly, Ault and Gartiser split with each other in the hurdles, Ault running second to Gartiser in the highs.

How Missouri and Nebraska dominated the track events was demonstrated in the one-two finish of the Tigers in the hurdle races and the 440 and the one-two-three finish of Nebraska in the 220 and the one-two finish in the 100.

The high jump, in which Tom Scofield of Kansas successfully defended his championship, carried its oddity as all teams scored. This was due to a two-way tie for third and a four-way tie for fifth.

Prather won the Henry Schulte Memorial trophy, annually presented by the Omaha World Herald to the competitor chosen by the coaches as the meet's outstanding athlete. Scofield won it last year when he set a conference high jump record.

Loyola Edges Terps in Golf

Annapolis, Md., May 22 (AP).—Jack Cronin, 22-year-old Loyola College freshman, stroked his team to the seventh annual Maryland Intercollegiate Golf Championship on the Naval Academy course today.

Cronin's 36-hole card of 158 for the par-71 layout was low for the day and enabled Loyola to squeeze through with a one-stroke triumph over Maryland.

Loyola's four linksmen totaled 664 and Maryland's 665. Defending champion Navy finished third with 698 and Johns Hopkins trailed with 728.

Cronin's blazing finish landed him the individual crown. Capitalizing on the long irons that kept him near par throughout most of the morning and afternoon rounds, he scored birdies coming home on the fifteenth and seventeenth holes and just missed one on the sixteenth.

The Baltimore golfer, a former Air Force navigator, captured medal honors by two strokes from Bill Cassedy of Silver Spring, a graduate student at the University of Maryland.

Cronin carded 79-79—158, and Cassedy, 79-81—160 over the 6519-yard course.

Gustine Fans, Ends String of Seven Hits

Brooklyn, May 22 (AP).—Frank Gustine struck out on his second appearance at the plate today, ending a string of seven consecutive hits for the Pittsburgh third baseman. The major league record of 12 was set by Frankie Higgins of the Boston Red Sox in 1938.

The National League mark of 10 was set by Ed Delehanty of Philadelphia in 1897.

Mosey Fires Ace In Anacostia Round

Norman Mosey, 535 E. Alexandria ave., Alexandria, Va., shot the second hole-in-one of the Anacostia public golf course season. Using a seven iron, he made the ace on the 123-yard sixth hole. Mosey was playing in a foursome with Pete Culich, Faroll Jackson and Joe Turner.

Navy Netmen Lose to Penn, 6-3

Annapolis, Md., May 22 (AP).—Pennsylvania University defeated Navy, 6—3, in tennis today.

D. C. House-Hunters Have Nothing on Mississippi Fish

St. Louis, May 22 (AP).—A Government conservationist says the upper Mississippi River is so crowded with fish that they're bumping heads and thousands are dying of old age.

H. Gordon Hanson, conservationist for the upper Mississippi division of the Army Engineers, said a survey of the river shows blue gills, wall-eyed pike, crappies and black bass are jostling each other for fin room.

Asked what kind of luck he has been having, Hansom said he has not had time to do any fishing recently.

Parker Leads In Paris Tennis

Paris, May 22 (AP).—Favored Frankie Parker of Los Angeles got an assist from darkness late today in his third-round struggle with France's Bernard Destremau in the French national tennis championships.

Top-seeded Frankie was leading, two sets to one, but was trailing in the fourth set, 8-7, when nightfall made continuing impossible.

The match will resume tomorrow.

After three sets, Parker was leading, 8—6, 4—6, 7—5, but was engaged in a desperate see-saw battle in the fourth set, trailing, 3—1, 7—6, and—at the conclusion of hostilities—8—7.

Budge Patty of Los Angeles eliminated M. Thomas of France in a hard-fought third-round match, 2—6, 6—0, 8—6, 6—3, while Eric Sturgess, South Africa's No. 1 player, easily defeated France's Paul Reny, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2, in another third-rounder.

All American women in the second round of the mixed doubles—Pat Todd, Doris Hart, Shirley Fry and Gloria Butler—saw their teams victorious today, but Mrs. Helen Rihbany of Boston was ousted in a postponed first-round match.

Oklahoma Golfer Sets Course Record of 64

Lincoln, Nebr., May 22 (AP).—With Charles Coe setting a new course record for the Lincoln Country Club, University of Oklahoma golfers took the Big Seven conference championship today with a team score of 584.

Coe's 64 today was eight under par for the course and one stroke better than the 65 set several years ago by Bud Williamson, Lincoln club pro. Coe also set a new record of 30 for the par 36 back nine. The previous record was 32.

Raymond Again Wins Junior Olympics With 43 Points

Raymond Elementary School runners tied for four first places, scored 43 points and won the fourth annual Junior Olympics track and field meet yesterday at Western High stadium.

The victory was the third in a row for the Raymond boys in this event.

Whittier School was second with 38 points and Takoma and Blessed Sacrament tied for third with 27 each.

Frank Locantore, Charles Abbott, Eddie Atkinson and Forney Shell were the four winners for Raymond. Their triumphs won for Raymond a 1948 meet trophy and gave them the third and final leg on the special Junior Olympic trophy.

More than 500 boys from 41 District area schools competed before several thousand spectators.

The meet was under the joint sponsorship of the District Recreation Department and the Junior Board of Commerce. Cochairmen were Arthur Kriemelmeyer of the department and J. W. Costello of the Junior Board.

On the Line

—With Considine

NEW YORK, May 22 (INS).—Sportin' around:

Man said a shocking thing in the press box at Pimlico just before the running of Preakness. Man said:

"Wait'll MacPhail starts racing."

Considine

It won't be so long now until the mercurial man who sold his holding in the New York Yankees for two millions appears in his new role of owner and operator of a stable.

It is not true, as some heartless wag suggested, that his racing colors will be black and blue . . . But unless Larry has changed it is a foregone conclusion that some of the trainers, jockeys and grooms who work for him hereafter will take on those colors from time to time.

MacPhail should be as much of a shot in the arm and clip to the jaw in racing as he was in baseball. No one can foretell just what his course will be, for Larry himself won't know until the last possible moment. But it should be exciting, and you can count on at least one thing: his horses will be out there trying to win. We cannot picture MacPhail giving any other instructions.

The man in the press box suggested that Larry's horses would insist on running clockwise, instead of the standard way; his jockeys would be instructed to stand on their heads; his trainers would come down with a series of nervous breakdowns after being called in the middle of the night, and that there would be a press bar in the MacPhail stables.

MacPhail, inevitably, will get into the promotion end of racing. Perhaps he will bring night racing to his track, as he brought night ball to the majors; stage special events, install ladies' days and inaugurate two-mutuel-tickets-for-the-price-of-one days. As we say, nobody can foretell. But he'll change racing, sure as his name is Leland, and it could stand his patented type of hypodermic.

LEO DUROCHER'S book is very interesting, I think. Certainly more interesting than his ball club is at the moment. But both are revealing. The book throws much light on Leo's personality, heretofore clouded by the man's inherent reserve, and the ball club is revealing that Leo might have come back a year too soon.

Leo's still a first class manager. It is unfair to leap on him now for the failures that have come in the wake of Shotton's good year. The Dodgers won last year not only because of Shotton, a good manager, but because Casey still could pitch and the Cards came up with a so-so season.

The book, "The Dodgers and Me" (Ziff-Davis, $2.50), tells a touching story about Jackie Robinson:

"He (Robinson) was on base when Dixie Walker hit a big homer in the Polo Grounds. It's customary to wait at the plate to shake the hand of the homer hitter. But Jackie did not shake hands. He walked to the bench.

"'Robinson snubbed Walker,' buzzed the gossips. 'They still don't get along.'

"But Dixie could have told the story. Robinson knew that pictures of Walker shaking hands with a Negro boy—however much Dixie might have wanted to, privately—would have hurt Walker's hardware business in Alabama. He knew the cameras were focused on the plate, and that those pictures would go all over the country. Always thoughtful, Robinson ducked out of the picture."

Speaking of racing's need for a little promotorial skill, what about a match race at six furlongs between Coaltown and Rippey or a special of some kind in which Coaltown, using several pace setters, might try to run the mile faster than any horse in history?

WHEN YOU SLICE that golf ball out of bounds today remember that your troubles date back to deep antiquity.

The Dutch used to play it on ice. In 1618 Javes VI prohibited the importation of golf balls from Holland, because too much money was leaving the British Isles. It was banned in Scotland in 1457 because it was luring noblemen from archery. Golf-leggers were fined "fourtie shillings by the schireffe."

Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, learned to play while attending school in France and introduced the word "caddy" into the game. Cadets from a neighboring military school carried her clubs for her, and "caddy" was as close as she could come to "cadet."

James IV was such a tempestuous breaker of clubs that a rule was introduced in the 1500's which charged golfers a stroke for every club they broke in fits of distemper. This same Mary was out on the course two days after the murder of her husband. An ancient rule also stated that in the case of a broken ball a fresh one might be placed on the spot where the largest part of the ruptured pill came to rest.

And it used to be called "gouff," probably in honor of those who played it.

AT THE LAST count, Jack Kramer had won 64 of his 83 matches against Bobby Riggs, one of tennisdom's rare form upsets.

When the boys began their tour at Madison Square Garden last December, it was difficult to find a single tennis expert who considered Kramer the better player, especially after that opening night's performance.

Jack Harris, the promoter of their tour, writes that Kramer's game for the past two months has, in his opinion, topped the greatest peaks of Tilden, Budge, Vines, Cochet, Lacoste and Perry. Riggs is playing as well as ever and getting murdered, Harris states—with a certain amount of wonder in his typewriter.

MY FAVORITE publicity release of the week:

"When the sportswriters found Graziano (at Rock's training camp) they had to rub their eyes. For down in a sylvan dell by the lake they spotted The Rock with two of the guest's little children, picking flowers.

"The newshawks crept up closer to observe this piece of phenomena and Graziano, startled when he heard them, dropped the handful of posies and sheepishly dug his hands deeply in his pockets.

"'I used to think this outdoor stuff was the bunk,' said Rocky, 'but it kind of gets you, and it's doing great things for my condition . . . but please, fellows, will you forget about them flowers?'"

A little soft music, professor. And not too loud. We don't want to startle that dear, sensitive petunia picker.

Johns Hopkins Whips Terps at Lacrosse, 10-8

Blue Jays In Line for National Cup

Baltimore, May 22 (AP).—Johns Hopkins University completed its second straight season without defeat by a collegiate foe by beating Maryland, 10-8, today to virtually assure itself of successful defense of its National Lacrosse championship.

The champion is selected by a committee of the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association.

Coach Howdy Myers, who started college coaching at Hopkins only last year, had a few nervous minutes towards the end of the game. After his Blue Jays compiled a 10-5 lead with 10 minutes remaining, they were unable to hit the net again, while Maryland slowly closed the gap.

Maryland led for the first 10 minutes of the game, witnessed by 8500, and the arch rivals were tied, 3-3, at half-time.

The victory was the eighth straight for Hopkins which next month closes the season in a game with the Mount Washington Club team which is recognized generally as for the open championship of the United States.

North Carollina Wins League Title

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 22 (AP).—North Carolina's Tar Heels overcame an early 5-0 lead held by Duke here this afternoon to nose out the Blue Devils, 10 to 8, and capture the Southern Conference baseball championship.

The Tar Heels, winners of the coveted Big Four loop flag in addition to the conference title, let it be known following the tilt that they were receptive to a bid to compete in the Southern NCAA playoffs provided they were extended an invitation by the committee which meets in Greensboro tomorrow.

Duke rallied for three runs in the ninth and had another runner on second when Stu Erickson grounded out to end the game. Erickson had previously connected for a grand-slam homer in the third inning to send Duke out front.

3 Bethesda Golfers Win In High Meet

Three Bethesda-Chevy Chase High golfers and one from Gonzaga, reached the semifinals of the second flight in the fifteenth annual scholastic golf tournament yesterday at Georgetown Prep.

Dennis Bolster of Gonzaga, will oppose Joe Sullivan of Bethesda in one semifinal match today at 10 a. m., and B-CC teammates, John Eisinger and Richard Wolfe will play in the other. Finals are scheduled for 2 p. m. today at Georgetown Prep.

Bolster and Eisinger turned in the most impressive performances in yesterday's play. Bolster eliminated Bob Redick by a 6 and 4 count and Eisinger ousted Jack Furey, 6 and 5.

Yesterday's results:

First round:

Bob Redick (Friends) defeated Richard Burke (Friends), 2 and 1; Dennis Bolster (Gonzaga) defeated Bob Mair (B-CC), 3 and 2; Joe Sullivan (B-CC) defeated Erik (Western), 3 and 2; Bob Wolfe (Blair) defeated Jim Grinnell (Geo. Prep), 4 and 2; Jack Furey (Geo. Prep) defeated Jim McMahon (Gonzaga), 3 and 2; John Eisinger (B-CC) won by default from William Teunis (Devitt); Ed DeHority (Western) won by default from David Hill (Devitt); Dick Wolfe defeated Gus Vallarino (Geo. Prep), 2 and 1.

4-Ball Title Match Today

Upper Marlboro, Md., May 22 (AP).—The Washington Golf and Country Club and Annapolis Roads teams will meet on the Prince Georges golf course Sunday for the Maryland four-ball championship.

Ralph Bogart and Jerry Hart will play for Annapolis Roads which is represented in the tourney for the first time this year. Jim Gardiner and Claude Rippy carry the hopes of the Washington club.

Colonials Win 13th

GW's King Beats VMI, 10-0; Terps Trounce Kings Point

Great Neck, N. Y., May 22.—Maryland University overpowered the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy nine here today, 12 to 3, on a windswept field.

Bill Zurnik held the Marines to six scattered hits and never was in danger. He was given a 2 to 0 lead in the second inning when Hank Miles unloaded a two-run home run and that margin was sufficient.

Maryland tagged Paul Blowers for 13 safeties and this attack plus 8 Kings Point errors made the victory march a cinch for the visitors who are to play the Army at West Point Monday. Joe Andrus and Tony Sligo got five hits between them to lead the attack on Blowers.

Pete King, a converted outfielder, threw a six-hit shutout at VMI at Griffith Stadium yesterday and George Washington coasted to its thirteenth victory, 10-0.

The Colonials wasted little time deciding the issue with a five-run rally in the third giving them an 8-0 advantage. Don Druckenmiller drove four runs across with a double and single and Joe Famulette contributed a triple and single to the 11-hit attack.

King, chalking up his fifth triumph against a lone setback, gave GW a 7-3 Southern Conference record. On Friday the losers trounced Maryland, 12-3.

Blue Peter Takes Feature at Garden

Camden, N. J., May 22 (AP).—J. M. Roebling's consistent Blue Peter, paying $4.20, $3 and $2.40 across the board, sped to a three-quarter-length triumph today over Crispin Oglebay's surprising colt, Noble Impulse, in the feature event at Garden State Park.

Ten lengths behind the top two came Mrs. A. Roberts' lightly regarded Eatontown to be third in the field of nine 2-year-olds.

Blue Peter's time for the 5-furlong route was a sizzling 0:58 3-5. This was three fifths of a second better than his time the same route a few days ago when he set the track record for the distance of 0:59 1-5.

Turnesa Bows By 1 Stroke In Cup Golf

Sandwich, England, May 22 (AP).—Brazil's Mario Gonzalez, a skinny 6-footer, established himself today as a top favorite to take away Willie Turnesa's British amateur golf crown in the week-long championship tournament which begins Monday.

Gonzalez toured the Royal St. George's layout—the championship course—in a crisp par 70 and won the Royal St. George's Club's Grand Challenge Cup. He defeated Turnesa by a stroke, 144 to 145.

Nobody else was within gunshot of either of them and local golf fans, who watched them both play today, mentioned the probability that Mario and Willie would square off against each other in next Saturday's 36-hole title final.

It could happen. Gonzalez is in the top bracket, Turnesa in the bottom one.

Turnesa, White Plains, N. Y., shotmaker, who won the championship last year from Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C., led the Challenge Cup field with a 73 after yesterday's play. Gonzalez was a stroke behind. Chapman had a 76.

Turnesa wound up with a 72 after missing a 5-foot putt on the last green that would have given him a birdie 3 and a tie with Gonzalez. He had missed two other short ones earlier.

Chapman was their nearest competitor for the cup. He added a 75 to yesterday's 76 for 151. Gerald Micklem, London stockbroker and British Walker Cup player, equalled Chapman's score.

Seven of the nine American entries in the amateur championship sought the club's gold cup. Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, and Ed Lowery, a Californian, did not compete.

Navy Romps On Lehigh In Lacrosse

Annapolis, Md., May 22 (AP).—Navy trained its heaviest lacrosse artillery on Lehigh today and bombarded the Engineers, 14 to 1.

The Middies stickmen scored in each period and choked off every Lehigh threat except one in the third quarter when Joe Donahue drove in a goal.

Action seldom moved out of Lehigh territory as Coach Dinty Moore's athletes pressed their attack and gave Goalie Bill Kelsey a hectic afternoon.

The game was the next to last on Navy's schedule. Next week the Tars travel to West Point to join battle with Army's powerful ten. Navy has won seven and lost three intercollegiate tests.

Attackman Lee Chambers and Charley Hooper bellwethered the Middie offense today, each scoring four goals.

Mel Patton's Time Good—For 99 Yards

Los Angeles, May 22 (AP).—Mel Patton again demonstrated that he is Uncle Sam's No. 1 candidate for the Olympic games sprint team, but that widely heralded "race of the century" last night turned out to be the blunder of the year.

Patton, of the University of Southern California, clipped his arch rival, Lloyd Labeach, by 2 yards, and left seven other hand-picked threats to lag further in defeat as a record crowd of 59,661 roared approval.

Then came the let-down.

The race was supposed to have been run at the Olympic distance of 100 meters, and the world record of 10.2 was supposedly endangered.

But embarrassed officials of the eighth annual Coliseum relays belatedly discovered that the distance had been measured off wrong, and the speedsters actually ran 99 yards 5 inches. The time was 9.4 seconds.

Just last Saturday Patton was credited with running 100 yards in new world time of 9.3 at Fresno.

Nalon Nearly Sets Record After Crack-Up

Indianapolis, May 22 (AP).—Duke Nalon, a big man with a lot of racing experience, today tamed the 550 wild horses under the hood of a novi grooved piston special.

The curly-headed Los Angeles veteran hopped back into the racer after it had tossed him into a side-ditch and came within three-tenths of a second of breaking the Indianapolis Motor Speedway record for one lap (two and one-half miles).

Nalon qualified the long, low-slung car for the 500-mile race May 31 at an average speed of 131.603 miles an hour. His best lap was 134,008.

Ralph Hepburn, Van Nuys, Calif., set the one-lap record of 134.499 miles an hour two years ago in the twin to Nalon's car. He died in it last Sunday as it crashed into a speedway retaining wall during a practice run.

The second qualifier today was Hal Cole of South Gate, Calif., who wheeled his brand new "City of Tacoma" the 10-mile distance at an average speed of 124.391 miles per hour. The racer has a new Meyer-Drake engine in a new Kurtis-Kraft chassis.

Charles van Acker, South Bend, Ind., gave the crowd of 25,000 another exhibition of courage. Battered up two weeks ago in a wreck at Dayton, Ohio, he took a qualification run today at 125.440 miles an hour in an Offenhauser owned by Walter Redner of South Bend.

Howard Loses, 17-9, Despite 3 Home Runs

South Orange, N. J., May 22.—Despite home runs by Ben Batts, Andrew Carr and Nat Fisher, Howard University of Washington, D. C., lost a 17-9 decision to Seton Hall here today. Jim Deerey led the winners' attack with a triple and two singles.

Roland Quinn led the Merrick Juniors to a 4-1 triumph over Trinidad Boys' Club on the Armory Field. He singled and doubled to drive in three runs.

Bert Haas Rallies From Skull Operation

Philadelphia, May 22 (U.P.).—Third Baseman Bert Haas of the Philadelphia Phillies sat up in a wheelchair today and predicted that he will be back in the lineup in less than a month.

Haas, who sustained a fractured skull May 8 when he was struck by a batted ball in St. Louis, underwent an operation at the Temple University Hospital on Thursday.

He rallied quickly and the hospital reported he was "in excellent spirits."

Odds-On One Up Runs Poor Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., May 22.—Stillson H. Hall's Outcome upset the best calculations of the form players this afternoon and ran off with the Dower House Purse, featuring the first weekend program here. The 8-year-old mare, making her second start of the season, was given a perfect ride by Jockey Willie Kelly, a Pennsylvania lad with a fine war record who is attempting a saddle comeback.

Outcome forged to the finish line a length in front of S. M. Follin's Erato. Two lengths farther back came J. N. Thomas' One Up, the odds-on favorite in the field of eight, having run with stake company on the major tracks.

A crowd of 9000, watching racing under ideal conditions, saw Outcome step the about 7 furlongs in 1:25 3-5. With most of the betting centering on One Up, backers of Outcome collected at the rate of $17.60.

Kelly Saves Ground

Unable to keep Outcome along with the early speed of Erato and Country Dude, Kelly rated the old mare, saving ground. Erato finally shook off Country Dude, but she soon had another challenger in Outcome, Kelly moving his mount to the outside.

The two ran head and head into the stretch and then Outcome, stung with the whip, assumed command and it was all over.

One Up lacked speed early. Baird saved ground with the 7-year-old. In the stretch he roused the favorite, but the old gelding just didn't have punch and appeared to be a very tired horse at the end.

Jockey Unhurt

Apprentice Jockey Jimmy Rankin escaped injury in a spectacular spill that marked the third race. He was aboard R. E. Michael's Ghosting at the clubhouse turn when the filly stumbled and went down. She was clear of horses, however, and Rankin arose shipshape from the cloud of dust.

Mrs. G. A. Saportas' High Heart was the winner, but not officially until the stewards heard foul claims from Bobby Shirey, who rode Ringside Table into second money, and Apprentice Hugh McKinney, who got the favored Tilt home third.

Golden Brown	(Baird)	111	7	6	7	7	7	37.20

FAIR MAIL, $18.20, $7.00, $4.40; MAYFERN, $4.60, $3.20; PAPPY BOY, $3.80.

FAIR MAIL was closest to early pace of PAPPY BOY, went wide into stretch and held on gamely. MAYFERN was hard ridden, saved ground but could not get to winner. PAPPY BOY went to the front at once, ran out approaching stretch and was tiring at end. ROAD SCRAPER broke slowly and failed to show usual speed.

SECOND RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $800. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Off at 2:41. Winner, A. Skechak. Trained by Elsie S. Morris. Time, 1:27⅗.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

Black Bass	(Leggett)	117	3	8	8	8	8	8	9.50

GOODEL, $16.40, $7.20, $3.80; GRADATIM, $7.60, $4.80; JACK HORNER, $3.80.

GOODEL was slow to begin, worked way to contention along the backstretch, responded to hard drive and held on gamely. GRADATIM saved ground throughout, was strongly handled but could not resist winner. JACK HORNER improved position on outside and then weakened. ARTHUR'S SWORD failed to reach serious contention.

DAILY DOUBLE—FAIR MAIL AND GOODEL—PAID $105.40.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-. Start good. Off at 3:13. Owner, Mrs. G. A. Saportas. Trained by Mrs. G. A. Saportas. Time, 1:17⅘.

HIGH HEART, $12.00, $5.20, $3.40; RINGSIDE TABLE, $4.00, $2.40; TILT, $2.40.

HIGH HEART went to the front early, set good pace, carried TILT wide entering stretch and swerved in during final stages. McKinney's foul claim against the winner was not allowed. RINGSIDE TABLE saved ground and closed willingly. TILT moved up abreast of HIGH HEART but weakened after being bothered. HARD CIDER raced evenly.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and up. Start good. Off at 3:45½. Owner, B. F. Dishman. Trained by J. Stuart. Time, 1:17⅗.

SUNNY RIVER, $12.20, $6.60, $4.20; COMEDY, $5.40, $3.00; GAY WILDY, $2.40.

SUNNY RIVER was steadied while in a good position, responded to take command and held on gamely. COMEDY saved ground but could not cope with the winner. GAY WILDY broke well, was eased back at the first turn and flattened out when placed to pressure. BLUE ECHO was used up early and was tiring at end.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good. Off at 4:18. Owner, H. M. Simpson. Trained by H. M. Simpson. Time, 1:21⅘.

Vitesse	(Foster)	112	5	7	7^{1}	7^{2}	7^{1}	8	20.80

BILLY BITZ, $13.20, $6.20, $4.20; CAIRNESS, $6.60, $4.40; CHOSEN MISS, $2.80.

BILLY BITZ was steadied while well placed early, came between horses at the far turn to better position, wore down CHOSEN MISS and staved off the final bid of CAIRNESS while under good handling. CAIRNESS saved ground, rallied to pressure but hung. CHOSEN MISS was rushed to the front, set a good pace but tired gradually through stretch. LIBERTY HEAD closed willingly.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Off at 4:49½. Owner, S. H. Hall. Trained by J. W. Thayer. Time, 1:25⅗.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
Outcome	(Kelly)	120	2	3	3^{2}	3^{2}	1^{nk}	1^{1}	$7.80

OUTCOME, $17.60, $6.60, $3.40; ERATO, $5.60, $2.80; ONE UP, $2.40.

OUTCOME was steadied when unable to get to the front early, came wide for racing room, wore down ERATO and held on gamely under good handling. ERATO was hard used, vieing with COUNTRY DUDE for pace and tired in closing test. ONE UP lacked early speed, saved ground and rallied mildly. RICKPOLE was not a dangerous factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good. Off at 5:20½. Owner, Mrs. V. P. Moxley. Trained by W. S. Moxley. Time, 1:50.

HARV-AETHEL, $21.20, $8.20, $7.40; TIME PLAY, $8.00, $6.00; BUCKEYE, $8.00.

HARV-AETHEL went to front early, set good pace but was tiring badly at end. TIME PLAY was rated while close to the pacemaker, came out but swerved sharply in stretch and Palumbo was unable to do him justice in final drive. BUCKEYE showed a fair effort. RUNNING RIOT rallied and then hung.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good. Off at 5:53½. Owner, Mrs. A. Carpoletti. Trained by R. L. Gheen. Time, 1:55.

Grays Oppose Stars Today

Washington's Homestead Grays will battle to retain the lead in the Negro National League when they meet the second place Philadelphia Stars in a twin bill today at 2 p. m. in Griffith Stadium.

Pitchers Frank Thompson and Red Fields will attempt to stop a Star four-game win streak which has the Philadelphia crew one-half game behind the leading Grays. Barney Brown and Roy Partlow, both southpaws, will start for the Stars.

Pace's Hot Pace Recognized; Added Bow for Chick Evans

By the use of long-range binoculars, it was discovered yesterday that Assistant Budget Bureau Director Frank Pace ran among the winners in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament.

Pace set such a fast pace for nine holes in the rain over the Columbia Country Club course that sight was temporarily lost of his fine score of 38.

In the downpour, tournament officials advised Pace and his foursome that it would be advisable to play only nine holes. This they did. Some others decided to play the full 18 holes.

This led to a little confusion in determining the winners. The Washington Post in recognition of Pace's 38, awards him an "Oscar" along with Secretary of Navy John J. Sullivan, winner of the "Official Washington" title over 18 holes with a 79.

Another gentleman entitled to recognition is Charles "Chick" Evans, former national open and amateur chapion who has devoted much of his life to helping youngsters through golf.

Evans was bracketed with others who had competitive backgrounds in major tournaments. His 71 actually was the tournament's lowest score by an amateur—and probably one of the most gratifying of Evans' long and constructive career.

Evans has been included among the winners of "Oscars," or as Author Bob Considine terms the awards, "Abes," since they are miniatures of the Lincoln Memorial.—BUS HAM.

Griffith Receives 'Father and Son' Banquet Award

Clark Griffith will be recipient of a testimonial award at the Silver Jubilee Father-Son banquet of the Washington Hebrew Congregation at 5:30 p. m. today in the Shoreham Hotel.

Griffith, who helped start the Father-Son affairs 25 years ago, will head a list of sports celebrities which includes baseball clown Al Schacht, Georgetown Baseball Coach Joe Judge, Redskin Owner George P. Marshall, Washington Capitols Coach Red Auerbach, Georgetown football Coaches, Jack Hagerty and Mush Dubofsky, and Maryland Athletic Director Jim Tatum.

Other features of the program will include sports films, Magician Harry Baker, Caricaturist Dick Mansfield and sports interviews by WWDC Announcer Sam Kauffman.

Navy Plebes Win by 3 to 2

Annapolis, Md., May 22 (AP).—Midshipman Jim Nehez pitched the Navy Plebes to a 3-2 victory over Baltimore Polytechnic Institute today in a seven-inning baseball game.

Red Langenberg doubled home two men in the first, and Dave Mullaney singled one run home in the second inning for the Navy.

Both Baltimore runs came in the sixth when Midshipman Harold Graves bobbled Thompson's roller at third and two men scored.

Harbert's Sensational 61 Not Recognized as Record

St. Louis, May 22 (AP).—PGA sidelights:

Chick Harbert's triumph over Skip Alexander is one of the largest margins of victory in PGA history. He approached the PGA match play record of 12 and 11 which has been made only about six times in the 30-year history of the championship event.

And the sensational 61 Harbert shot in his morning round had old-timers scratching their heads. They couldn't remember an 18-hole score of 61 in any other PGA championship match play. A score of 62 is the recognized stroke play record on the professional circuit. Harbert's score won't be a record because of two putts conceded him.

Chick broke into golf about 11 years ago with the same sort of sensational shooting. He scored a then 72-hole record 268 in the Michigan Open and has been doing well ever since.

Alexander's eagle-two on the 355-yard thirteenth ony aroused Harbert to greater effort. He won the last five holes in a row, never giving the fading Alexander a chance to get his breath.

"It isn't as bad as it sounds," Alexander said. He didn't sound too dejected for a lad who shot par 71 golf and found himself 10 down after 18 holes. "An aching tooth bothered me some but if I had two sets of good teeth I couldn't have done anything about it. Harbert was in wonderful form."

GENE SARAZEN went into his match fresh as an 18-year-old and as cocky as always. "I can walk as long as any of these kids," the 46-year-old star remarked "Hogan will know he's in a match." Hogan won 1-up but was pressed to head off Sarazen's rally which started after he was 4-down at 27 holes. Gene won the twenty-eighth, the thirty-fourth with a 12-foot putt and thirty-fifth. The last hole was halved.

Sarazen played the tournament without a No. 2, 3 or 4 iron in his bag. He looked over the course layout and decided to do without those clubs, substituting two special-made jiggers of the type golfers were using more than 20 years ago.

The gallery found amusement in an incident at the tenth hole. Harbert drove off and his ball landed on the eighth green just as Johnny Bulla and Ky Laffoon were driving on that hole. At the same time Harbert got so far off line, Alexander dropped into a trap to the left. A spectator observed, "If they can't play any better than that, they oughta get off the course." Harbert calmed the spectators, asked them to get down out of the way, and then lifted a great pitch shot over the trees onto the green.

Ed Dudley, president of the PGA, said the executive committee will meet Monday and decide on the site for the 1949 tournament. Richmond, Va., and Columbus, Ohio, are seeking it. "We prefer to take it East," Dudley said.

NYU Snares Track Title

New York, May 22.—Two of the oldest records in the meet were eclipsed in the fifteenth annual Metropolitan Intercollegiate track and field championships as New York University won the team title for the seventh straight time at Randalls Island Stadium today by a 15-point margin over Manhattan.

Irving Mondschein, the Violet's invaluable operator, bagged one of the records by leaping 6 feet, 4⅝ inches in the high jump. Competing in six field events, the 6-foot 200-pound national decathlon champion retained his two titles in the high and broad jumps, and picked up three thirds in the shot-put, discus and pole vault for a harvest of 19 points.

Moon was nowhere near his best in any of his chores. He will have to step up considerably in his jumping specialities this week if he is to help NYU defend its intercollegiate AAAA championship on the same field Friday and Saturday in a record field of 47 colleges. Mondschein won the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet 7⅝ inches.

Columbia's Bell Berger shattered a record when he stepped the mile in 4 minutes, 18.8 seconds, wiping out Frank Crowley's 4:19 standard of 1933.

Spearheaded by Mondchein, NYU won eight of the 16 events, tied for first in another, and piled up 101 points. Manhattan, winning four events, tying in another, placed second with 86 points. Fordham led the rest with 24 points, followed by Brooklyn, with 15; C. C. N. Y., 6, Columbia, 5, and St. Francis, 2. St. John's didn't score.

Wade Speaker At Virginia Fete

Charlottesville, Va., May 22 (AP). Wallace Wade, Duke University football coach, will head the speaking program for the University of Virginia's all sports banquet on May 27.

Six outstanding athletes will be named for trophy awards, one for combined academic and athletic distinction and five others for general leadership in football, baseball, boxing, basketball and track.

U. S. Golfers Win Easily

ida victory of last winter over Maureen Ruttle, 3 and 2.

Dorothy Kielty, California flying instructress, mastered Mrs. Zara Bolton, 2 and 1. Mrs. Bolton was a last-minute substitute for Mrs. Diana Fishwick Critchely, who became ill during the night.

In contrast to yesterday's calm and sunshine, today's singles were played in rain and fierce winds before a small gallery.

It was the wind that the American girls feared most but after Miss Suggs, suffering from hay fever, deadlocked Miss Garvey by winning the final two holes the British cause collapsed.

After the matches the silver trophy was returned to Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, 44-year-old Philadelphian and team captain who helped gain a point for the U. S. yesterday in the foursomes.

The Americans will remain in this country for the British women's championships starting May 31. The title went across the sea for the first time last year when Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias triumphed. She has since turned professional.

Ankle Injury Keeps Pesky On the Bench

Boston, May 22 (AP).—Third Baseman Johnny Pesky hasn't been in action for a week with the faltering Boston Red Sox because of a strained ankle.

Pesky injured himself Sunday. After tripling in the fourth inning against Washington, little Johnny raced home on a hit by Ted Williams and twisted his ankle as he did.

Since then third base duties have been divided between Billy Hitchcock and Billy Goodman, reserve infielders.

Steeler Game Set

Pittsburgh, May 22 (AP).—The Detroit Lions will come here Sunday, September 12, for a preseason National League football game with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Portmaker Triumphs at Middleburg

By Harry De Mawly, Jr.

Middleburg, Va., May 22.—Locally-owned entries had a field day at the Middleburg Hunter Show held here today with Dr. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay's Portmaker annexing the conformation hunter crown, and Phantom Raider the working hunter championship.

Phantom Raider under the handling of Ellie Wood Keith and Earl Phelps turned in perfect rounds to win both the ladies' hunters and the $250 working hunter stake, to tie with Alex Calvert's Warrenton, Va., entry Roydestal.

In the workoff under saddle to break the tie, the judge's nod went to Phantom. Ballantrae's Stealaway was only one point behind the winners.

Portmaker, nationally known hunter, performing in superb style, won three of his classes and placed in one for his 20 points. Pushing Portmaker with 19½ points was Mrs. Amory Carhart's Warrenton, Va., entry Bit o' Silver.

In the green hunter division Bit o' Silver accounts for his fourth championship by piling up a total of 17½ points. Mrs. M. E. "Liz" Whitney's Adventure was in the reserve spot with 7½ points.

Browns Sweep Series, 4-2

ner and obliged the Browns by striking out on three pitches.

The Browns threatened to come up with another run in the eighth when Partee doubled to right with one out, but he overran third base trying to stretch the blow to a triple and was tagged out by Eddie Yost.

The Nats couldn't get to first base against Garver in the ninth, which is no way to win ball games.

IN SHORT . . . Ever since little Chick Pieretti was used as a pinch runner the other day and initiated a double steal he has been called "Citation" Pieretti by the Nats . . . Al Kozar has been shuttling up and down the Nats' batting order at a dizzy pace . . . In the series opener, he batted eighth. Last night he was in second place. Today he was dropped to seventh . . . Gerry Priddy is a high favorite with the St. Louis customers and has the most votes in a contest that will reward him with $2000 if he maintains his role as the most popular member of the Brownies . . . Manager Joe Kuhel now knows more about his two new outfielders, Carden Gillenwater and Ed Stewart . . . Gillenwater is a superb fielder, Stewart is a better hitter. Both have speed on the bases, but Stewart's arm does not rate with Gillenwater's . . . Tonight the Nats shoved off for a two-game series at Detroit with Walter Masterson pitching tomorrow.

Mangrum's 65 Leads Tourney

Decatur, Ill., May 22 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago, knocked five strokes off the South Side Country Club par with a 33, 32—65 today to take the lead in the $5000 Decatur Open.

The 54-hole tournament winds up with a double round tomorrow.

Mike Sipula, Ottawa, Ill.; Dutch Harrison, York, Pa., and Herman Keiser, Toledo, each posted 66s. They were followed by a foursome of 68 shooters—Bill Mary, Phoenix; Clarence Norsworth, St. Louis; Bob Hamilton, Landover, Md., and Eric Monti, Los Angeles.

The leaders:

Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago	33	32—65
Mike Sipula, Ottawa, Ill.	35	31—66

A preferred buy. Splendid housing value. This new home stands on a beautifully landscaped lot of 160x400 ft. in a restricted locality. It is all ready for Mr. Buyer to take care of it. Nice driveway and approach to the home; also beautiful flagstone walk. Enter the house through a charming entrance hall which has a nice roomy guest closet. Across the front of the house is a spacious living room with a real fireplace and picture window. A door from the hall opens to the attractive dining room, with front picture window, which adjoins the cheerful gay colored kitchen. Loads of cabinets, a sparkling electric range, lovely walls, smart easy-to-clean tile floor and just for good measure at no extra cost there's the 2-car built-in garage with overhead doors. 3 good-sized bedrooms; each has a nice closet, except the master bedroom and that has three. There are 2 full baths, extra cabinets and medicine cabinets. Yes, and what a lovely recreation room in the basement! Also cold storage and utility room, electric refrigerator, a.-c. heat. Insulation is complete, top and bottom and all around. The very best in plumbing, pipes, vents and wastes.

Mr. Buyer, this is a good-sized house and a real value because the complete price is only $37,500. Well financed. If you think this sounds good, come on out and take a look. You can move in on settlement. Telephone

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, MAY 23, 1948

By Thomas O'Halloran—Harris & Ewing

A MIXED quartet is a must at a fireside. Preparing to harmonize to the accompaniment of a portable radio are Joanne Holbrook (left), who lights a cigarette for Bob Sherr. In the background Miller Todd and Elizabeth Johnston listen for the pitch. Joanne is daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Willard A. Holbrook; Bob is son of Mrs. J. R. Sheer, jr., and the late Colonel Sheer; Elizabeth is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Johnston, and Miller is the son of Capt. and Mrs. C. R. Todd

It's Recess Time On College Campus

IT'S BEEN all work and no play for members of the graduating class at Mount Vernon Seminary who are sponsoring a benefit fashion show on the campus Tuesday, May 25. So, when final details were cleared away at their last committee meeting, students decided to celebrate with a weiner roast and invited their dates to join them.

Supper was served al fresco at long wooden tables outside the campus recreation hut and everyone had a hand in cooking his own food over an open fire.

Proceeds from the fashion show will go into the school's building fund. It will take place at 4 p. m. on the terrace and in the garden. Fashions will be from Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Patronesses for the event include mothers of members of the graduating class and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Everett Dirksen, Mrs. Olin Johnson, Mrs. Eric Johnston, Mrs. John B. Smiley, Mrs. Willard A. Holbrook, Mrs. Edmund F. Jewell, Mrs. Forrest J. Peters, Mrs. Paul D. Sleeper, Mrs. A. N. Miller, Mrs. William F. Walter, Mrs. Charles P. Hall, Mrs. Clyde L. Layne, Mrs. R. B. Lank, jr., and Mrs. Robert F. Fulton

Assisting with the show will be Mrs. Clifford Davis, chairman of the advisory committee, and the following committee chairmen: Miss Gail Hall, refreshments; Miss Moatka Moss, publicity; Miss Diana Walter, program; Miss Frances Jewell, ushers; Miss Barbara Davis, promotion, and Miss Jackie Sleeper, tickets. All 40 members of the graduating class will serve on committees.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lloyd, president and headmistress, will assist in receiving.

The fashion show will also serve as a homecoming for alumnae of Mount Vernon.

DRIVEN to the recreation hut by showers, it's time for a milk shake. Buddy Elmore, son of Col. and Mrs. John A. Elmore, pours a foaming glass full for Helen Adams as Diana Walter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Walter, waits her turn. The party took place on the school campus

DANCING under the stars are Barbara Leigh Davis and Malcolm Crisler McCormack, while Katherine Miller acts as disk jockey. Barbara, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Clifford Davis of Tennessee, is president of the graduating class and chairman of promotion for the fashion show. Katherine is president of the student body

Ambassador to Ceylon

Felix Cole's Next Station To Be in Newest Embassy In Ancient City of Candy

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

EMBASSIES, like spring, are bursting out all over. Our newest ambassadorial post is Ceylon which Felix Cole will take over. Ceylon, the 250-mile by 125-mile island south of India's tip, has six million inhabitants (about as many as Bulgaria), a very ancient civilization, a capital, Candy, famous for its fountains, exports tea and rubber. The Ceylonese flag is centered with a ferocious lion, standing on three legs, somehow grasping a sword in fourth paw, his tail smartly curled up over his spine. State Department officials are still uncertain about Ceylon's precise status. Officially independent last February 4, it's not a dominion and seems to be just Ceylon, period. Ambassador Cole has spent much of his career in odd countries like Ethiopia. Monday he is being given a farewell cocktail party by the Edward Dahls. Mr. D. heads up Burma, Ceylon and such in the State Department.

Busy King Peter

KING PETER of Yugoslavia, though exiled from his country, has few idle moments. He maintains a regular business office in London where his personal affairs and those of his also-exiled countrymen are handled. His major problem is over 100,000 Yugoslavs who, because of their political opinions, cannot return to their Tito-run homeland.

They are scattered throughout Germany, Austria, Italy, with some 8000 voluntary workers brought more or less recently to England. These do extremely well according to DP standards. All work on farms, live in empty wartime barracks, are transported to work in buses, get adequate food and receive three pounds (about $12) spending money per week.

Women, as house and factory workers, are also being brought to England in small numbers. Biggest problem, and still unsolved, is what to do with family units. What King Peter wants most is to have some 500 Yugoslav students educated in this country as a sort of guarantee of Occidental democracy; to have 50,000 Yugoslavs, all good workers, taken into the U. S. A. within the next few years.

How the Queen Looks

FOR the benefit of Capitalites who have not glimpsed Queen Alexandra, we'll describe her. She is 27, and only daughter of the late King Alexander of Greece (who died from a monkey bite) and his commoner wife, Aspasia Manos. She is a first cousin of King Michael of Romania. Around 5 feet 7, slimmer than the proverbial reed, she lets her dark hair fall in shoulder-length natural curls. Queen Alexandra (she has never been actually "crowned," of course) speaks perfect English, is exceedingly sweet and friendly. She dresses most femininely, wears pearl drops in her pierced ears and at a reception the other afternoon, had on something new, at least to us, in headgear. It was a black felt calotte, close as a glove, with rounded wings on the sides, the tiniest shoe-string bow in front.

Appointment Recalls Romance

COUNT FOLKE BERNADOTTE of Sweden, unanimously named United Nations' mediator for Palestine by the Big Five Powers, back in the 30s played a leading role in an unusual international romance. His uncle, King Gustav V of Sweden, one of the world's most ardent tennis fans, was spending his annual winter holiday on the French Riviera, when he happened to spy Estelle Manville, the Edward Hiram Manvilles' handsome daughter. Estelle played a good game of tennis and after discreet inquiries about the Manville asbestos fortune, the smart monarch wired his nephew back in Stockholm to hotfoot it to Cannes. The Count arrived pronto, an introduction to Estelle was effected by Mrs. Barton French before a dinner party, they became engaged in short order. Then came the hitch.

The late Mr. Manville, a sturdy, plain American who had made his own fortune, balked at supplying Estelle with a dowry. He thought, quite rightly, his daughter was prize enough. But the

Parties on a Merry May Day

Dinner Party Honors Senator, Mrs. White

By Marie McNair

"WE'LL be around as usual," Mrs. Wallace White, wife of the Majority Leader of the Senate, says cheerfully. Which means that the Whites will continue to live at their house on Tracy pl. with vacations in Maine, after the Senator retires from public life with the closing of this session of Congress.

MRS. McNAIR

Last night as a farewell and a sort of testimonial to the Senator's 31 years as a member of Congress, his colleague, Senator Owen Brewster, and Mrs. Brewster entertained at a very fancy dinner party at the Sulgrave Club.

That party — with lobster flown in from Maine—was one of half a dozen dinners and dances on a merry day in May.

King Peter of Yugoslavia and his Queen—Alexandra, daughter of the late King Alexander of Greece—were honor guests of the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis at a dinner at the Greek Embassy, with the former Yugoslav Ambassador and Mme. Fotitch among the guests, and a group coming in later from the Brewster dinner, plus members of the embassy staff to meet the royal exiles.

The Canadian Minister and Mrs. Thomas Stone gave a small dance at their home on Glenbrook rd., to speed the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian Embassy and Mrs. Harry Scott happily on their way to Mr. Scott's new post as Consul General in San Francisco.

Then there was Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz's dinner for Jimmie Cromwell and his bride, the former Maxine MacFetridge, just back from a Bermuda honeymoon and spending a few weeks at the Shoreham.

LORD AND LADY INVERCHAPEL boarded the Queen Mary yesterday in New York, while Sir Oliver and Lady Franks at the same time boarded the Queen Elizabeth at Southampton. The ships will cross in midocean, one bearing the retiring British Ambassador to Scotland and the other the new Ambassador to Washington.

Ambassador and Lady Franks will be accompanied by their two daughters, Caroline, age 8, and Alison, age 3. (See photo on Page 3, Section 2).

The new Ambassador of Czechoslovakia, Vladimir Outrata, is expected in Washington on May 27, with Mme. Outrata.

Rustem Vambery resigned as Minister of Hungary on May 20. He and Mme. Vambery have made no plans to return to Hungary.

It was announced Friday that Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Medhurst, air member of the British Joint Staff Mission, has arrived in town to succeed Air Marshal Sir Victor Goddard.

Henri Bonnet, Ambassador of France, left yesterday for a two-week stay in Paris. Mme. Bonnet is already in Paris, will return with the Ambassador at the end of his stay.

Newbold Walmsley, Counselor of our embassy at Rome, will return to his post this week, after an extended visit in Washington.

Misses Devereux, Powell Will Bow in December

TWO debutantes who will make their bows together at a party in December are Miss Agnes Kemp Devereux and Miss Jean Powell. Miss Devereux, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Devereux of Chevy Chase, will also bow at the Bachelors Cotillion in Baltimore.

Miss Powell is the daughter of Mrs. John Devereux and the late John Powell of Chicago, Ill.

Both girls are now students at the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Bethesda.

Hightower—Montgomery

In a gown of white satin and carrying a bouquet of white roses, Miss Mildred Corinne Montgomery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Montgomery of Washington, yesterday became the bride of William Lorenzo Hightower. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gurney I. Hightower of District Heights, Md.

The Rev. Peter P. Racowski officiated at the 11 o'clock ceremony, which took place in Mount Calvary Church, Forestville, Md., and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. Montgomery gave his daughter in marriage, and Miss Carolyn Switzer of Weston, W. Va., attended as maid of honor. Miss Ann Casarrotti and Mrs. Kenneth Hightower were bridesmaids. All attendants wore pastel gowns of dotted swiss and carried old-fashioned bouquets of spring flowers.

Robert Montgomery, jr., brother of the bride, was best man and the ushers were Richard Bennsky and Kenneth Hightower.

After a wedding trip to Atlantic City, the couple will make their home in Washington.

Jenkins—Corbin

National Baptist Memorial Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday of Miss Mary Catherine Corbin and Ivan Enoch Jenkins. The bride is the daughter of Robert Corbin and the late Mrs. Corbin of Rixeyville, Va., and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jenkins of Sperryville, Va.

The ceremony was performed at 7 in the evening by the Rev. Howard Haworth. A reception followed in the church dining hall.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore candlelight satin with a bodice trimmed in lace and seed pearls. Her veil was held by a tiara of lace and she carried white orchids on her prayer book.

Mrs. Joseph Henry Aylor of Sperryville was matron of honor, wearing a gown of orchid faille and carrying a nosegay of yellow spring flowers. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Otis Bowers of Culpepper, Va., in yellow faille, and Miss Ann Martin of Richmond, Va., in ice blue faille. They carried nosegays of flowers.

Joseph Henry Aylor of Sperryville was best man and the ushers Earl Atkins and Donald Clome, also of Sperryville.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Washington.

Oliver—Kause

Miss Helen Jeannette Kause became the bride of Wallace B. Oliver yesterday at Wesley Methodist Church in Chevy Chase. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Kause, was given in marriage by her father. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Oliver of this city.

The Rev. Clarence E. Wise officiated, assisted by the Rev. John Bailey Kelly.

Mrs. Oliver wore a wedding dress of white satin with a finger tip veil and a crown of seed pearls Her bouquet was of white roses with orchids in the center. Miss Charlotte Ann Kause attended her sister as maid of honor wearing blue chiffon with matching gloves and hat. She carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Miss M. Sue Oliver, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Stover Babcock, Mrs. Donald Dere and Miss Drucilla Gottshall. They wore chiffon in pastel shades with matching hats and gloves and carried bouquets of talisman roses.

George W. Graves, jr., was best man and the ushers were George W. Carter, Gordon A. Whitt, Julian G. Gibbs, jr., and Oscar R. Alvig.

The bride was graduated from American University. Mr. Oliver is attending George Washington University where he is president of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Festing—Yost

Miss Helen Louise Yost was married yesterday to William Frederick Festing, jr., USMC, in Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington. The bride is daughter of Mrs. Homer H. Yost and the late Mr. Yost of Arlington, and Mr. Festing is son of Mr. and Mrs. Festing of Rochester, N. Y.

The Rev. Robert W. Long officiated at the ceremony. Henry E. Yost gave his niece in marriage. She wore ivory satin and a finger-tip length veil held with orange blossoms. Her flowers were roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Marie E. Yost, maid of honor, was costumed in pale yellow marquisette, a shoulder length veil held with yellow roses and carried a bouquet of tea roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaids, wearing pale blue ensembles, were Miss Arlene Yost and Miss Barbara Kendall.

Helmut Linden served as best man and ushering were Corpl. William Dick and James Marino.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. E. F. Clark. The newlyweds left later on a wedding trip to Canada, Michigan and Pennsylvania. They will reside at Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Miss Hatfield Becomes Bride

Miss Norma Sherrod Hatfield, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Charles S. Hatfield of Washington, and Crossett Mitchell Best were married yesterday at St. Albans Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating. Mr. Best is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Best of McCrory, Ark.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin with a high neckline and net yoke. The dress was full skirted and had a slight train. The lace cap worn by the bride was also worn by her sister, Mrs. Margaret Shulze, at her wedding, and was made from the lace trim of her mother's wedding gown. Her veil was of white Benares silk from India, patterned with small gold and silver squares, and her flowers were white carnations, lilies of the valley and small white orchids.

The bride had her two nieces, Sherrod Hatfield, age 6, and Sabra Hatfield, age 2½, as her attendants. They were dressed in long white organdy and carried old fashioned bouquets of sweetheart roses, forget-me-nots, daisies and lilies of the valley.

L. Morris Best served as best man, and the ushers were Dos T. Hatfield, brother of the bride, Paul Wild and Richard P. Shulze, jr. and Charles Hatfield Schulze, nephews of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's brother, Dos T. Hatfield in Arlington.

Mr. Best attended Arkansas Tech and received his B. S. degree from Alabama University. He is now attending George Washington University Law School. He is a member of Kappa Delta Pi honorary scholastic society for the School of Education. Mrs. Best was graduated from George Washington University and she received an L. L. B. from George Washington Law School. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi, Mortar Board and Order of Coif.

During the war Mr. Best served 3½ years in the armed service in the Pacific Islands, attached to a radar group. Mrs. Best spent 1½ years in India serving with the American Red Cross.

Jeanne Considine Will Be Married To William Flynn

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Considine have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jeanne Monnard Considine, to William J. Flynn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo M. Flynn of Chicago, Ill. The wedding will take place June 12.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Rosary College, River Forest, Ill., and Catholic University of America. Mr. Flynn is a graduate of the Illinois Institute of Technology and is now attending Georgetown University Law School.

Robert A. Lindsay Weds Miss Jeffery

Miss Shirley Anne Jeffery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Jeffery of this city, became the bride of Robert Alton Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsay, also of Washington, yesterday. The ceremony took place at 7 in the evening at Brookland Methodist Church with the Rev. Harry C. Marsh officiating.

Mr. Jeffery gave his daughter in marriage. She wore cream white satin made with a bustle and train, and she carried white orchids with her Bible.

Mrs. William Jones, matron of honor, wore aqua taffeta and carried talisman roses. The bridesmaids, Mrs. James O'Connor, Mrs. Gloria Fields, Miss Ruth Berman and Miss Barbara Gay Sisson wore fuchsia and yellow taffeta gowns and carried colonial bouquets in contrasting colors.

Robert Howard was best man and ushering were James H. Jeffery, jr., brother of the bride, John and Stanley Lindsay, brothers of the bridegroom and Jon Earl Norwood.

The bride's parents gave a reception at their home. The couple left afterwards for New York and Atlantic City.

The bride attended University of Maryland. The bridegroom is a veteran of Navy service.

Sen. and Mrs. Brewster Give Farewell Dinner

smilax trailing up the stairway; palms banked around the drawing room and tall vases of calla lilies and spring flowers everywhere.

The hostess had chosen a gown of shell pink chiffon made with a slight train and a sparkling embroidery of irredescent beads at the hipline. Purple orchids were on her shoulder and Mrs. Brewster had sent white gardenias to Mrs. White to wear with her gown of royal blue crepe.

Speaker of the House Joseph W. Martin, and Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, were among those seated at tables set for 10 and 12, and decorated with red rambler roses.

Senator Arthur Capper was in the company, and also from the Upper House were Senator Alben Barkley, Senator Theodore Francis Green, Senator Clyde M. Reed, Senator and Mrs. Wayland Brooks, Senator Hugh Butler, Senator and Mrs. William Langer, Senator and Mrs. Eugene Millikin, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Senator and Mrs. Kenneth Wherry, and Senator Warren Magnuson.

Through the dinner hour lilting tunes came from Sidney's violin and his orchestra. Senator and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall were there, and others were Senator and Mrs. Ralph Flanders, Senator John Sherman Cooper, Senator Irving Ives, Senator and Mrs. James P. Kem, Senator and Mrs. George W. Malone, Senator and Mrs. Edward Martin, Senator Joseph McCarthy and Senator Richard Russell.

Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton were sole representatives of the Supreme Court circle, and from the House side were Representative and Mrs. Daniel Reed, Representative and Mrs. Roy Woodruff, Representative Bertrand Gearhart, Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, Representative and Mrs. Robert Hale, Representative Frank Fellows, Representative Howard Coffin, Representative Frances Bolton, Delegate Joseph Farrington and Mrs. John Taber, wife of Representative Taber.

Sir Victor Goddard, Director of the Mint Nellie Tayloe Ross; Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Carl A. Loeffler and former Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle were included in the gathering.

Then among non-official guests there were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ickes, Col. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Richardson, Mrs. George Mesta, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Thad Brown, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Fred Britten, E. AMERICAN fashions are often influenced by the native costumes of other lands. India has contributed the lovely sari which our designers have adapted for western dress in the form of stoles and head scarfs. Miss Jane Lingo, at left, wears such a gown, made of pale pink marquisette, banded with black lace. A matching stole is draped over her head in much the same manner as the sari, worn at right by Mme. Chaudhuri, wife of the Military Attache at the Indian Embassy. Her costume is of pale blue and silver benaresi cloth. Both Mme. Chaudhuri and Miss Lingo are participating in plans for the International Festival which takes place May 28 at Constitution Hall. Modern dress is from Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Miss McLain To Be Bride of Capt. Brennan

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Alden McLain of Washington and New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Sally Ann, to Capt. Walter J. Brennan, jr., M. C. USA, son of Walter J. Brennan of New Rochelle, N. Y., and the late Mrs. Brennan.

Miss McLain was graduated from Dongan Hall and Finch Junior College and attended Radcliffe College. She is now a student at George Washington University. During the war she enlisted in the Wac and served with Military Intelligence here.

Captain Brennan is a graduate of the Iona Preparatory School, the University of Notre Dame and Jefferson Medical College. He served with the 124th Station Hospital at Linz, Austria. At present he is a resident in neurophsychiatry at Walter Reed General Hospital. No date has been set for the wedding.

Service Set to Attend Benefit

When Mrs. Carl Spaatz, wife of the recently retired commanding general of the Army Air Forces, is asked to help out on a worthy project she gets on the telephone and gets results. Because of her interest in and sympathy for the widows of servicemen in the last war, who are united in an organization incorporated as the Gold Star Wives of America, she is working for the success of the concert to be given by Jean Dickenson at Constitution Hall tomorrow evening. Proceeds from the concert will go to the establishment of a medical fund to care for these widows and their fatherless children.

Among those who have taken boxes, as a result of Mrs. Spaatz's efforts, are the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Stuart Symington, the Undersecretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Arthur Barrows, the Assistant Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray, the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, and the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association.

Other boxholders include the Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnett, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who will make a brief talk to the audience on the aim of the benefit.

Tickets are available at the Snow Concert Bureau, 1108 G st., or they may be purchased at the box office at Constitution Hall tomorrow evening. Entire proceeds will go toward the fund which the organization is setting up to care for the thousands of fatherless children in times of sickness or other emergencies.

Embassy Children Take Part in Fete

CHILDREN from more than 20 embassies and legations and the school children of the District of Columbia will take part in the International Festival to be presented at 8:30 in Constitution Hall May 28. Proceeds from the festival will go to the United Nations Appeal for Children, which is attempting to alleviate the suffering of 230 million starving children in Europe and Asia.

"Philippine Album," "Fashions of Cathy," "July 14th in Paris," "In an Italian Piazza," "Gems Intriguing of Poland," "Greece's Wings of Glory," and a brother and sister festival in India, narrated by Mme. Nehru, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of India, symbolize the world unity theme which keynotes the festival.

The daughter of the Ambassador of Siam and Princess Wan Waithayakon will dance the "Chui Chai"; Miss Kalindi Kowshik of India will impersonate the mischievous God Krishnu, and Miss Hanje Vanlennep of the Royal Netherlands Embassy will be the bride in a Frisian wedding scene.

Embassy children appearing in a gay Latin American Fiesta are Noel and Mary Lys Belt, children of the Ambassador and Senora de Belt of Cuba; Susan Mora, daughter of the Minister of Uruguay and Senora de Mora; Elizabeth D. Rodrigues, daughter of the Minister of Chile and Mme. Rodrigues, and Zulita Fernandez Davila, daughter of the Minister of Peru and Senora de Fernandez-Davila.

Among those who have made reservations to attend are Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mrs. Harry K. Hickey, Mrs. Francis Littleton Browne, Mrs. John Hamilton Neill, Mrs. Gardiner Luce, Mrs. Jean Baker, Mrs. Richard Sanger, Mrs. H. B. Hutchison, Mrs. Parker Fairlamb, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin and Mrs. James Farr O'Hanlon.

Mrs. Rose Bakalar Berman is producer of the fete, and Mrs. Blake Clark is general chairman. Tickets may be obtained by telephoning Mrs. John Goodell, coordinating chairman, Wi. 5113; Mrs. Francis Ulen, ticket chairman, Wo. 8193; or Mrs. Maurice Shortridge, Wi. 8038.

Moore—Goldsborough

Miss Camilla Goldsborough and Douglas Hamilton Moore, jr., were married yesterday afternoon in the Naval Chapel, Chaplain John Shilling officiating at the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. Moore is the daughter of Mrs. Kathryn Goldsborough, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hamilton Moore.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned with sweetheart neckline and trimmed with seed pearls. Her veil of French illusion was held in place by a white satin band, and she carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, lilies of the valley and bouvardia.

Mrs. Gale Stringham, matron of honor, was gowned in yellow dotted swiss, and the bridesmaids, Miss Phyllis Cocroft, Miss Barbara Hanby, Miss Alice Thurman and Miss Mary Spencer of New York, cousin of the bride, wore pale blue dotted swiss.

Gale Stringham served as best man and the ushers were Frank Fallowfield, James Nall, Frank Moran and Dean Martin.

A reception was held at the home of Louis G. Caldwell.

Mrs. Moore was graduated from George Washington University this May. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, Pi Lambda Theta and Pi Delta Epsilon. Mr. Moore is enrolled as a premedical student at George Washington University.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will make their home in Washington.

Richardson—Sheetz

Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church was the setting yesterday for the marriage of Miss Margaret Anne Sheetz and William Henry Richardson. The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sheetz, and Mr. Richardson is son of Mrs. Walter L. Richardson and the late Mr. Richardson.

Performing the ceremony was the Rev. C. E. Hawthorne. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white marquisette with a ruffled train. Her illusion veil was held with a coronet trimmed with orange blossoms and she carried a prayer book and bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Joan Sheetz was maid of honor for her sister, and wore yellow marquisette and carried a nosegay of talisman roses. Bridesmaids were Miss Virginia Martin and Miss Betty Jean Baker. Their frocks were of pale green marquisette. Jack A. Richardson was best man for his brother and ushering were Charles I. Sheetz, Albert A. Thompson, jr., Frederick G. Stevens and Harry M. Atherton.

Wolicki—Batten

In the chapel of St. Matthew's Cathedral yesterday Miss Hazel Batten became the bride of Stanley Wolicki. The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo C. Batten of Kenly, N. C., and Mr. Wolicki is son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Wolicki of Dunmore, Pa.

The Rev. John S. Spence officiated at the ceremony. Cournel Batten gave his sister in marriage. She was costumed in white slipper satin with an overskirt of illusion matching her veil. Her bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Magdalene Batten was maid of honor for her sister and wore pastel yellow silk marquisette with matching headpiece and carried mixed spring flowers. Edward Sullivan served as best man and ushers were Gordon Hegdahl and Jack Eugenee.

After a wedding trip to New York the newlyweds will reside in Washington.

Miss Ruth Smith Will Be Bride Of Ensign Estes

Mr. and Mrs. William Smith of Brookline, Mass., have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Ensign Leland F. Estes, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Estes, also of Brookline. The wedding will take place June 12 in All Saints' Episcopal Church, Brookline.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the Katherine Gibbs School, Boston. Ensign Estes prepared for the United States Naval Academy at the Columbian Preparatory School in Washington. He is the grandson of the late Dana Estes, nationally known publisher.

Mrs. Hoyt Honored at Luncheon

MRS. PALMER HOYT, who is visiting here from Denver, was guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham given by Mrs. Barnet Nover.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was in the company and others were Senora de Belt, wife of the Cuban Ambassador; Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Minister; Mrs. Sean Nunan, wife of the Minister of Ireland; Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General.

Supreme Court Justices wives were guests, including Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Robert Jackson and Mrs. Harold Burton. From the Congressional circle were Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Mrs. Eugene Millikin and her sister, Mrs. Lucy Shepard; Mrs. Edwin C. Johnson, Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Robert Hale, Mrs. John Carroll, Mrs. Harris Ellsworth, Mrs. Wayne Morse and Mrs. Brien McMahon.

Guests also included Mrs. Ernest Gruening, wife of the Governor of Alaska; Mrs. David Lillienthal, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Clark Woodward, Mrs. Harold Bowen, Mrs. Cloyd H. Marvin, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Burks Summers, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Ben McKelway, Mrs. Eric Johnston, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Omar Bradley, Mrs. Robert Sherrod and Mrs. Ben Fisher.

U. N. Appointment Recalls Romance of Twenties late Mrs. Manville, thrilled by the match, persuaded her reluctant spouse.

A group of titled Swedes, headed by the late Prince Gustavus Adolphus, son of Sweden's Crown Prince, came to New York and the wedding at the Manvilles' Pleasantville estate. Estelle wore the traditional Swedish marriage crown, the aristocratic Swedes were beautifully done-up in trailing gowns, hats sweeping with Paradise feathers. The Americans turned up at the country reception with knee-length skirts. In Sweden, away from her family, Estelle turned into a wonderful person, really loved and admired by her adopted countrymen. Today she is more Swedish than American, exceedingly happy, all because King Gustav played cupid.

Miss O'Toole Comdr. Dwyer Are Married

Bradford Bachrach

MRS. CARL R. DWYER

. . . Naval officer's bride

In St. Matthew's Cathedral yesterday, Miss Katherine Wood O'Toole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edward O'Toole, became the bride of Comdr. Carl Redmond Dwyer, son of Mrs. Stephen L. Dwyer and the late Mr. Dwyer of Ponca City, Okla.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Right Rev. John K. Cartwright. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white imported lace cut on princess lines. Her full-length veil was held witth a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

Mrs. E. Widmer Etchells, matron of honor, wore powder blue marquisette, small matching bonnet and carried yellow roses. Maid of honor was Miss Anne Hazen O'Toole, sister of the bride, and bridesmaids were Miss Lois Deane Jacobsen, Mrs. Louis A. Miller, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, jr., and Miss Nancy Upp. All were attired like the matron of honor and carried talisman roses.

Joseph S. Dwyer was best man for his brother and ushering were Comdr. William O. Spears, jr., Comdr. Edward E. Conrad, Lieut. Comdr. Morrow Becker, Lieut. Comdr. Benjamin Franklin 3d, Lawrence H. Dwyer and Lieut. Comdr. Conrad Zimmer.

A reception followed at the Carlton Hotel. After a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Va., the couple will reside at New London, Conn. The bride attended the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Georgetown Visitation Convent, King Smith Studio School and Harcum Junior College. Commander Dwyer was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1938

Mrs. Lodge to Dance "Glide"

To the music of Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Representative from Connecticut, and Col. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, USAF, will introduce a new dance, "The Republican Glide" at the District League of Republican Women's victory ball, to be held Monday evening at the Mayflower Hotel.

Music for the number was written by Robert Taylor and Barbara Maltby, two young Republicans from New York.

The younger set's interpretation of "The Glide" will be given by debutantes headed by Beverly Farrington, who will have Robert Taylor as her partner. Further "Glide" numbers will be presented by Ruth Johnston, the star of "Sally," which recently opened in New York, and Jack and Jill, song and dance artists of the National Broadcasting Co.

The receiving line for the ball will be headed by Mrs. Joseph Rider Farrington, president of the District League of Republican Women; Mrs. Allingham Burks Summers, general chairman of the evening; Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Carroll Reece, Republican National Committee chairman and Mrs. Reece; and James C. Wilkes, chairman of the District of Columbia State Republican Committee.

Although Madly in Love and Engaged to Wed, Girl Hesitates to Close the Deal, Because She Has Reason to Distrust Man's Character

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago, when I was 22, I met Bob, then 30 and just out of the Army. I am attractive, popular and had many beaux at the time, but I fell madly in love with him and after a short while he asked me to "go steady" with him.

I knew he had been leading a rather fast life and I asked him if he were sure he wanted to devote all his time to one nice girl, namely: me. He assured me that I meant everything to him; that he realized he has been foolish, but wanted now to make his family and me proud of him.

I told him I wouldn't date anyone else, but didn't want to marry for at least a year, and so we became engaged, verbally. We were together nearly every night, I grew to love him more and more, and began to plan our marriage. But always I felt some shadow between us, something that held me back, and though I spoke of it several times to Bob, he professed to be baffled, too.

Then one night at a party, I overheard (in a powder room) that Bob was "living" with another woman all the while courting me, often leaving me early in the evening to see her . . .

Man's Love Life Has Been Varied

I FELT terrified but calmed myself and didn't mention the gossip to Bob for a few days. When I did he hotly denounced it as untrue and left in a huff, angry at me. After two weeks I missed him so much that when he called again I was ready for peace at any price.

Later he admitted that what I had heard was true and he apologized for everything, saying he never would hurt me again. Now another year has passed. He has been wonderful to me and my family, but I can't help worrying about his character.

He wants to join my church and get married right away, but would he be faithful to me? He had an affair with one girl that lasted five years before he joined the Army, then married another girl from whom he separated within the year, after which he returned to his old flame in the interim before we met.

He doesn't discuss these things with me; I simply know them to be facts; and I feel I cannot marry him with these doubts in my mind. Am I just jealous and worrying needlessly? Mother, who is charitable, won't say much, as she doesn't want to influence me. Please advise me. I need help and respect your judgment. G. S.

Man's Behavior Worse Than Weak

DEAR G. S.: Bob's incontinence, concerning which he is both belligerent and furtive in his attempts to win your trust without earning it, refers to infantile character and moral callousness—and taking into account these various bad aspects of his personality, you'd be crazy to marry him.

Charity covers a multitude of sins, but it doesn't excuse your mother's failure to see, or lack of courage to speak the painful truth about the essential significance of Bob's behavior, which ought to be clear to any life-seasoned adult with a grain of sense.

In my opinion, his profligate bias, though it illustrates and viciously intensifies all the weakness in him, isn't the worst of his performance in relation to you. The worst is his defiant refusal to entertain any discussion of his double-dealing, except when he has brought you to your knees, by canny exercise of cruel indifference, and knows you are ready to condone anything.

Her Integrity Is Threatened

IT BEHOOVES you to recognize this overtly defensive tactic for what it is, namely, a ruthless, cunning, downright evil attack on your integrity, in the event you try to pit moral strength against his corrupt selfishness. He has, in effect, broken and tamed you by this stratagem once; and it is this shocking experience which makes you rightfully afraid to marry him.

You are bound to suffer, one way or another, in consequence of falling in love with Bob, but at least you can choose suffering compatible with self respect, and that means breaking off with him now, decisively. His chief hold on you is his brute magnetism, and in defense of personal dignity, in the spiritual as well as the social sense, I advise you to rally all the forces of your intelligence to renounce that spell, a course of action which your intuition also decrees. M. H.

Fear of Losing Appeal Deters Women's Equal Rights Struggle

By Frances Lewine

New Brunswick, N. J., May 22 (AP).—The biggest block in women's fight for equal rights has been fear of "losing sex appeal," says an expert in the field.

For more than 3000 years, reports Dr. Ida Bobula, visiting lecturer at New Jersey College for Women of Rutgers University, men have been quick to use this potent weapon against feminists, suffragists and career women.

"Most women naturally would rather win a man's heart than fight for the right to sit beside him at a legislative session," she added.

Dr. Bobula, former professor of history at the University of Debrecen, Budapest, Hungary, was a leader in her own country's fight for woman suffrage and equal rights.

Now she is presenting the first course in "The History of Women" ever given at NJC.

Today's Problem

"The greatest revolution in the history of mankind—raising half of humanity to political equality—is essentially accomplished," she said. But the problem today, she adds, is whether women actually will participate equally with men in government.

"If we don't assume our responsibility, it may mean the greatest setback in human evolution," Dr. Bobula said.

American women are celebrating the centennial year of their fight for equal rights, "Yet not even in this fortunate country are conditions favorable for combining both a career and marriage," she said.

Dr. Bobula recalled that 100 years ago, in July, 1848, the first women's rights convention in history was held at Seneca Falls, N. Y. Actually, she says, the fight for these rights really began as far back as recorded history can recall.

Dr. Bobula, in her college course, traces the status of women through the ages and the periodic ebb and flow of power between the sexes.

Balance of Power Needed

"Humanity has been happiest in those periods when there has been a balance of power between men and women," she says.

"Always," she adds, "women have been a force for peace and the mutual understanding of nations, for sound democratic progress and social evolution. The world badly needs some female influence."

The next practical task for women today is "to make it possible to combine a career with marriage and children," Dr. Bobula says.

This may be done, she suggests, by measures like reducing the number of working hours per day to four or six instead of eight, by providing well staffed day nurseries for young children and by the development of commercial kitchens to provide home-cooked meals at the housewife's order.

"Housework ought to be divided between men and women as a sort of partnership," Dr. Bobula says. "It is a grand thing for harmony if both know the difficulty of the struggle for a living as well as the tediousness of housework."

Women's Farm, Garden Group Plans Meeting

Williamsburg — Arrangements have been completed for the convention here on June 8, 9 and 10 of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, Inc., which will bring 300 delegates from all sections of the Nation.

Mrs. Truman F. Barbier of Detroit is president of the organization and Mrs. Henry Ford of Dearborn, Mich., is chairman of the advisory council. Mrs. Jay Winston Johns of Charlottesville is general chairman of the conference.

The conference will open June 8 with meetings of national committees, including education, conservation, extension, publications finance and of the advisory council and a dinner meeting of the executive committee. Business meetings, the election of officers and the elevation of Mrs. Henry Ford to the position of honorary president of the organization will take place on June 9, together with the annual banquet. On June 10, members will inspect gardens and restoration projects.

COFFEE TABLES

and End Tables to Match

A glass top table adds to the frosted coolness of your summer decor . . . becomes a rich, gleaming companion piece to winter furnishings. These, in limited supply, are etched with beautiful designs by Willis Lowry, an artist who exhibits the skill of a sculptor in his sandblasting.

You now have the opportunity of owning one or a set of these tables, signed by the artist, for only a fraction of their market value. When these are gone, there will be no more. Because of their beauty and artistry, these tables may well become collectors' items. On polished Honduras mahogany legs—or aluminum, if you prefer—heavy, scratch-resistant glass, sand-blasted with delicate carved patterns is set to make sturdy tables that will carry exceptional weights. The design is of an elegance that fits graciously into modern or period settings. (Extra charge for individual coffee tables—20"x40", 16" high patterns); end tables (to match)—16"x26", 24" high.

Wedding Bells Ring

Miss Dorothy Louise Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Ross Snyder of Washington, became the bride yesterday of William David Aiken, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Aiken of Sunnyside, Washington. The ceremony took place at Saint Alban's Episcopal Church at 7 p. m., the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating.

Mr. Snyder gave his daughter in marriage. She was gowned in white satin trimmed with lace and her veil of illusion was held in place by orange blossom clusters. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley mixed with white sweet peas and gardenias.

Mrs. Manuel Avancena, matron of honor, was gowned in pale peach dotted swiss and carried an old fashioned nosegay of spring flowers to match her floral head band. Miss Mary Katherine Welch, gowned in light blue dotted swiss and Mrs. George T. Conrad jr., gowned in yellow dotted swiss, were bridesmaids. Both carried nosegays of spring flowers.

Harry Affley was best man, and the ushers were James Clemmer and Clark Murrish.

The bride is a graduate of George Washington University, where she was a member of Mortar Board and Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. The bridegroom attended Washington State College and is now enrolled in the George Washington University Law School.

Albertson—Moul

St. Paul's Lutheran Church was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Joanne Katherine Moul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Moul, and Arthur Grant Albertson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Albertson of Albion, Idaho.

The Rev. Henry W. Snyder officiated at the ceremony. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white Chantilly lace with net yoke. Her veil of illusion was held by a seed pearl coronet and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and orchids.

Miss Nancy Hoffer, maid of honor for her cousin, wore yellow marquisette with matching picture hat and carried mixed spring flowers. Bridesmaids were Miss Joyce O'Neil and Miss Dorothy Woodward, wearing orchid marquisette. Jay Bell was best man and ushering were George Moul, jr., Richard Bray, jr., and Eugene Bell.

Hoover—Valenti

Miss Grace Josephine Valenti, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Valenti, and Wallace Archer Hoover, son of Mrs. Wallace B. Hoover and the late Captain Hoover, were married yesterday in St. Francis de Sales Church.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. George L. Gingras. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore ivory satin, designed with net yoke. Her fingertip length veil was held with a tiara of orange blossoms and she carried a satin prayer book and orchid bouquet.

Miss Alberta Grier, maid of honor, wore ice green satin with hoop skirt. A band of yellow roses in her hair matched her bouquet. Charles Valenti was best man for his brother. Ushers were Wilson Earl Robinson and John Kenneth Burch.

Cards With Wedding Presents

A visiting card is usually enclosed with a wedding present. It may be left blank or you may pen a message such as 'Best Wishes" or "All the best wishes for your happiness." If you have no visiting card, write the same message on a blank one and sign it. Be sure to include your address with the gift, unless you are certain the bride knows it.

How to Keep Range Shining

SANDWICHES for buffet meals or party snacks need to be better than ordinary, different from the every day kind. Try using a specialty bread, such as nut bread, with banana-ham spread, a newcomer among sandwich fillings. Make it by mixing ¾ cup finely chopped cooked ham with ¼ cup diced celery, ¼ teaspoon finely chopped onion, 1½ teaspoons prepared mustard, and 1 ripe banana, peeled and diced. This will make enough filling for four sandwiches, which can be garnished with banana circles if you wish

I have a wood-and-coal range only a few years old but I cannot keep the top nice and black like I want it. I wash it off after meals and some folks have told me to rub it off with wax paper or newspaper, but that doesn't do it. Can you help me?
C. H.

Have you tried using stove blacking on the range occasionally? Get a noninflammible kind and apply it after the fire has gone out and the range is barely warm. Paste polish blacking, plus rubbing, gives excellent results.

I have red satin, pongee-lined Chinese drapes, embroidered and with Chinese gold lettering. They need cleaning and I am wondering how I can do it without hurting the gilt lettering and embroidery. Can you advise me? C. McI.

Dry cleaning has a tendency to darken metallic threads, but is about the only method that is practical with draperies of this kind. Most cleaners ask to see the material first before making a statement about how satisfactory cleaning is going to be. It would be wiser to turn the job over to a professional than to attempt it at home, but pick your cleaner carefully and talk the matter over with him before leaving the draperies.

We have some bejuco furniture (from the Philippines) that has been in storage for some time. It is dried and dirty looking. Could you tell me the best way to clean it and care for it?
H. A. V. A.

Bejuco or rattan furniture may be washed with mild lukewarm soapsuds applied with a cloth or brush. Rinse with cloth wrung out of clear lukewarm water. Be sure to brush furniture thoroughly to get rid of loose dirt before washing. Rubbing with linseed oil should be helpful in counteracting the dryness, though it may darken the furniture somewhat. Do this after furniture has dried thoroughly from the washing. Use a mixture of two parts linseed oil to one part turpentine and rub on with rag. Warming the mixture by placing a container of it in a pan of hot water (remember, it's inflammable) will make it penetrate more readily. Let the oil soak in well overnight and wipe off excess before using furniture again.

Can you tell me how to make the plant that grows from coal? Also how can I make petrified cypress clusters jointed to twisted Manzanita branches. V. C.

Directions for making a "chemical flower garden" with a coal clinker, piece of coke, or brick, follow:

6 tablespoons salt
6 tablespoons bluing
6 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon ammonia water

After thorough mixing, pour over clinker, coke, or brick. After piece has been wet well with liquid, drop on it a few drops of mercurochrome solution, red ink, or green ink. A coral-like growth will soon begin to appear on the clinker. It will also form on edges of dish unless these are rubbed with vaseline. Add a little more ammonia water to dish if you wish to produce more growth after first has stopped.

I have never seen the "petrified cypress clusters joined to twisted Manzanita branches" like you mention, but it sounds as though it were some decorative article made out West. Have any of our readers suggestions regarding it?

Can you tell me if there are any cooking schools where I might learn to prepare meats? Just the cooking of meat is all that I'm interested in.. R. E. C.

I do not know of any place where you can obtain such a course locally. Incidentally, the home service departments of several large meat packing companies issue a great deal of information on this subject. Their booklets amount to what is practically a home course in meat cookery. I'd suggest you write a couple of them, obtaining addresses from their newspaper advertisements.

Cooking Cues for the Homemaker . . . .

Fluffy omelet may be varied from time to time: one way is to add minced cooked ham to the egg yolk mixture before folding in the whites. Another way is to spread it with jelly before folding and serving it.

For quick cookies try making marguerites: beat an egg white until stiff but not dry, add three tablespoons sugar gradually beating as you do. Then mix in a few grains of salt, a half-tea spoon of vanilla and three or four tablespoons of finely chopped pecan nutmeats. Spread this mixture, mounding it, on about a dozen salted crackers. Place on a baking sheet and bake in a slow oven for about 15 minutes.

Surplus Army Tent Becomes Couple's Seaside Retreat

By Dorothy Draper

WHETHER you have the most elaborate barbecued specialty with all the fixings or just a ham sandwich, everything seems to taste better when it is eaten on a sunny beach or in the shade of an old apple tree.

If you haven't a car, the new streamlined trains can soon whizz you out, where you can enjoy the blossom-laden air of the country or the tingly salt breezes from the sea. Whatever you do, don't be a stick-at-home this summer, and do get out and have some fun!

That's just what a young couple I know decided to do! Their vacation budget wouldn't allow for a cottage or even a shack by the sea, but they both loved the water and hated to stay in the city Saturday and Sunday. What to do?

Betty's love of cabanas gave Bruce an inspiration and one day he said to Betty, "What's a cabana but a fancy tent?" With that in mind, he went out and bought one of those squarish second-hand Army tents and painted it the brightest blue he could buy.

After hours of touring around in their old car, they finally found just the place they had dreamed about. It was on a bluff looking out to sea. The farmer gave them the privilege of camping there for the season for $50.

EVERY sunny Saturday they leave the city for their "cabana" by the sea. Air mattresses serve as comfortable beds. A sea chest takes care of their bedding, their gay striped beach rolls and camping-out clothes. A rain barrel set outside the tent door provides washing water. Drinking water, milk, butter, eggs and an occasional chicken come from the farm.

On Sunday nights, they simply stow everything away in the chest and lock it, leaving the rest of their paraphernalia in the farmer's barn.

Betty and Bruce often have friends down for the day to share a sizzling charcoal steak cooked on their portable grill. And everyone envies them the nights when they sleep out under the stars, with a sliver of a new moon in the sky, and the fragrance of wild roses in the air, while the sound of the surf on the beach lulls them to sleep.

No wonder they say they wouldn't change places with anybody in the world!

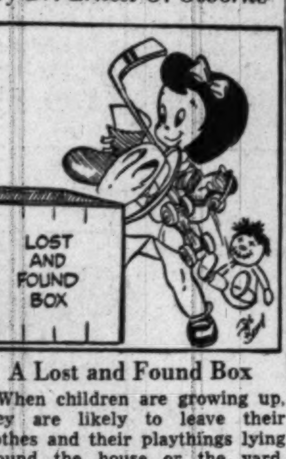
The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne



A Lost and Found Box

When children are growing up, they are likely to leave their clothes and their playthings lying around the house or the yard. Mother and Dad, feeling their responsibility to teach neatness and order, may nag and scold or at least become exasperated.

One family, I know worked out a method which they all liked. A sturdy wooden box with a cover was placed in a convenient place. Any member of the family who found an article lying around could pick it up and put it in the box. A few simple rules had to be made. If one of the children stepped out of the room for a few minutes, leaving toys on the floor, it was not fair for mother or for brothers or sisters to be too speedy about picking them up and heading for the Lost and Found Box. Nor could father's pipe be picked up out of an ash tray, for that was judged to be a suitable place for pipes.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. and Mrs. George Howard White 3d, who were married on Saturday in Norristown, Pa., are expected this week to visit his mother, Mrs. George Howard White, jr., at Pelham, near Upperville.

Of much interest in this part of Virginia is the wedding of Miss Maylou Kieckhefer of Camden, N. J., to Winthrope Carter Lockwood of Saranac Lake, N. Y. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Martin Kieckhefer of Camden and he is the son of Mrs. Carter Castleman of Berryville, Va., and of Winthrope Lockwood of Saranac, N. Y., formerly of Washington, D. C.

The ceremony took place on Saturday afternoon in Christ Church, Riverton, N. J. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of imported lace over satin. Her long veil of tulle was arranged from a cap of matching lace and she carried white orchids and lilacs.

Mrs. Winfield S. Wilson, jr., was matron of honor and Miss Gretchen Gould Kieckhefer was her sister's maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Jane Ransome, Miss Dorothy Mae Mark and Miss Barbara Ann Borger of Riverton, Miss Mary Elizabeth Stephens of Sewickley, Pa., and Miss Rene MacDermut of Leonia. The honor attendants were gowned in orchid marquisette over taffeta and the bridesmaids in violet. They wore picture hats of natural lace straw trimmed with the colors of their gowns and they carried white and lavender-toned spring flowers in bandboxes striped in mauve.

Mr. Lockwood was best man for his son. The ushers included Richard M. Hollingshead, 3d, T. Jackson English and Richard T. Wilson of Riverton, Theodore S. Brinkmann of Catonsville, Md. and Edward C. Welles, Howard C. Hewett and Robert M. Fisher of Saranac Lake.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed. On their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood will reside at Pine Valley, where they will be at home after May 1.

The bride is a graduate of Foxhollow School, Lenox, Mass., and attended Smith College and the Philadelphia Museum School of Industrial Art. Mr. Lockwood attended Dartmouth College and served with the Army Air Forces during the war.

Dr. and Mrs. Richard E. de Butts of Washington, formerly of Upperville, Va., are being congratulated on the birth of a son in Washington. They have named him Harry Ashby de Butts. They have one other son.

Buyers Want Water At Front Door Step

Beach Lot Promoters Expect Cash Registers To Play Merry Tune

By Conrad P. Harness

BEACH property salesmen have their traps all set for the folks who like water at the front door, lazy days in woodland settings, weekend holidays and peace and quiet.

The bait is sandy beaches, carefully laid out subdivisions, freshly graded roads, hidden inlets of the Chesapeake Bay and Patauxent River and reasonable prices.

The "buy your lot now, build later" boys figure sales will come a little easier this year. Prospects can be shown folks who bought a lot last year and are now living in newly completed beach homes. Last year most of the subdivisions had one thing in common—few, if any, houses up. This year it's different.

The lower Chesapeake Bay area is still the refuge of the solid citizen who wants a weekend place—where mom and the kids can live all summer while pop drops in for weekends after a hard week at the office.

The family who can afford three cars and two maids still take their business to the plushier Atlantic Coasts spots, however.

The sandlot salesmen waste no time in pointing out that their respective projects are planned for long-term beauty and protection of the buyers' housing investments. Protective convenants outlaw shacks, tents, trailers and other such modes of living. Homes rising in well-planned beach subdivisions are soundly constructed and most would look at home in the middle of a Silver Spring or Arlington subdivision.

It's a standard rule that lot price rise as one approaches the water front. Inland lots can be purchased from $200 up, but water frontage wallops the bank account.

Most developers have spent the last few weeks grading roads and putting the finishing touches on signs, sales offices and advertising campaigns. Every salesman questioned said 1948 should be "a very good season."

N. C. Hines, who has developed beach properties for the last five years, said there had been no decline in the buying power of customers. Other developers pointed out that at least half of their lot sales had been for all cash.

Buyers are now putting up a much more substantial type of home on their beach properties than 20 years ago, according to F. H. Walker, president of Willows Beach Colony. Then the trend was to spend as little as possible on makeshift housing for weekends, he said.

One common feature of nearly every beach home is the wide, screened porch at front, or side nearest the water. Rising construction costs have nearly eliminated this luxury in city homes, but it's still a must in beach houses.

Several developments offer new homes, but most sales offices are specializing in the sale of land alone, with the buyer arranging for construction of his own home.

One of several new homes at Cape Leonard, on the Patuxent River near Prince Frederick, Md.

Nearly every home erected in the beach area since last year has been built by Chesapeake Bay area contractors. Few prefabs are going up. It was learned yesterday, however, that United Industrial Associates, of Washington, will soon premiere an all-aluminum five-room cottage which can be erected by the buyer and will sell for about $1000. The firm will erect a model home next month. The floor plan calls for a 18x24 foot area.

A tour of the "Bay" area from Annapolis to Solomons will expose an interested buyer to scores of beach and river-front subdivisions. Here are pertinent facts about typical projects:

LOCH HAVEN, on South River, near Annapolis, opened two years ago, covers 167 acres, lots from $500 up, 225 sold, roads are graveled, storm sewers were recently drained, developers (N. C. Hines & Son) say $75,000 has been spent on improvements, first units of shopping center planned for erection this year.

FRANKLIN MANOR ON THE BAY, near Deale and Churchton, 27 miles from the District, community of families, large number of all-year residences, old wharf has just been rebuilt, 50x150 foot lots range from $400 to $1100, two model display homes are open for inspection, according to Robert Magee, sales agent. Homes will sell for $6950, boast living room with heatilator fireplace, two bedrooms, equipped electric kitchen, artesian well, large, screened, con-

To Exchange Housing Ideas

Civic Leaders Open Parley Here Monday

Outstanding civic leaders of the Nation, interested in development of local home and business property values, will participate in the three-day National Conference for Community Improvement opening here Monday at the Statler.

Speakers will offer ideas, or participate in group discussions, on what can be done at the local level to promote home-building, sound development of business districts, and long-term enhancement of property values.

The program will also cover home gardening and landscaping, neighborhood improvement projects, and better schools, churches, traffic arteries, parking areas and recreational facilities.

The conference is sponsored by the National Council for Community Improvement, a nonprofit organization devoted to stimulating more public interest in sound community projects.

Carrol M. Shanks of Newark, N. J., president of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, is council president; Thomas H. Beck of the Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., New York, is chairman of the board.

Members of the board include: Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, vice president, and Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security and Trust Co. of Washington, treasurer of the national council.

Projects being undertaken on a State or local level will be outlined as examples to other communities, including the Chicago plan, the Baltimore plan, the Kentucky, Georgia and Arkansas plans.

These involve slum clearance and redevelopment of congested urban areas, or home beautification and business incentive on a State-wide basis.

Representatives of home-builders, real estate and community improvement groups have been invited to attend sessions to be held at the Statler and the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Viers Mill Plans 42 More Homes

Viers Mill Village, center of a recent congressional inquiry over alleged high appraisals by Government agencies for mortgage insurance purposes, has been issued a building permit for erection of another 42 houses.

The project, located on Viers Mill rd., between Rockville and Wheaton, Md., is to contain over 1000 frame bungalows selling for around $8700.

Solar Homes Rise in Cold Climes

Solar houses can be built in cold climates and will harness much of the sun's rays, according to an article in the June issue of House Beautiful, which says free heat caught from the sun by solar windows offsets the heat loss through glass at night.

How a solar house should be designed is described in the article which states in part:

"A solar house should have as much glass as possible facing the south to bring heat into rooms. Guard against heat loss by insulation and weatherstripping. Provide summer shade for all solar windows, such as overhangs on the south windows to keek out the summer sun."

Portable Fresh Air Device

A portable electric ventilator has been devised to provide fresh air for workers in confined places.

$233,500 Is Low Bid On Church Addition

David Solomon, Inc., contractors, submitted a low bid of $233,500 on bids for construction of an addition to the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R st. nw., it was disclosed yesterday.

Apartment Building Will Be Enlarged

Homes Need Dirt Prevention

How about a dirt prevention campaign to celebrate spring house-cleaning season?

In many little ways, home economists of the United States Department of Agriculture point out, the housewife can arrange to keep out dust and dirt and save herself a lot of laborious cleaning the year around.

The advantage of smooth surfaces in turning off dust is worth considering in both finishing and furnishing the house. Gloss paint gives a smoother surface than flat paint and has the advantage of being washable. Full gloss paint on walls may be too glaring for the eyes, but semigloss paint can be used for smooth, easily cleaned walls in kitchens, laundries and children's rooms. Both smooth paint and a coat of wax are helpful wherever finger marks are a problem—around electric light switches, for example, and handles of doors and cupboards.

Dust that collects behind pictures often leaves marks on walls. Thumb tacks on the back of pictures at the lower edge hold the picture away from the wall so that dust does not gather.

An obvious but often neglected way to keep much dirt from being tracked through the house is a thick doormat outside every entrance. Such a mat is easy to shake clean and should be kept so if it is to do a good job of dirt prevention.

Frequent brushing of window screens and sills helps keep panes clean and saves window washing, especially in summer.

An electric ventilating fan in the kitchen carries off much of the volatile grease from cooking which tends to settle on walls, ceilings and cupboards and catch dirt.

Check This List Before You Buy That Little House

If the bride and groom decide to solve their "where to live" problem by buying a house here is a check list that will be useful in making their purchase.

1. Is it a neighborhood where you want to live for many years?
2. Is the price one that will not be too heavy a burden to pay?
3. Is it of good construction? It is wise to have an expert to answer this question for you.
4. Is it an architectural style which is not faddy and in bad taste?
5. Is it a house that can expand when your family grows?
6. Is it convenient to transportation to the husband's work, shops, school, etc.?
7. Are the heating system, water supply, and lighting adequate?
8. Is the garbage disposal system provided?

Water Cooler-Refrigerator

A new-type electric water cooler for business office or recreation room also has a storage compartment of 2 cubic feet and freezes three trays of ice cubes.

Realty Roundup

SUMMER can't be far away. The Washington Real Estate Board has let the word out that its eleventh annual stag outing will be held June 15 at Prince Georges Golf and Country Club. A. S. Gardiner is chairman of program committee.

On schedule are golf, baseball, tennis, swimming, foot races, horseshoe pitching, and a floor show and dinner at night. As usual, a police escort will take the caravan of realtors from the board office at 14th and K sts. nw., to the destination.

The affair is for members of the board, their associates and guests.

Contracts awarded for building and heavy engineering construction last month in the Middle Atlantic States totaled $112,179,000, up 25 per cent over April, 1947, and 1 per cent less than the total for last March, according to the F. W. Dodge Corp., a fact-finding organization.

Cumulative gain over the first four months of last year in all construction classifications combined was 28 per cent. Last month the total of nonresidential contracts was 47 per cent above April of last year and down 6 per cent from March, according to Dodge.

Residential awards in April were 32 per cent higher than in April, 1947, and 28 per cent higher than in March. Heavy engineering awards declined last month by 13 per cent from April a year ago and 34 per cent from the March total.

Bounding back from a seasonal low in February, nonfarm real estate financing in the Nation during March is estimated at 995 million dollars, up 11 per cent from March of last year, the Home Loan Bank Board reported yesterday.

The figures are limited to recorded mortgages of $20,000 or less.

In both number and amount this volume constitutes a high for any March to date, the statement said. Likewise, totals for the first three months of 1948 represented a new peak volume for any comparable past quarter year.

This sustained upward movement indicates that a large supply of loan funds had been available nationally, despite widespread reports on a tightening in home mortgage credit terms in recent months, the board declared.

Seven hundred architects from all over the Nation will meet in Salt Lake City June 22-25 for the 1948 convention of the American Institute of Architects. Urban planning discussions will be under the chairmanship of Louis Justement of Washington, chairman of the AIA's committee on urban planning.

The Housing Institute's current news letter states that cement mills are swamped with orders as a result of the recent rail strike threat and the fear of contractors that any new pricing system to replace the one just outlawed by the Supreme Court would mean higher prices. In some areas, the letter said, price increases have already been made by mills.

New Lustron All-Steel Home Underway Here

THE all-steel, porcelain-enamel Lustron home now under way at New Hampshire ave. and Rock Creek pkwy. nw., will be opened to the public at noon next Saturday, Lustron officials have announced. It will stay open for six months.

Building materials were trucked in last week from Lustron's factory at Columbus, Ohio, and the home rapidly framed up by skilled factory personnel.

A formal public opening with all the trimmings will take place Tuesday, June 1, with the Veterans of Foreign Wars as co-sponsors of the home in Washington. A 25-cent admission fee will go to a VFW relief fund for widows and orphans of veterans.

The two-bedroom demonstration bungalow will be staffed by VFW representatives. The vet group officially indorsed the controversial house at the last VFW national encampment. Peerless Furniture Co. is furnishing the home.

A preopening look at the dwelling will be given press and radio representatives Wednesday from 12 to 5 p. m. Congressmen and Government officials have been invited to visit the house Wednesday night, all day Thursday and Friday.

This is the third Lustron demonstration home to go up. Around 130,000 persons have inspected one erected in the middle of New York City. The second structure went up last week in Milwaukee.

Carl G. Strandlund, president of Lustron Corp., has predicted that assembly line production of Lustron homes will start next month.

The new-type housing is expected to sell for $8000 in this area, including everything except a lot, stove and refrigerator.

Strandlund declared his product contains an estimated $1750 worth of built-in cabinets, tables, storage closets, etc. The kitchen comes equipped with a combination clothes-dish washer. The home is heated by radiant coils in the ceiling.

The floor plan calls for 1085 square feet of floor area, with added spaciousness due to interior sliding doors.

The home will be sold through dealers who will erect them for buyers. The local dealer is expected to be named shortly.

Rules for Mixing Modern Furniture And Period Pieces

Mixing furniture of all ages is like mixing people at a party. It can be done, but individuals must be picked carefully. Here are three rules for mixing the old and the new, suggested by Better Homes and Gardens magazine:

1. Use only the good designs of any period. This does not necessarily mean the most expensive designs.

2. Let one period dominate. A modern table or lamp will give freshness to a room full of cherised old furniture. Also one or two old pieces will give a modern room added charm.

3. Walls, rugs, draperies and architectural features should be kept true to one of the periods. For example, brilliant colors, live patterns and novel textures of modern materials adopt old furniture readliy and put it on good terms with the new.

Night Lamp-Penny Bank

A thrift incentive for the children's room is a clown-shaped night lamp-penny bank. A push on its switch lights up the clown—and a slot for savings.

High Costs Laid at U. S. Door

Chicago, May 22.—Government policies were blamed yesterday for current high home prices by John J. Wagner of Cedar Rapids, president of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers. He spoke at a NIREB conference here.

"Denial of the right to compete for rental housing is compelling the people who need housing to compete sharply for it in the for-sale market," Wagner said.

"By freezing part of the population into a favorable rental position," he added, "Federal rent control grievously injures a larger part of the population. There is far more than the injury done to the owner of rental property, who is coerced into acceptance of an income below other prevailing levels.

"The combination of unreasonably low rentals coupled with the high market prices that result from excessive competition for housing has understandably induced owners to sell at these prices heavily loaded with scarcity premiums. Thus, additional injury has been done to the millions of tenants who were displaced from their dwellings by new owners who bought for their own occupancy.

"The same policy which prevents the operation of the market in rental housing then forces the newly formed families, as well as the displaced families, to compete briskly against each other in the purchase of homes, thus driving up the scarcity premium, Wagner said.

Tile Output Soars In First Quarter

Ceramic tile production for the first quarter of 1948 was 32 per cent higher than in the same period last year, the Tile Council of America has announced.

Output of 1948 was 24,787,000 square feet, 6,059,000 more than in the first quarter of 1947. March production, 34 per cent higher than a year ago, was 8,797,000 square feet, the Tile Council reported.

Beach Sales Expected to Soar in '48

crete porch, sell for $2000 down, $60 per month. Magee said he had a very good season last year, expects 1948 to be a bell-ringer.

FAIR HAVEN ON THE BAY, about 32 miles from the District, 5 miles north of North Beach, near Friendship, about 65 homes are up, established 12 years ago, covers nearly 65 acres, one of the prettiest bay colonies, nice, safe beach for children. J. Garrett Beitzell, D. C. realtor, has a good reason for boosting sales at Fair Haven—he lives there himself in the summer. Sales are perking up in the area. Beitzell recently advertised three homes for sale, sold all same day. Prices ranged from $6500 to $14,000. Most deals are above equity, with $2500 to $3500 down payments.

CAPE ST. JOHN: Developed by Leon Ackerman, who's been in the beach promotion business for years and years, 21 miles from District of Columbia off Riva rd., on the South River. Lot prices start at $1500, first section of 55 sold out, plenty more available. Ackerman said most buyers have been paying all cash for lots and plan to build homes this season. Developer has erected four California Redwood frame, five-room homes for sale at $9400, including lot. "Looks like a very good year in beach property," Ackerman said this week.

ROSE HAVEN: A stone's throw from North Beach, opened last summer by Joseph Rose, North Beach businessman, largest housing project planned in entire beach area. Rose has 27 homes underway, another 50 to start soon. Utilities are in, a central water plant started. Developer will sell initial homes at $7450 to $7950, a figure he says is below construction costs. Low price tags are expected to attract buyers and get the community underway. Covers 366 acres, large two-story yacht club is half completed. Swimming pool is on the construction agenda. Average lot is 40 by 125, costs from $750 up, with water at $2 per month. Crews will start dredging inland yacht basin within two weeks. Basin will hold 400 boats, Rose declared.

WILLOWS BEACH COLONY: Nicely laid out subdivision near Breezy Point and Willows, lot owners have 11 homes underway or completed, all built by contractors employed by individual lot owners. Lots from $600 up, with water front lots at $1800 and up. Lots run around ¼ acre, more or less, 30 sold, developers expect to sell 30 or 40 this season. Out of 30 sales, only 4 did not pay cash. Developers must approve all building plans. F. H. Walker, president of Willows Beach Development Corp., said his firm would build a few rental cottages along beach area this summer. A large clubhouse will be built next year. Present beach clubhouse has facilities for drinks, snacks, etc. Colony will form citizens association this summer.

CAPE LEONARD: Located on St. Leonard Creek, a large tributary of the Patauxent River, and the gateway to the Chesapeake, midway between Solomons and Broomes Island. Opened September, 1946, 50 families have purchased lots in the 178-acre tract at prices ranging from $650 to $3000. Cape Leonard Corp., developers, is a Washington concern located in Bowen Building. Area offers plenty of sailing, deep waters. Electricity and phones are in, streets recently built up, several all-year-round homes of high caliber have been started. Several buyers plan to build homes in area to which they can retire. A community center is planned.

ST. MARYS BEACH: On Patuxent, 45 miles from the District at Sand Gates, sandy beaches offer sites for boating, sailing and fishing facilities, boat docks. N. C. Hines & Son, developers, said lots sell for from $295 up.

DRUM POINT: One of largest land areas now being developed, about 5 miles from Solomons at tip of Calvert County. Its sandy beaches were amphibious training grounds for thousands of troops which later landed in Africa and Europe. Was formerly owned by a Peruvian diplomat who enjoyed life in a 25-room mansion, still standing. Lot sizes range from one fourth to one half acre, with price tags from $495 to $3000. No utilities, roads are in, miles of sandy beaches along 2½ miles of bay and river front, four large fresh water lakes with plenty of fish, one section of project was sold out last year, two other sections half sold out, owned by Drum Point Corp., a Washington firm.

HALLOWING POINT RIVER ESTATES: This project makes the news because it isn't a Maryland beach property—it's located on 527 acres about 4 miles below Mount Vernon, off the Gunston Hall rd. Has about 2 miles of river frontage, with front lots selling from $2200 to $5500 for a 1½ acre site. Two private beaches will be reserved for owners of back lots. Developers plan to build a river drive along entire project. Chauncey & Clarke of Alexandria, sales agents, said final surveys on the lots are underway and a sales campaign will begin in two weeks.

5% Winter Climb Noted

Hopes Dim for Early Building Cost Break

By David G. Bareuther

NEW YORK, May 22 (AP).—Prospects for lower construction costs for the thousands of families waiting to build new homes appear dim today.

Expert observers believe the whirlwind of spiraling building costs is slowing down—that a leveling-off period may be approaching—but they foresee no collapse in prices.

A year ago fears of recession, combined with resentment over high building costs, were blamed for starting a "buyers' strike." People who withdrew from the market in the spring, hoping for lower costs in the fall, found as much as $500 had been added to the cost of a $10,000 house by the time the "strike" was over.

Throughout the winter costs continued upward. A national survey recently completed by the Dow Service, Inc., New York publishers of building reports, shows an average construction cost increase since last fall of 5 per cent in 33 States.

"The other 15 States," says Myron L. Matthews, vice president of the Dow Service, "principally in the heavily industrialized Northeast and North Central areas, average a 2 per cent rise."

Only in a few local areas, Mathews added, have costs shown any drop.

Labor Is the Factor

LABOR costs have now been frozen in many sections of the country. In the New York area, for example, contracts have been signed to June 30, 1950, with loopholes for increases if the cost of living goes higher than 15 per cent above its January, 1948, level.

Guy B. Panero, head of the New York engineering firm bearing his name, said "labor wage rates are so great a factor in the construction of buildings that it is almost impossible to foresee a decline in costs."

"Our past industrial history," Panero added, "especially as it applies to the building trades and crafts, shows that hourly wage rates once increased are seldom decreased."

A new shortage of labor in the home building industry is becoming a matter of concern. The imminence of a rearmament program,

AAA Reveals Boom in Motor Courts

Rapid construction of 10,000 motor courts in the last two years has brought the number of these facilities to 30,000 the American Automobile Association reported yesterday.

"The increase in motor courts, together with the hotel industry's $1,600,000,000 program of renovation and refurbishment, add up to the prospect that motorists will have more and better accommodations on travels this summer," the AAA said.

"Indicative of the growth in popularity of the courts are two AAA surveys—one made in 1938 which showed that only 12.5 per cent of our members selected motor courts for overnight stops, and a more recent one showing that 38 per cent now prefer courts while on a vacation trip."

Firm Plans to Build 23 Arlington Homes

A building permit has been issued for construction of 23 dwellings in the 100 block of N. Galveston, 5400 block of 2d st. n., and 5300 block of 2d st. n., Arlington, by M. T. Broyhill & Sons, Inc.

Homes will be two-story bricks, with a 26 by 25 floor plan.

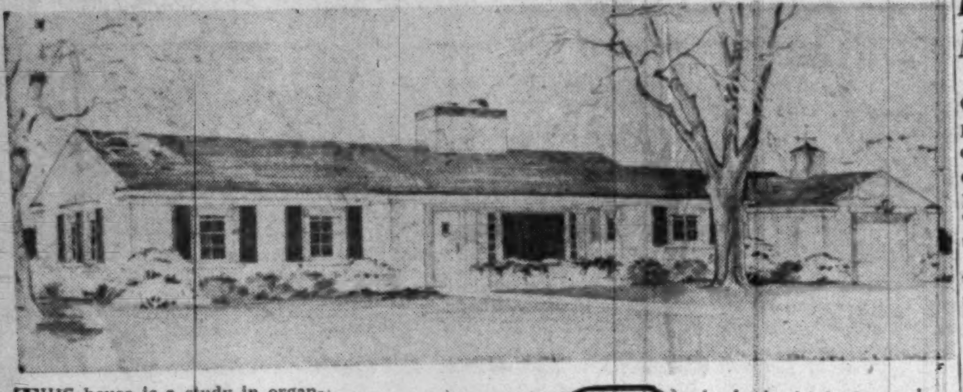
This Rambler Boasts an 'Activities' Room



THIS house is a study in organized planning and adequate storage. A maximum number of closets and cabinets have been provided.

A bay windowed living and dining room overlooks and opens onto the rear garden and terrace. The study and adjacent wash room provide space for an "activities" room for parties, play, quiet, sleeping, sewing, etc. The hobby garage provides additional cabinets.

Cross room traffic is greatly reduced in a plan of this type. The only room to suffer is the study and that area can take it.

Blueprints and specification guide for this home are available at Lansburgh's.

Enquirer Bids Inadequate, Says McLean Trustee

The American Security & Trust Co. "has received no bid for the purchase of the Cincinnati Enquirer which was considered adequate," according to Daniel W. Bell, the trust company's president. The Washington bank is trustee under the will of John R. McLean.

Although trust company officials would not amplify, it is understood that the 107-year-old morning newspaper is valued by the trustees at 10 million dollars.

Cincinnati reports had been that prospective bidders would include Frank Gannett, newspaper chain publisher; the Ridder Brothers of Manhattan and Minnesota; Silliman Evans, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, and Roger Ferger, present publisher of the Enquirer who was reported backed by Cincinnati interests.

Heirs of the John R. McLean estate are Jon R. and Edward B. McLean, grandsons, and Mamie Spears Reynolds, granddaughter of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean.

Brick Output Up in April

Production of brick during April was 18 per cent higher than in March and 21 per cent greater than in April of last year, Roy A. Shipley, president of the Structural Clay Products, stated yesterday.

"Manufacturers produced 458 million bricks and 115,000 tons of tile during April," Shipley said.

"The tile output was 21 per cent above the March total and 9.5 per cent greater than in April, 1947.

"During the first four months of 1948, production of brick was 4 per cent greater than in the same period a year ago, and tile output was 9 per cent lower.

"Supplies of both brick and tile are ample for all construction needs, and production can be expanded promptly as the demand increases."

Hopes Dim for Early Building Cost Break

coupled with industrial demands of the European Recovery Program, is regarded as a challenge by home builders.

The Long Island architectural firm of Rudolph A. Matern & Associates, for example, had been advising clients to hold off from building until recently.

"We have now switched our opinion," Matern said, "and have been advising people to build now if they must have a home within the next two or three years.

ERP and Houses

"OUR REASONS for switching embrace the income tax reduction plan. This will add approximately five billion dollars to the circulation of money. Somewhere between six and seven billion have been appropriated for the ERP. Congress is considering spending anywhere from 35 to 40 billions in a rearmament or defense program in the next three years.

"These factors alone could have a considerable effect on raising the cost of all products, including houses.

"In addition, any temporary draft or universal military training will tend to decrease available manpower. Labor absorbed in the international effect may bring about a greater shortage of labor in the home building industry.

"Finally, there has been talk of reinstating allotment of materials.

"All of this follows the pattern we experienced before World War II, when prices continued to climb, labor became scarce, materials were difficult or impossible to get, and in certain areas house construction was prohibited, while in other areas house sizes were limited."

Meantime, the accumulated building demand is cited as "staggering in immensity" by J. P. H. Perry, vice president of the Turner Construction Co., specialists in large-scale operations. Writing in Civil Engineering, publication of the American Society of Civil Engineers, he predicted that "the ERP will have a great effect on our national economy."

Perry believes "this country has had its biggest building booms in the face of the highest costs." He cites the building cost index from 1920 to 1929 as having averaged about 200 on a base of 100 for the pre-World War I year of 1913, "or about twice the prewar index."

High Costs No Barrier

"TODAY OUR cost index is 400 against a pre-World War II index of about 190, or a little over twice the prewar level," he adds.

"If there is need for building and the general business outlook is reasonable serene, high costs do not stop building."

Another authority, Thomas S. Holden, president of the F. W. Dodge Corp., construction statisticians, told a recent mortgage conference of the American Bankers Association "it is difficult to see how stabilization will come about unless there is a temporary letup in demand."

"There is a question whether material supplies and available manpower can this year support any vast expansion of construction volume," Holden said. "The Government has intensified inflationary factors and shortage conditions for construction by inflating housing demand through liberal mortgage lending policies."

So the picture for the home builder today is that costs are now 108 per cent above prewar 1941, according to the Dow Service, although 104 per cent of that rise accumulated prior to last September, "with only the modest difference accruing since then."

The Dow survey of 144 cities found materials had increased 9.3 per cent since last fall, while labor costs went down 3.3 per cent.

"There seems little reason to expect that builders will be able to turn out their houses any cheaper this year then they did last," concludes Matthews. "Furthermore, the odds are against any important break in building costs in 1949."

Average Home Sold in April Cost $11,900, Survey Says

Housing prices in April reached a new peak, 143 per cent above the prewar level. This new high was 7 per cent above last month—the greatest price rise in housing in many months, based on Nationwide surveys by United Industrial Associates, Inc., with offices in the Washington Building.

The price tag on the average American house being bought and sold in today's market is $11,035. In 1939 the average price was $4599, considerably less than half the current price. One month ago the average price was $10,769.

Washington sales in April averaged $11,990 per house. In Chicago the average price was $12,819. In New York the average price was $13,738.

The price figures for selected cities are as follows:

Designer Analyzes Furnishings

Women Fail as Own Decorators Because They Try Too Hard

By Dorothy Roe

New York, May 22 (AP).—The trouble with most women who set out to redecorate the family home is they try too hard, says an expert.

Dan Cooper, well-known designer of home furnishings, explains that, bedazzled by pictures, confused by conflicting advice, the average woman starts out to select new furnishings in a happy daze.

She is torn between admiration for Louis XIV and Swedish modern, French provincial and American colonial and usually winds up in a heap somewhere in between.

Or, says Cooper, the lady may decide to reproduce a room pictured in her favorite publication, down to the last tie-back, without stopping to consider how it fits the needs of her own family.

The designer, just returned from a lecture tour in which he was besieged with questions from confused amateur decorators, feels strongly on the subject. He has aired some of his views in a book, "Inside Your Home," is responsible for such divergent productions as the "House of Ideas" shown in Rockefeller Center in 1938 and demountable furniture used by the Army Air Corps during the war. He has acted as color consultant for a Federal Housing project, designed the library and museum at Dumbarton Oaks, and decorated homes in both North and South America. He says:

"People don't buy a house or furniture often enough to know how to go about it. They get so much advice they're dizzy."

To rid your mind of clutter when planning a home, Cooper advises that you start by answering these questions:

A—Why do you need a house?

B—What purposes do you want it to fulfill?

C—Do you want it as a background for big parties, little parties, or no parties?

D—What pursuits do you expect to enjoy most in your home? Reading? Music? Games? Cooking? Or just resting?

E—Do you need extra play space for children?

F—Is your home in a hot or cold climate?

When you have answered these things, says the designer, you are ready to start planning. If you expect to give lots of big parties, you will want a living room that encourages sociability, with furniture arranged to accommodate groups of people; plenty of coffee tables, serving tables and such. Your dining room will be important.

If you're the hermit type, who enjoys reading and music, your plan will be entirely different. The most comfortable chair and light will be beside the book shelves. Windows and artificial lighting will be arranged to give the best light for the piano. The dining room may be nonexistent, with meals served informally in the living room or kitchen, and the extra space used for a library or music room.

If you like to play cards, that hobby should be taken care of in your planning, with a game room or a corner of the living room equipped with card table and chairs or built-in fixtures.

Cooper added a home should hold nothing that is not used. He doesn't believe in fads or doodads, and advises people to free their minds of all the current decorators' patter and trust their own common sense in planning their own homes. Says he:

"After all, you're the one who has to live in it, so it ought to suit you—not the man next door."

Robot Sprinkler Works While You're Away

An automatic sprinkler control is now available to make certain that your lawn or garden receives the right amount of moisture while your away, say, on vacation. It is operated by an automatic seven-day program electric clock, and all you do is set it for any schedule of sprinkling you desire. Whatever the schedule—any hour of any day or night—it turns itself on for the prescribed time, then shuts off.

New Thermostat Gives Automatic Heat Control

The householder now can shift from a hand-set thermostat to an automatic clock model for heating control in five minutes. The new electric robot is powered by a 110-volt clock motor, which will work directly from an electrical wall plug without a special transformer.

Hotdog Roaster for Auto

A compact electric unit that roasts two hotdogs in their own juice is a new accessory for the automobile. It operates off the car's battery.

Manassas Dealer Launches Project

Manassas, Va., May 22.—A housing development of permanent homes and summer resort facilities was launched here yesterday by Claude Hixon, Manassas real estate dealer. The project is the 340-acre Bradley Forest, on Lake Jackson, a 12-mile waterway located 31 miles from Washington.

Lots are three fourth acre or larger and purchasers are not allowed to subdivide. Hixon is erecting several five-room frame homes in the $6500 to $7500 bracket, although lot owners can arrange for construction of their own homes.

Lot owners will have access to the lake through a community park area which skirts the waterfront. Proposed construction plans include a swimming pool, bowling alley, recreation hall and shopping center.

Room Odor Killer

Just added to new-product lists is a small electronic air purifier, designed to kill germs and odors in a room in a few minutes.

Modern Living Back Home in Indiana

RESTFULNESS and quiet comfort are the keynotes of this master bedroom in the "Home for a Hoosier Family," principal feature of the 1948 Indianapolis Home Show. The oversized bed is really two regulation-size twin beds, hinged to a 7½-foot headboard, and they swing wide apart for each in bedmaking. Harmonizing with the warm light brown rug on the floor are walls and ceiling of dry-built, full-wall panels, painted in dusty rose. The smooth wall and ceiling surfaces are unmarred as the panels are attached to studding and joists from the rear with patented floating fasteners, which eliminate nail-holes.

A Slick Trick in Wiring Speeds Home Building

Electrical science has produced a new wax to coat its wiring and speed up all types of home and commercial construction. It's a slick trick and doesn't miss any angles, according to the scientists. The special wax makes the electrical wiring so slick it can be pulled through sharp angles of conduit 50 per cent easier—and faster.

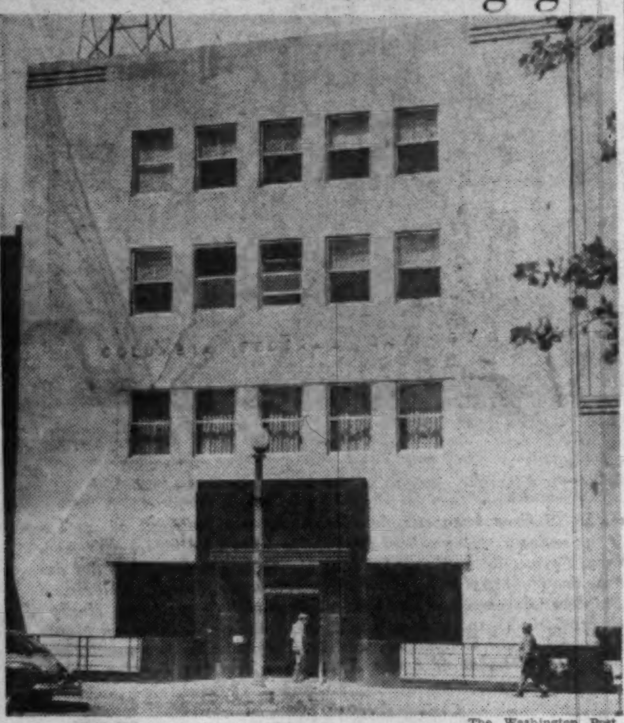
Columbia Federal's New Home Boasts Music With Mortgages



The Washington Post

$600,000 building of Columbia Federal Savings at 730 11th st. nw.

The new Columbia Federal Savings and Loan Association building at 730 11th st. nw., has everything—including the kitchen sink. The latter item is in the basement where luncheons will be served to the office personnel—with music yet.

The new structure will open for business Wednesday, with preopening ceremonies set for Tuesday evening, from 5:30 to 9, according to Clarence E. Kefauver, president.

Build at an estimated $600,000 cost, the office will provide enough space to serve a business four times the present size of the firm, Kefauver said. The 2½-story structure was built by Prescott Construction Co., Inc., with provisions for future addition of five stories.

The music is piped in by Muzak during the first half hour of each hour in the main office, bookkeeping office and dining room. Soft music make for restfulness, a homey atmosphere and added efficiency, Kefauver said.

The lending institution will use the basement, first floor, and mezzanine, while the second floor is to be leased at an annual rental of $7500.

Columbia Federal was chartered in September, 1939, when total assets had reached $5,136,572. Total resources are now over 15 million dollars, Kefauver declared, with reserves in excess of 1 million dollars.

The association has 8046 savings accounts and 2083 real estate loans.

The new building's exterior is of Alabama limestone with Andes black granite trim. Interiors boast large areas of glass, mahogany paneling, acoustically treated plaster and recessed fluorescent lighting. The building is air conditioned and gas heated. Offices were furnished by Shaw-Walker Co. and W. D. Campbell Co.

The architectural firm of Porter & Lockie designed the structure.

Room Setting Determines Color Scheme

When you're planning color schemes for your new home, it's wise to look first to the room's exposure before deciding on the basic color.

Furnishings should be selected and placed with an eye to sunlight and shade, suggests the furnishings editor of Better Homes and Gardens Magazine. A north room needs lots of vivid color since it gets no sun and the light coming in the windows is cold and and blue. South rooms are flooded with sunlight most of the day so need cool, deep colors.

An east room must be comfortably cool during the early morning hours when it gets strong sunlight—yet it must be warm during the remaining shady hours of the day. Yellow used as backbone color can be either warm or cool depending on how it is mixed and what colors are used with it.

A west room gets strong sun all afternoon so a cool color is good if combined with warmer tones. To unify color extremes when used in combination, neutral tones in carpet or woodwork can be used.

Every room should be a balance between warm and cool colors. If you have chosen green, warm it with accents of red or yellow, even if it's to be used in a south room. This way you'll never feel overpowered by one dominating color.

Don't be haphazard about assembling your color scheme. Plan your rooms as a whole and remember too, that like members of a family, all the rooms in your home must get along together. So, even though you're only tackling one room at a time, plan future color schemes for adjoining rooms now.

Before you apply a stroke of paint or buy a yard of drapery material get all your color swatches together. See if they blend and decide how much of each color your room needs. Test them in the light of the room where they'll be used. Try them under artificial light.

825,000 New Homes Started Last Year

Britannica Chronicles '47 Housing Output

An estimated 825,000 new dwelling units were begun in 1947, in areas where building permits recorded construction, while an additional large number of dwellings were started in areas where records were not available, according to the 1948 Britannica Book of the Year.

In the first nine months of last year, 576,000 homes were completed, doubling the number of completions in the comparable period of 1946, the new Britannica annual points out. By the end of October, almost 12 billion dollars had been spent for construction of all types, including public and private and new and major repair work. This was 25.8 per cent above expenditures for the comparable period of 1946.

The book points out that in the spring of 1947 there was a "marked slump" in home building, "occasioned by a buyer's panic because of higher prices." But as construction costs and selling prices continued to rise, prospective buyers, seeing no lower prices in sight, began in July a new wave of buying that continued through the fall.

"The 85,000 new permanent homes started in July broke records of 20 years' standing and approached the 1925 all-time high," the article points out. "The new buying wave encouraged builders to make an unusual number of fall starts. Private builders marked a high never before reached in September by starting at least 88,000 new permanent homes."

Shortages of nails, millwork, gypsum-lath and soil pipe slowed construction by October, the annual continues, and a gray market in some materials resulted. The regular price for nails in October was just under $5 a keg, but the gray market price ranged from $7.70 to $14 a keg.

Employment in the construction industry rose to about 1,925,000 in September, an increase of 10 per cent in a year. Apprentice-training programs increased 26 per cent, with 103,640 apprentices in training in September.

"There were more vocal protests than usual against restrictive building codes which forced unnecessary expenditures," the Britannica annual reports, "but not many local codes were changed."

More than 600 authorities on business, industry, science, politics and education have contributed to the book.

This 35-acre estate is a rare find for the homeseeker of small acreage in a country gentleman's environment. It is situated in a desirable area in Southern Maryland just 26 miles from Washington, D. C.

The charmingly restored spacious clapboard residence opens up delightfully on the first floor. Its old wide original flooring is enhanced by the graceful proportions of its rooms. The center hall (14x40) runs the full length of the house and has a gracious winding stairway running to the third floor. The double drawing rooms to its left and the dining room on the right are all 18x20 feet and have excellent open fireplaces with black marble mantelpieces. The modern equipped kitchen, powder room and sun parlor of knotty-pine finish complete the first floor.

There are four double master bedrooms each with an open fireplace and generous closet space, also modern tile bath on the second floor. New oil-burning circulating hot-water heating system with summer and winter hook-up. A large unpartitioned attic is over the entire house.

Numerous farm buildings, white paneled fencing around property, complete the well-planned estate.

Shady Spots Have Double Garden Use

COOL, shady spots are as important to the home garden as open vistas, not only from an esthetic but from a practical view as well. Where is the gardener who does not find delight in relaxing in the shade on a hot summer day?

Whether the shade is cast by trees, shrubs, buildings or fences, the plant material for such locations must be chosen for its tolerance of shade. There are many plants adapted by nature to such conditions, permitting a choice that will satisfy the gardener's taste.

Because few annuals thrive in the shade, the selection primarily concerns perennials. For densely shaded areas, as under trees and among shrubs, there are three which are outstanding: Vinca minor, (periwinkle or creeping myrtle), the Japanese spurge (pachysandra terminalis) and, to a lesser degree Ajuga reptans (bugle).

To these may be added the hardy Baltic ivy if the position faces mostly north. Fairly dense shade and rather moist soil are a happy combination for several kinds of hardy ferns, especially the royal fern (Osmunda regalis) and the walking fern (Camptosorus rhizophyllus).

Native Plants

WHERE deciduous trees and shrubs (the kinds which shed their leaves as winter approaches) are planted, many native plants accustomed to spring sunshine only may be used advantageously. Two ferns, the common polypody (Polypodium vulgare) and ebony spleenwort (Aspilenium platyneuron), will thrive there if the soil is rather dry, and so will the wild geranium (G. maculatum).

For soils of average moisture content select bloodroot (Sanguinaria), bluets (Houstonia), cardinal flower (Lobelia cardinalis), sharpiobe hepatica (Hepatica acutiloba), vernal iris (I. verna), Jacob's Ladder (Polemonium reptans), squirrelcorn (Dicentra canadenisis), various wild violets and wild ginger (Asarum canadense).

Among the cultivated flowers preferring reasonably dry soil and not averse to moderate shade are hardy asters, astilbe, black-eyed Susan (Rudbeckia), Campanula carpatica and rotundifolia, columbine (Aquilegia), cranesbill (Geranium sanguineum), Eupatorium, coral-bells (Heuchera), Epimedium, evening primrose (Oenothera missouriensis), goldenrod (Solidago), globeflower (Trollius), Japanese anemone, Lilium philadelphicum and superbum, Hemerocallis, meadowrue (Thalictrum), snakeroot (Cimicifuga), speedwell (Veronica), Spiraea aruncus and palmata, and such spring flowering bulbs as snowdrops, crocus, scilla, chionodoxa and narcissus.

Gay Blades for the Bride

By Vivian Brown

WHAT every bride should know: There should be no dull moments in the cutlery department when the man of the house starts to carve. No man wants to carve a roast with a paring knife.

Every household should be equipped with at least six basic pieces of cutlery. There should be a paring knife, bread knife, utility knife (this is longer than a paring knife and useful in more ways than one), carver, long fork (for turning meat or removing it from the pot or oven) and a sharpening steel.

Besides these musts you can add later such things as a curved knife, which can give a professional touch to grapefruit; a long, thin, round-edged slicer for cutting cold meats smooth and thin; a spatula for turning a pancake or omelet.

American manufacturers now are turning out household cutlery of fine quality and handsome design. You can get your kitchen tools as individual items or in sets of two, three, five or more pieces. You can find them in attractive wooden or plastic racks.

A gift of cutlery . . . will make any bride happy

Cutlery is a gift that is handsome, practical and sure to please. When cutlery is chosen for a gift, the best should be bought. It is smart to start a cutlery collection for the bride with a few pieces of fine quality rather than to try to make a big splurge with a large display of items of inferior grade.

Today's bride reaps the benefits of modern improvements in fine cutlery.

In Grandma's day, when knives were made of high carbon steel which discolored and rusted easily, she used a soft-composition brick to restore the lustre to the steel. Mom used a mild abrasive which not only removed the stains but restored the edges of the knives.

Today's fine quality stainless steel blades can be kept shining with just a washing and drying with a soft towel. A few light strokes of a sharpening steel, one of the basic six cutlery pieces, will sharpen knife blades in a jiffy.

Raise Rabbits and Beat Meat Shortage, Consumers Advised

By Vincent Burke

IF YOU have a back yard, maybe you don't have to worry about a meat shortage or high meat prices. You can raise rabbit meat.

The Agriculture Department offers that suggestion as an aid to the family budget. Charles E. Kellogg, the Department's No. 1 rabbit expert, says it's better to raise tame rabbits in your back yard than to go out into the woods and shoot wild ones.

Here's why:

1. Three does and a buck in back-yard hutches will provide you with 150 pounds of rabbit meat in one year. Your share of the Nation's beef, veal, pork and lamb supply this year is only 143-146 pounds.

2. Domestic rabbit meat tastes better than wild rabbit. "It compares with breast of chicken," Kellogg said, "and it's so superior to wild rabbit meat as to seem an entirely different food."

Doesn't Cost Much

3. IT doesn't cost much. You can build a rabbit hutch out of scrap lumber, crates and old poultry wire. Domestic rabbits gain a pound in weight on about four and a half pounds of grain feed. You can save on feed by giving them some lawn clippings, stale bread, cooked potato left-overs and vegetable trimmings.

4. It doesn't take long. It's only 90 days from the time a doe is mated until the four-pound offspring is ready for the dinner table.

5. Wild rabbits sometimes have a disease called tularemia, which does not affect domestic rabbits.

Here's how you get 150 pounds of rabbit meat from three does and a buck:

Just Arithmetic

EACH doe produces four litters a year, or 20 to 24 young. In eight or 10 weeks the young each weigh four to five pounds and at that time will provide two and a half pounds of dressed meat. So if the three does produce a total of 60 rabbits, you have 150 pounds of dressed rabbit each year.

You may get tired of eating rabbit meat. In that case, the Department suggests that you sell some of it and use the money to help on the grocery bill.

In fact, you can sell the pelts separately. But in your'e planning to go into that business, you ought to raise white rabbits. White pelts bring higher prices.

Rabbit raising is not permitted everywhere. But they may be kept in any town or village where poultry raising is permitted, the Department said. It's a booming industry on the West Coast. Los Angeles

DDT Spray Rids Attic of Wasps

Any wasps waking up in your attic these mornings? Or flies gathering there to map their spring and summer campaigns?

These unwelcome insects, which often appear with the first warm days of spring and become a nuisance in unfinished attics and storerooms, can be evicted through the use of water-dispersible DDT spray, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Spraying walls and rafters with this spray, made by mixing 12 tablespoons of 40 per cent DDT wettable powder in 1 gallon of water, is suggested. The spray leaves a whitish deposit of DDT which will be effective for several months in killing insects which crawl over it. The water spray is not inflammable and therefore does not have to be used as carefully as an oil spray. It is more effective on unfinished surfaces like rough wood, porous plaster and cement which absorb much of the oil spray and the DDT in it.

The water spray is not recommended for finished attics, closets or other rooms of the house simply because of the white deposit it leaves. A 5 per cent DDT oil solution is preferred because the deposit it leaves is invisible and nothing is marked or stained by it.

The entomologists suggest using the oil spray on screens, window frames and walls wherever flies or wasps will be crawling. In kitchens it is important to spray screens and window frames against flies, and shelves and interior surfaces of cupboards against pantry pests.

Wash the hands thoroughly after using any DDT spray. Use oil sprays with care to avoid a fire hazard. Never spray near an open fire, a lighted cigarette or a running electric motor which may give off sparks.

Vacuum Clean Heavy Rugs Before Storing

For summer, put away your pile floor coverings and substitute fiber rush or sea grass rugs. Vacuum clean those you are storing, and treat them thoroughly with moth preventives. The hot weather replacements are easily kept clean and look and feel cooler, besides.

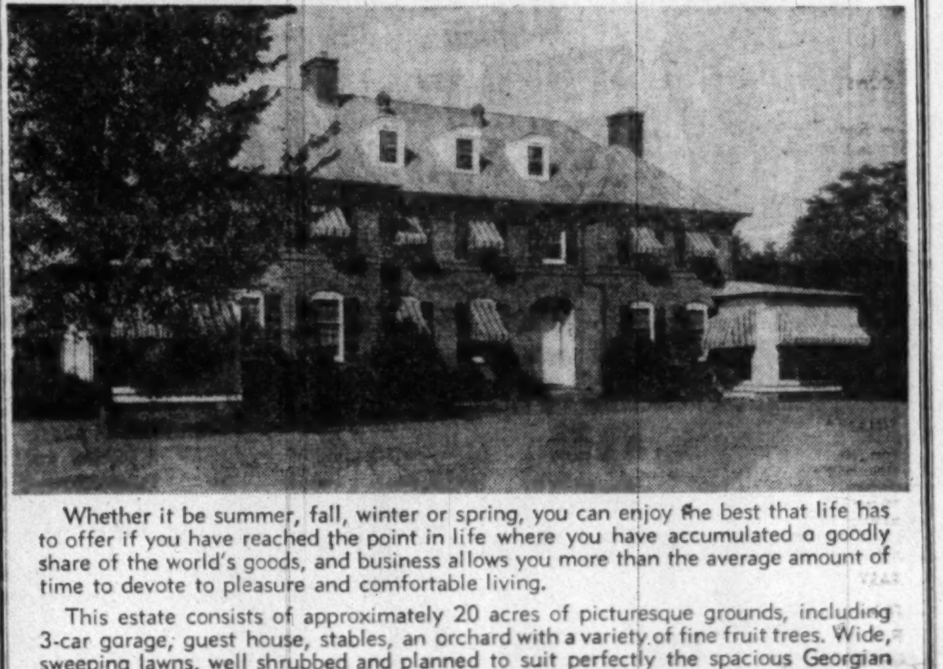
A BEAUTIFUL YEAR-'ROUND ESTATE NEAR CHESAPEAKE BAY AND WITHIN COMMUTING DISTANCE OF WASHINGTON



Whether it be summer, fall, winter or spring, you can enjoy the best that life has to offer if you have reached the point in life where you have accumulated a goodly share of the world's goods, and business allows you more than the average amount of time to devote to pleasure and comfortable living.

This estate consists of approximately 20 acres of picturesque grounds, including 3-car garage, guest house, stables, an orchard with a variety of fine fruit trees. Wide, sweeping lawns, well shrubbed and planned to suit perfectly the spacious Georgian Colonial residence, which gives one the impression of having grown there along with the other beautiful things this estate has to offer.

Not a cumbersome thing, this house, but a perfectly planned and practically new house, meticulously arranged to adjust itself to the needs of any family. Located on historic Whitehall Creek—just a few minutes by boat to the Bay.

The open road and fine spring weather beckon you to come by auto and see for yourself this remarkable value. Drive through Annapolis onto the new Ritchie Highway about 2 miles to the Sandy Point Road, turn right about 3½ miles to our sign and the property.

Window Boxes Add Gay Touch to Home

By Alfred L. Putz

A FEW well planted outdoor window or porch boxes are an adornment wherever displayed, and it seems strange that so few people realize their potentialities. These boxes are ideal to provide the finishing touches to the well landscaped home and are the logical choice of apartment dwellers who wish to augment their limited pot-plant display.

Such boxes are easy to care for if they have good drainage and soil. All they need is a few minutes of attention once a day.

Their effect depends primarily upon the plants chosen. Overcrowding invariably spoils their appearance and handicaps the plants. The simpler the planting, the more 'artistic the effect. There is nothing more attractive than a display of balcony petunias in one good color, whether white, rich pink or brilliant blue. They grow a foot tall, with the long branches gracefully draping over the front, insuring a colorful mass effect until the arrival of frost.

Geraniums (Pelargonium) in red, ping or white are another good choice, especially if combined with some hanging material. Hanging lobelia in blue, or variegated vinca, or both, will serve this purpose well.

Dwarf double nasturtiums, with their semi-runners, also give an elegant touch, either by themselves or in combinations. Dwarf blue ageratum and latana are two other favorites.

Dwarf French Marigolds

DWARF French marigolds are persistent bloomers, but must have a rather lean soil to prevent growing out of bounds. If you want to combine them with other plants needing a rich soil, put them

Let the Cucumbers Climb In Small Home Gardens

By James H. Beattie

A FEW plants of squashes and cucumbers will yield worth-while returns for a small amount of space. While not regarded as having high food value, when freshly gathered at maturity and properly prepared, they are a delicious addition to the diet.

Other members of the vine group also deserve attention. Watermelons are fairly easy to grow, but require more space than is usually available to the home gardener. A worth-while return of muckmelons may be obtained from only a few plants, but this vegetable is difficult to grow, chiefly because it is subject to severe attack by insects and diseases.

Many gardeners prepare so-called "hills" for the vine crops. The term usually refers to a group of two or three individual plants set in a spot 1 to 2 feet in diameter where the soil has been well prepared by mixing in compost and fertilizer. These hills are usually raised 3 or 4 inches above the general surface of the garden.

Four to six hills of the bush varieties of squash are usually sufficient. This requires a space about 4 feet wide and 15 to 20 feet long. Cucumbers have a typically vining habit and need more space, unless trained to a trellis or other support. If cucumber vines are allowed to run on the surface, hills should be about 6 feet apart each way. By using a trellis they may be grown in 4-foot rows with single plants spaced 2 feet apart along the trellis. This method necessitates some pruning by removing a portion of the side branches. The main stem will require tying to the trellis. Greenhouse growers commonly train cucumber plants to a height of 6 to 7 feet.

Main stem of cucumber vine should be tied to trellis

Fine for Pickling

WHEN grown primarily for pickling, much larger plantings of cucumbers will be required. Unless a considerable quantity of pickling-size cucumbers can be obtained within a few days, the results hardly justify the effort. Some overcome this problem by making a rather large planting, and obtain all the pickling stock desired within a few days while the plants are in their prime. The plants are then removed and the space devoted to other purposes.

Fertile, well drained soil with and abundance of organic matter is needed. Liberal applications of commercial fertilizer are also an almost universal requirement. Those having an unlimited supply of compost and related materials may find it possible to reduce the use of commercial fertilizer to a minimum.

Soil texture is important, but this is usually cared for through the use of organic matter, a "must" for garden vine crops. It is better to use fresh land each season, particularly avoiding having plants follow each other season after season.

Vine crops are distinctly warm-weather plants. It seldom pays to plant the seeds outdoors until in 3½-inch pots filled with poor soil and sink these in the box where wanted.

Heliotrope cannot be said to be strong color in any of its shades but its rich fragrance has a special appeal. Lilliput zinnia, verbena and portulaca also have their admirers but they lack the mass effect of the others, and therefore should be used only where the boxes are placed for close inspection, as on the open porch.

The preceding are all suited to situations where they receive sunlight for at least five hours a day. They may be combined with such foliage plants as asparagus sprengeri, wandering Jew (tradescantia), coleus, dracaena indivisa and dusty miller.

Boxes in shaded positions depend primarily on foliage plants because there are so few flowering plants which will bloom well in the absence of sunlight. The most colorful are fancy-leaved caladiums, with bold and colorful leaves that are lovely. Keeping them well supplied with water is the main requirement.

Other foliage plants for shady locations are aspidistra, Boston fern, grevillea and ivy. Asparagus sprengeri, wandering Jew, pandanus veitchi and dracaena, already mentioned for sunny exposures, will do equally well in the shade.

Some Like Shade

FLOWERING plants that do fairly well in the shade are pansies, tuberous-rooted begonias, fuchsia, impatiens sultani and torenia. Pansies are very lovely but seldom last past midseason, even if the flowers are picked off as they begin to fade. Tuberous-rooted begonias have special value in sections where summers are not too hot. Fuchsias like frequent syringing during the hot summer months. Impatiens and torenia must be kept well supplied with moisture to thrive.

With so many good plants available, holding down the selection to a minimum essential for a pleasing effect becomes a real problem. Choose one type of plant for the main theme, using others only in a complementary capacity to cover the front of the box or provide one or several accents.

The great difference in the plant materials, so far as the arrival of the blooming season is concerned, and the fact that the boxes must look their best right from the start call for the use of potted plants that are ready to bloom unless they are chosen for their foliage effect.

Space all plants to allow for limited expansion, and if at all possible plant right at planting time for the removal of certain ones when the box becomes overcrowded.

Czechs Build Border Air Raid Shelters

BISCHOFSREUTH, Germany (AP).—Air raid shelters are being constructed on the Czechoslovakia side of the Czech-German border. The construction is evident from the German side. It is so plain that the Bavarian border police have included it in their daily reports.

The area here is mountainous. Travelers told the German police that Czech engineer forces working on the shelters and other fortifications represent a strength of about two army divisions. They said also that the engineers have destroyed all bridges of strategic moment in a mile-square border area.

Tall structures like the Empire State Building could not exist before development of high-speed elevators to make them practical. The Empire State Building has 58 elevators that travel up to 1000 feet per minute.

70c a Day Homes Planned for Poles

WARSAW, POLAND (AP).—The "Worker Settlements Organization" has just been established to direct all housing operations for the working classes. It plans to build model workers' settlements with modern equipment for "collective and social life."

Rent is one of the cheapest things in Poland today and that objective will be continued. Workers will pay for their new homes a charge equivalent to what their daily bread costs. That, for an average family, is about 70 cents per day.

Title Concern Plans Addition to Offices

Davis-Ruffner Title Corp., 123 S. Royal st., Alexandria, Va., plans an addition to its office building at that address according to a building permit application. W. A. Wright of Groveton, Va., is the builder. The addition is to be two stories and basement, of brick construction.

warm weather has arrived. On the other hand, it is desirable to bring the fruits to edible maturity ahead of summer heat, drouth and heavy insect infestation. Some start the seeds indoors in berry boxes, plant bands or other containers. The plants are moved to the garden and placed in position without disturbing the roots. This point is especially important because these plants are sensitive to any root system disturbance.

Berry baskets may be easily removed when setting the plants in position. Sod may be placed intact. Some plant the seeds direct in the garden as much as two weeks ahead of the normal season and surround each hill with a 2-foot frame made of 6-inch boards. The frame is covered with cheesecloth, aster cloth, tobacco cloth or some other similar material that performs the double duty of keeping the plants warm and excluding insects. These frames are often left in position until the plants begin to run, to prevent early insect infestation.

Choice of Varieties

BURPEE hybrid and early portune are excellent salad varieties of cucumbers. Both may be used for pickling. National pickling and fordhook pickling are better adapted sorts for pickling, but all varieties may be used for either purpose.

Yankee hybrid, early prolific straightneck, white bush scallop and zucchini are excellent summer varieties of squash. Acorn or table queen and butternut are desirable for winter storage.

Aphids, striped and spotted cucumber beetles and the melon or pickle worm are among the enemies.

The usual remedy for aphids is to spray or dust with nicotine in accordance with the directions of the manufacturer.

Two standard remedies are used for the cucumber beetles. Cryolite preparations used as a dust or a spray gives effective control. If this material is used it should be discontinued before the fruits reach edible size. Rotenone may be employed throughout the season with entire safety.

American Designers Blend Modern and Traditional

By Vivian Brown

THE WEDDING of modern and traditional furniture is a union that is sure to stick. It was no whirlwind courtship. American designers, in the role of matchmakers trying to blend streamlined designs of original modern and the comfort of functional furniture, haven't sacrificed, line, color or comfort. The current crop of modern furnishings is hard to beat from the standpoint of beauty of design, excellence of construction, comfort, richness and durability of fabric.

American housewives who were shy of modern furniture because they doubted its practicability and durability have nothing to fear on that score now. Not if they shop wisely, says the young furniture designer, Ben De Setto.

He advises you first to strive for simplicity. Extreme designs and overpowering fabrics should be skipped by the budget-wise housewife. Select a piece of furniture that will not become dated and which will wear as gracefully as an heirloom jewel.

Look for good construction. Frames should be of hardwood, and lumber stock should be of a good thickness, depending on the design. Coils set on a sagless web base and properly blocked corners are other important features. These should all be taken into consideration and if you do business with a reliable firm you have nothing to fear, he says.

Many times hosewives have been disillusioned about modern furniture, Mr. De Setto has found, because they believe that when they buy a streamlined design they also should select an unusually gay fabric. This, he cautions, may prove disastrous to the harmony of the other furnishings.

In his own urban modern line, Designer De Setto contrasts a fabric of a bold design with a solid color. Seat cushions and backs of many of his pieces are upholstered in gay florals and bright scrolls, but arms and base are covered with fabrics in solid color nubby or plain weaves.

When he uses an all-over design treatment, as he does with much of his somewhat formal classical modern, he often selects tone-on-tone fabrics, such as two shades of green.

He has, in many instances, been able to gather inspiration from old pieces. By discarding many of the undesirable features of the old, he comes up with a truly comfortable piece of modern design. One Spanish swing-arm sofa is unusual in that it was inspired by an old type Spanish sofa with gaudy wood carvings and a rachet type back. Today it has been made into a comfortable modern upholstered sofa which still preserves the swinging-arm design and which can be raised or lowered as desired.

All in all, modern has come a long way when it can incorporate tufted backs, scalloped cushions, comfort and lasting construction and still retain beauty of line and color.

Weeder's Guide

Katie Lists 'City Slickers' As DDT Bait

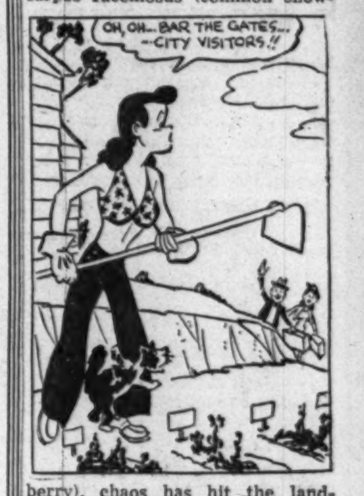
FROM now until fall the garden is subject to attack by the most virulent and destructive of all pests. The species is known as the Visitor From the City.

It starts appearing, in ever increasing quantities, from the time the lilacs bloom and drops off fast when the mean temperature goes below 65 degrees. Then there's no trouble until the following spring.

As far as I can figure out, there is absolutely no way to control them. In their natural habitat, as cliff-dwellers, they are harmless, agreeable, kind to children and animals. But when the sap starts to rise, when their tired minks go into cold storage, some chemical change takes place—and they start arriving, Saturdays and Sundays, by train and automobile.

"Just tell me what you want me to do," they say, "give me a shovel, a hoe or just let me weed. I want to help."

Before you can say symphoricarpos racemosus (common snowberry), chaos has hit the landscaping. Those who say they don't know anything about gardening are the easiest to control. You can just point out a few easily identified weeds and tell them to pull out all of those they see. Or you can hand them a spading fork and tell them to dig a full fork's depth from that stick to that other stick. This is rather dull, hard work and they usually give up early.



OH, OH... BAR THE GATES... —CITY VISITORS!!

The ones you really have trouble with are the cookies who used to be children of nature. They think they know everything. One of these smart Alecs last year picked up a second degree sunburn carefully removing all the young carrot seedlings from a row.

I've been lucky so far this year—but the season's young. All I've lost to date has been a planting of zinnias and three rows of marigolds. But a neat, precise friend tidied up the yard by carefully cutting off the crocus leaves with a pair of scissors—which means no crocuses next year.

Of course, you can protect the place by putting up "beware—vicious dog" signs, turning the hose on anyone who isn't the milkman, or picking fights with your friends.

I prefer a more subtle approach. First, tell new arrivals about how just last week Willie got a bad sacroiliac pushing the wheelbarrow and how Willie's wife is still in the hospital from an infected spider bite. Mention poison ivy every sentence.

Hide any extra work clothes and shoes you have; bury an extra rake, hoe or any other equipment and pretend you can't stand being parted from your own special tools. Fix up the terrace so there's both sun and shade, comfortable lounging chairs and lots of cooling drinks. Make them do all the cooking—indoors.

The ideal planting time is upon us now, nights are warm and it seems to me I can almost watch the young plant bore through the ground. I'm keeping up succession plantings of annuals and vegetables such as lettuce, beans, corn and other short season crops.

I've bought a scuffle hoe—that's the kind you push in front of you and it cuts off the weeds just below the soil—and I think it's wonderful. I'm thinning the rows of seedings industriously, transplanting the surplus whenever possible.

And my armory of weapons is fully stocked for the major conflict with the insect enemies.

Don't Look For Golden Oratory

By John Crosby

LET US sidestep the arguments and the issues of the recent Great Debate and reflect on Thomas E. Dewey and Harold E. Stassen strictly as radio performers. Their recent celebrated tussle, conducted over 900 radio stations, was a curiously mild affair and rather disappointing.

Both candidates, I'm told, were repeating what they'd said many, many times before and in Mr. Stassen's case it sounded that way. In fact, Mr. Stassen's original argument sounded not only rehearsed but memorized to such an extent that the meaning was beginning to get a little dim.

The former Minnesota Governor speaks a shade too fast, clings to a single note with the tenacity of Cole Porter in "Night and Day," slurs his words, and runs words together. The voice is pleasant enough but hardly challenging and though he exudes sincerity, neither his words nor his delivery ring with that passionate conviction which a good radio politician should be able to summon up for any cause, no matter how trivial.

All this is a little surprising since Mr. Stassen in person has a commanding presence which lends great authority to his speeches.

And, incidentally, Mr. Stassen may well have lost the votes of all English teachers as well as those of a diminishing group of hidebound writers by his phrase, "to effectively oppose."

Dewey Mellower

AS FOR Governor Dewey, he has improved mightily since I first heard him campaign for District Attorney of New York County. He is more relaxed and mellower; he no longer snaps at each word as if it were Lepke Buchalter's neck and he has given up that sibilant whisper which once gave the impression the whole world was conspiring against him. He still marshals his arguments like a lawyer in front of a jury—presenting a case, as it were, rather than a point of view on a highly controversial subject.

Though it's not entirely fair to judge them as competing baritones, I must admit rather hesitantly that the Dewey voice is richer and possesses much more tone color than that of Stassen. As a political orator, by the way, Dewey is a great triple-adverb man, if that's one of your enthusiasms. "Unalterably, unswervingly, wholeheartedly," he boomed on one occasion. I don't know how he missed "unequivocally." It belongs in there some place.

The newspapers worked pretty hard to compare this debate with those of Lincoln and Stephen Douglas in 1858. The similarity is slight. Lincoln and Douglas were unalterably—Ah there, Mr. Dewey!—opposed on a basic principle of government, States' rights versus the powers of the Federal Government. On the Communist question, Dewey and Stassen, it seems to me, occupy pretty much the same ground and differ only on method, though that difference, I hasten to add, is large.

No Vivid Phrase

THERE was another big difference which will weigh heavily on the ears of the voters when the campaign gets hotter. In the hour-long debate, there was not a single provocative phrase, no haunting, upsetting sentence, no prose of any distinction whatsoever.

Early returns indicate there will be no Roosevelt, no Churchill, and certainly no Lincoln or Douglas in the coming presidential campaign. The contest may be bitter, the issues will certainly be vital, but it's my guess the coming struggle for the White House will be largely fought—and there are some who will welcome the change—in pedestrian prose, by public speakers, not orators.

Olney Season Opens Friday

WITH a star of first magnitude, the Olney Theater this week ushers in 15 weeks of summer theater in the country. Helen Hayes, who will be making her only country theater appearance of the summer, will open an 11-performance run Friday night in James M. Barrie's "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire."

Miss Hayes, who is to leave immediately after her Olney visit to play "The Glass Menagerie" in London, will be supported by John Williams, who has appeared in the comedy with her before, and Mary MacArthur, her daughter. In private life Miss Hayes is the wife of Playwright Charles MacArthur, present editor of Theater Arts Monthly.

Noted names dot the supporting cast: Donald Murphy, one of the more active of Broadway's young leading men; Elizabeth Ross, former Catholic University player who has been active in New York, and Elfrida Derwent, a long-popular player who is the sister of Equity's president, Clarence Derwent.

Miss Hayes' engagement—already virtually sold out—will run through Sunday, June 6, with matinees Saturday and Sunday and no Monday performance.

Gable Gives Films The Word on War

HOLLYWOOD, May 22 (INS).—Behind the scenes in Hollywood, Clark Gable is waging a successful one-man campaign to make the film industry realize that the war did not completely leave the public's mind on VJ-Day.

Since he is still "king," he has not only made the story of a society surgeon who found redemption in battlefield surgery and rugged companions (the forthcoming "Homecoming") but he'll next do "Command Decision."

Gable snorts at those moguls who insist that the public wants only to "escape" from reality, and he's in a position to do what he wants, which is a rare spot for an actor.

'Country Style'

HAYES & MacARTHUR: The country calls this week to theater-goers with the opening Friday night of the Olney Theater, boasting a unique billing: Helen Hayes and her daughter, Mary MacArthur, in Sir James M. Barrie's comedy of a mother and her daughter, "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire." Busy Gene Tierney (right), is now on the Capitol screen in "The Iron Curtain." Miss Tierney made the news this week by giving up her role in "Lady Windermere's Fan." She had a good reason: she and Oleg Cassini are expecting a child

Free Education Is 'Tams' Goal

By Gilbert P. Staley

PITTSBURGH, May 22 (AP).—It might be because a former grid coach is the director but a Duquesne University musical group draws bigger crowds than the Dukes' football team.

The group, named the "Tamburitzans," operates like a well-drilled team, much to the satisfaction of music lovers and their 35-year-old director, Matt L. Gouze.

They take their name from the tamburitza, a stringed instrument which was a forerunner of the mandolin and guitar.

The "Tams" have two missions:

1. To procure an education.

2. To perpetuate Southern Slavic folk music and dances in America.

Most of the members are of Slavic descent, ranging in age from 17 to 22. All competed for membership—and the accompanying scholarships for four-year university courses.

It's a Reward

GOUZE doesn't mind admitting the "Tams" receive their education "and a lot of trimmings" for free.

"After all," he says, "we feel that young persons with musical talent should be rewarded if there's an opportunity, so we have provided scholarships. As for board and room—well, none of the 'Tams' has to pay more than $250 a year, so each saves approximately $750 annually."

This year seven States are represented in the "Tams" makeup. Marilyn Kazic, a pianist, of Windsor, Ontario, adds international flavor.

Gouze says he doesn't have any trouble with any of his student artists as far as their grades are concerned. He shouldn't, for they don't get a chance to neglect their homework.

While most of Duquesne's students have campus privileges to 10 each night, the "Tams" must study from 7 to 9:30. Then they're allowed 30 minutes to go to the campus drugstore or take a stroll.

More than a dozen of the "Tams" live in a dormitory which has been set up in the living quarters of Gouze and his wife. They have two children and the arrangement works out fine, says Mrs. Gouze, a former Russian dancer who lived in Minnesota until she met her husband.

"We don't have to worry about baby sitters," quipped Mrs. Gouze. She's almost as busy as her

Song's Nice To Have, but Coin's Nicer

By Hal Clancy

Boston, May 22 (U.P.).—It's nice to have a song in your heart, but it's nicer to have a buck in your pocket.

That was Al Frazzini's advice today to budding songwriters. And Al, who wrote a $40,000 hit song 10 years ago, offered himself as an object lesson.

He's still supplying band leaders with hit tunes—but now he does so only as a messenger boy for a music company.

"That's the way it goes," he explained. "Up and down. In this business you have to be a gambler. You never know when you'll hit it. Never know when you'll miss. Lots of good songs flop. Lots of poor ones go over big. You just keep trying and waiting."

Trying a Long Time

FRAZZINI has been trying for 25 years.

"See what I mean?" he asked. Right now I've got a job delivering music from publishing houses to band leaders at night clubs and hotels. It keeps me and the wife and four kids together. It'll do until I hit the big time again."

"Twenty years ago I was making big noises in Tin Pan Alley," he said. "Fifteen years ago I was broke. Ten years ago I wrote 'My Cabin of Dreams' and that little number was on the Hit Parade 12 weeks and made about $40,000.

"For five years the road goes downhill. Then I write a song called 'If You See Margie' and Vaughan Monroe wants to make a recording of it. It looked like easy street again—but it wasn't.

"What happened? Caesar Petrillo bans records to get royalties for musicians. My song got cold on the shelf and died. That's what I mean when I say it's a gamble. You can't tell."

Wouldn't Trade

BUT he wouldn't do anything else if he had the chance.

"I feel sorry for the starry-eyed kids who feel a song busting out in them and want to make a career of it," he said. "Most of them think it's all glitter and spangles and bucks."

Of course, he's still chasing the rainbow himself.

"I've sold a song called 'If I Live to Be 100' to a recording outfit and I've just finished collaborating on another.

"One of 'em will come through," he said. "They're both good songs and one of 'em has to go over. So help me if they both flop I've made up my mind what I'll do.

"I'll sit right down and write another."

HOLLYWOOD Confusion: MGM is now filming "Connecticut Yankee" with June Allyson. Last year, Paramount made "Connecticut Yankee" with Bing Crosby. The MGM version is a sequence for the Rodgers-Hart biography, "Words and Music." Paramount had to write its own music because MGM owned the original score.

Then Came 'Harvey'

Ease Wasn't Alwaysfor Mary

By Richard L. Coe

MARY CHASE makes playwriting seem like a snappy profession. She also might well become the patron saint of the tired newspapergal.

These days Mrs. Chase finds a check in her mail every week for about $5000 and spends her hours toting up her income tax.

For Mary Chase, as everyone knows, is the author of "Harvey," that fabulous comedy which Frank Fay is now playing at the National, Joe E. Brown is acting in San Francisco, Jack Buchanan is limning in New York and for which England's Sid Fields is rubbing his hands, over in London.

Things for Mary Chase were not always thus.

Fifteen years ago, or so, Mary was determined to write plays for a living. But what she did for a living was considerably more mundane, less remunerative. She was a reporter in Denver, working on the Rocky Mountain News. Way back then her friends and her fiance kidded her about her insistence that she'd someday write a play, but they respected her as a good, hardworking reporter.

One of her memorable stories in those days was the boring of the Moffat Tunnel, connecting Eastern and Western slopes of the Rocky Mountains. Jack Foster, one of the reporters, and Mary Coyle, as Mrs. Chase was then, were at opposite sides of the tunnel and when a slight opening in the rock separating the two parts of the tunnel appeared, the reporters of the Rocky Mountain News bussed each other through the aperture, just as did Boccacio's lovers of yore.

Mary didn't marry Jack. It was just a newspaper stunt. She did, however, stick to the staff and married another able newspaperman, Robert Chase, a colleague who later became managing editor. She is still peacefully married to Bob. As Mrs. Chase, she continued her reporting career and reared three sons.

All the while, though, the play bug kept biting. One effort, "Sorority House," made the amateur groups, but didn't help much in the moola department. Another—"Me Third"—was taken by the Federal Theater, but still Mrs. Chase had no tax problems.

Early 'Misses'

IT WAS "Me Third" which brought Mary Chase and Brock Pemberton together, a meeting that eventually was to bring them together for "Harvey." But that was back in 1936.

For the record, "Me Third" (which Broadway knew as "Now You've Done It"), concerned a maid who had moved from a job taking coats and hats of congressmen and leading citizens in a place known in fiction as a "bordello" into the home of a respectable citizen. The maid met so many of her old friends in the new job that she was rather a trial to her new employers.

The critics didn't go for this one and Mary had to borrow money to get back to Denver. Then she began to think of her three Ulster-born uncles and their tales of Irishmen who always had an invisible friend (a Pookah) to keep them from drinking alone. She brooded about this and spent several years trying to work her idea into play form.

Here again Pemberton entered the scene. Because he'd taken a chance on her first Broadway venture, she sent him the script. By phone and plane producer and author worked out the script to their satisfaction. Or, as Mrs. Chase puts it, "to Mr. Pemberton's satisfaction."

Here, too, bankers entered the scene. Buoyed by hope and assurances of a bank loan to redecorate the house, Mother told the three boys that for once they could forget their training and draw pictures on the walls. The boys had a swell time and the fad spread to family friends, one of whom contributed a life-sized nude in the hall with a social security number tattooed on her chest. Next day the bank said the loan was off. For the next year the Chase family lived with those bizarre walls.

Late in '43, though, things took an upswing. Pemberton got things rolling and under the title of "The Pookah," which mystified everyone, the play went into rehearsal. During the try-out days in Boston, something drastic was tried which hasn't been done since. A real—well, comparatively—rabbit, 6 feet 1½ inches tall was introduced in the performance. That one performance was enough.

Worries Over

FROM THE moment "Harvey" arrived at the 48th Street Theater, November 1, 1944, Mrs. Chase's worries were over. The play's still there, with guest stars taking over the part its creator is now playing at the National. For two seasons, Joe E. Brown has been touring the mid and far West.

Early this year Mrs. Chase and her three boys took off for Ireland—to look for Ulster's Pookahs—and England—to set the stage for a probable production next fall. It's most likely Sid Fields of the music halls will get the role, which entranced him mightily on a New York visit a year ago. The English performance will be the first outside the United States, but after that will come performances all over the "Harvey" conscious globe.

Movie rights have been leased to Universal, which will be paying out, in installments, a total of one million bucks for the privilege—and considered risks—of putting "Harvey" on celluloid. The film cannot be released before 1950, by which time, presumably, "Harvey" will have been a visitor to most American stages.

While three companies have been out only recently to boost that weekly royalty check up to the $5000 neighborhood, Mrs. Chase has raked in something like a half-million on her hit.

Which is why people will continue to try playwriting, producers like Pemberton will read their eyes out trying to find another comedy smash and why newspapergals, with which Washington abounds, shouldn't ever give up hope.

'Oklahoma!' Closing Run Next Saturday

NEW YORK, May 22 (AP).—"Oklahoma!", longest running musical in Broadway history, will end its New York engagement next Saturday.

The musical will have run 2202 performances when it closes. It celebrated its fifth birthday March 31. In five years it has earned for its backers an estimated 2500 per cent on their investment.

The show's run, longest ever scored by a New York musical, rated it only fourth in longevity among Broadway productions. "Life With Father," which closed last summer, played 3213 performances; "Tobacco Road," 3182, and "Abie's Irish Rose," 2327.

Richard Rodgers wrote the music for "Oklahoma!" and Oscar Hammerstein 2d provided the libretto and lyrics. The musical is an adaptation of a play by Lynn Riggs, "Green Grow the Lilacs."

In its five years it has broken more records, set more precedents and received more awards than any musical in theatrical history. The total attendance will be close to 4,500,000 by closing night.

Columbia 'U' Gives Music A New Lift

By Paul Hume

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY'S Fourth annual Festival of Contemporary American Music drew many of this country's leading musicians to New York City last week.

If one includes performances of Otto Luening's opera, "Evangeline," five events filled a busy schedule. In much the same vein as the current festival at the National Gallery, the concerts at Columbia included chamber works, orchestral music, and songs. In addition, the New York festival had the Luening opera, and a program of organ and choral music.

Five works had premieres during the festival: Luening's opera, a Mass for men's voices and organ by Roy Harris, a quartet by Lukas Foss, Wallingford Riegger's third Symphony, and Quincy Porter's viola concerto. Robert Ward's second symphony, which Hans Kindler and the National Symphony gave its first playing here in Washington, received its New York debut, and there were rehearings of some excellent organ music, a two-piano sonata of Robert Palmer, and a quartet by Harold Shapero.

Concerto Impressive

OF THE new works, the Quincy Porter viola concerto impressed us most highly. Ideally conceived for the solo instrument, it balances viola and orchestra with real skill. Far more than the technical matter of balance, Porter has constructed a score of poetic sonorities, enlivened by excellent themes handled with ease and ingenuity. Music such as this does not need comment on its dissonance, melodic style, or formal content. It is a refreshing work, an unusual and thoroughly beautiful addition to the orchestral repertoire by one of America's progressive composers.

Luening's opera, based on Longfellow's epic poem, with a text revised by the composer, had little to commend it. Staged in a manner to remind the viewer of a willing but impoverished high school, the work drags, dramatically and musically. Luening understands the problems of writing for voice, scores competently, and conducted his opera with affection. The chief trouble is that the musical content was so poverty-ridden that one could not fasten attention on it for long.

American opera is barely aborning these days, and Luening's score is another well-meant

Young 'Jody' Prefers Grid To Screen

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, May 22 (AP).—Young Claude Jarman, the memorable Jody of "The Yearling," indicates that a lifelong film career is not for him.

Claude's ambition is to study agriculture and play football at the University of Tennessee and he's aiming at that goal. Now 5-foot-7 and approaching high school, he still has a few years of film work left.

The lad now is cavorting with Lassie in "Sun in the Morning." His next film probably will be "The Secret Garden," to be made in England with Margaret O'Brien and Dean Stockwell. That's the picture which has been on the fire for a couple of years, and if MGM doesn't hurry, it will have to be made as an adult story.

FRED ASTAIRE happened to remark to Irving Berlin: "I suppose now that you've had 'Alexander's Ragtime Band,' 'Blue Skies' and 'Easter Parade,' you'll undoubtedly have a picture called 'White Christmas.'" So the tunesmith whipped up one and Fred and Bing will star in it at Paramount next year.

Fred wrote Bing: "I suppose you will have another string of night clubs (as he did in 'Holiday Inn' and 'Blue Skies.') Only this time there'll be snow on the ground."

Says David Niven: "People in Hollywood worry too much, and it doesn't help a bit. You're either going to work, or not work." He has reason not to worry—Rank, Korda and Warners are all seeking his services this summer. Korda is the apparent winner; after "Take Three Tenses," Niven sails to London for another "Scarlet Pimpernel."

Ezra Stone to Feature Theater Arts Session

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., May 22.—Ezra Stone, star of stage and radio, and Joanna Roos, featured Broadway actress, will be guest stars at the University of Virginia's eight-week summer session of Theater Arts to be held June 28 through August 21.

ROOS

STONE

Stone, a director of Broadway successes, star of radio, and featured actor in Broadway productions, will stage William Saroyan's "My Heart's in the Highlands" with an all-student cast. This will be one of six full-scale productions to be offered during the session.

Miss Roos, featured in "Saint Joan," "Uncle Vanya," "Little Women," "Picnic," and other Broadway shows, will play the title role in George Bernard Shaw's "Candida," which will also be staged with a student cast.

As a triple-threat performer, Stone has been continuing his Henry Aldrich role in radio, is director of the current Broadway success, "Molly and Me," and has just ended a Broadway appearance in Ben Jonson's "The Alchemist" with the Jose Ferrer company.

Miss Roos, a Syracuse University graduate, studied for the theater at the Yvette Guilbert's School, first in New York and later in Paris.

'Stills' Yield Film Idea

BERT GRANET, producer of "Berlin Express," which is headed for Keith's theater, found the inspiration for his story in a picture layout. Shown were scenes at railway stations in Paris, Frankfurt and Berlin, with characters from various countries on the "Main Seiner" and the "Berliner" in the 32-hour run between the French and German capitals.

A story took shape, and Granet interested the R. K. O. studio executives in a motion picture that would have on-the-spot realism.

He made two exploratory trips through occupied Germany, received permission to set up cameras and have his Hollywood stars perform amid the ruins. Late in 1946 he returned to this country with the permits, and with two reels of 16 mm. film taken in his tour of bomb-shattered German cities.

With this film as documenting material, Granet picked his stars. Merle Oberon, Robert Ryan, Paul Lukas and Charles Korvin flew to Europe to perform before such well known spots as the Eiffel Tower, Notre Dame, and the Gare de l'Est, in Paris; the I. G. Farben building in Frankfurt; and in Berlin, the Hotel Adlon, the Brandenburg Gate, the Reichschancellery and Reichstag.

After seven weeks abroad, the Hollywood contingent returned to the studio for interior sets. The result is a picture which combines documentary realism with Hollywood technique.

The picture treats of major international problems—chief among which is getting nations to work together. The chief characters are an American nutrition expert, a French secretary, a German liberal, a British school teacher and a Russian army officer.

Old Movies at Glen Echo

YOU MAY NOT expect movies out at Glen Echo amusement park, but that's among the thousand and one things the Glen is offering these days and nights.

The new Sportland Building is featuring a collection of oldtime melodramas that were made back when a glass of amber entitled you to all the food in the house and women as well as men wore bathing suits that covered the toes. Old favorites in action include Anna Q. Nillson, Ruth Roland, William S. Hart, Milton Sills, and, of all people, Lillian Gish, who'll be along out at Olney in a few weeks—"in the flesh."

Little—"Silence Is Golden," the title for Maurice Chevalier's musical reverts to its original, after having been known for a time as "Man About Town;" follows "Die Fledermaus."

Dupont—"The Mill on the Floss," with James Mason, and some scenes from the Old Vic Shakespeare productions; follows "Jenny Lamour."

Actor-Producer Would Extend Scope of Documentary Films

By Thornton Delehanty

HOLLYWOOD, May 22 (NYHT). We were talking the other day to a prominent actor who has recently formed his own company and who is looking for stories that will not only satisfy his own high standards, but which won't do disgracefully at the box-office.

"No one can make a great deal of money with pictures these days," he said, "cause most of the oldline producers don't distinguish between the gross and the net. A picture may gross the impressive sum of six million dollars, but if it cost $5,500,000 to produce they're going to come out at the wrong end. I can name several impressive grossers which are being ballyhooed as cleaning up at the box-office, but which actually are cleaning out the boys who made them. A picture has to make nearly twice its original cost to come out even, paradoxical as that may seem."

My friend pointed out that the salaries of stars and top players will have to come down before there is any chance of evening the discrepancy between cost and revenue.

The only alternative, he said, is in selecting stories and themes which will stand on their own. There is a marked trend in the latter direction, he said, and that explains the present widespread interest on the part of studio heads in the documentary picture.

Diagnoses Fever

"I READ in a trade paper the other day that Hollywood has been seized with documentary fever," he told me, "but when I glanced at a list of pictures the paper had compiled to prove its point I realized how distorted the meaning of documentary has become. We used to think of a documentary as a factual re-creation of an actual event as typified by the March of Time films. Nowadays, the term has widened to include any factual theme in which the scene of enactment is photographed or simulated.

"In that sense the documentary is indeed predominating. It has been given a tremendous boost by such films as 'The Naked City,' 'Call Northside 777' and many others.

"They aren't documentaries in the old meaning, but they place the emphasis on authenticity in either incident or setting. The characters and their involvements in 'The Naked City,' for example, are frankly fictitious but New York is not, and the treatment accorded the city in the picture gives it the factual touch. Broadwayites will recognize in 'A Double Life' the realism of the Empire Theater locale but the slice of life which is imposed on it is palpably a fabrication.

"There is a report that some 60 pictures of this type will be made this year and the significant thing is that it represents a demand on the part of the fan for realism. Reports from exhibitors indicate that a reaction has set in from the escapist fare of the war and post-war days. I don't mean there won't be any more musicals or fantasies. Such a conclusion would be nonsense. The point is that realism, provided it is fortified by action stories, provides the come-on at the box office today.

Gives His Formula.

"THE KIND of picture I am hoping to do," my friend went on, "is a blend of documentary and realism. If you can make your setting blatantly true you increase the chances of making your story credible. And to be credible a story must be stated in general terms. It should have to do with something which the public readily understands. If you give the public a wayward or particularized subject the chances are the public won't go for it. That, to my mind, was one of the weaknesses of 'The Hucksters.'

"The average person doesn't know or care what goes on behind the scenes in the radio and advertising world. He doesn't care about the problems of an actor or a musician or a writer if those problems have to do with his professional life. Ronald Colman committed murder in 'A Double Life' but the motives for his crime were not as understandable to the average man as they would be had Colman been playing merely a frustrated lover."

A. U. Film Festival

A film festival institute on 16mm films will be held at American University this week in conjunction with the first International Public Relations Institute.

Highlight of the film events will be a "Film Workshop" Wednesday at 8 p. m. under the chairmanship of Earl Petty, of Washington. Beginning Monday through Thursday, there will be afternoon and evening exhibition of films relative to public relations.

The programs will include 16mm films made by United States armed forces; by foreign countries for showing abroad and by our own commercial companies for overseas exhibition; by governmental departments; by private industry and by social, religious and welfare groups.

Symphony in Free Concert Tuesday

MISS KRAFT

MISS DICKENSON

GREAT news of the week is the free concert by the National Symphony Orchestra to be given Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall.

The orchestra, augmented to 110 players, will be conducted by Hans Kindler, and is being presented in concert to the people of Washington by the Washington Local of the American Federation of Musicians. Gladys Swarthout will appear as soloist with the orchestra, and the program listed in the music calendar contains plenty of interest.

The concert marks the opening of the music appreciation program of the Federation of Musicians. This year the Federation has allocated $1,736,721.62 to be spent in the United States and Canada to bring free music to audiences across the continent in veterans' hospitals and other institutions, in juvenile delinquency programs, public parks and auditoriums.

James C. Petrillo, president of the Federation, will be present Tuesday to describe the programs planned. All costs are paid out of the union's recording and transcription fund.

THE 1948 Water Gate season opens tonight at 8:30 with the Marine Band, directed by Major Santelmann. New barge, free music. Summer is almost here.

The week's music is highlighted by tonight's National Gallery concert of chamber works, as well as by an excellent choral program to be given at Hamline Methodist Church. This afternoon, Handel's great oratorio, Judas Maccabeus, will be heard in the 19th Street Baptist Church. It is a work deserving frequent performance and public support. Lovers of "Messiah" will find the same thrilling style in the Judas.

Programs of varying nature include: choral festival tonight at 7:30 at Calvary Baptist Church; Jean Willingham and Eunice Gross singing at Robert Freund's home in Lewinsville, Va., at 5 this afternoon; a concert by Washington artists at the Theosophical Society, 726 11th st. nw., at 8 this evening; pupils of the Helen Turley Studio at 4:30 this afternoon in the Women's City Club, 1733 I st. nw.

Auditions: Eleanor Searle Whitney vocal scholarship to Florida Southern College from 3:30 to 5:30 Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the YWCA. Auditions for the Rybier Music Club concerts next season: details from the club, No. 2, Dupont circle.

Admirers of Eileen Joyce, British pianist known widely here for her brilliant recordings, will be interested to know that she is making her first and only American appearance thus far at Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia, on July 20. She will play both the Grieg and the Tschaikowsky B Flat Minor concertos.

Indefatigable is the word for the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America. Monday night at 8:15 they hold their quarterly ladies' night in Asbury Church, 11th and K sts. nw. Two Washington quartets will hold forth, assisted by the Four Chords of Newark, N. J., recent winners in the Mid-Atlantic contest among B. S. quartets.

Video Advertisers Increase

WHILE television broadcasting still is a losing business, things are looking up. Television magazine says 301 advertisers bought sponsored programs on spot announcements on television in April. This represents an increase of 34 over March, adds the trade publication, and compares with only 36 advertisers one year ago.

Mother Inspires Jo Stafford

RADIO Singer Jo Stafford's efforts to popularize American folk music are inspired by her mother, Mrs. Anna York Stafford. Mrs. Stafford, now a resident of California, is a native of the Great Smokies Region of Tennessee and once was an accomplished performer with the old-fashioned five string banjo . . . Folks in the radio business sometimes win prizes, too. Walter Harberd Hogan, continuity writer for station WIRE at Indianapolis, got a $2000 check as first award for the best script submitted for the Dr. Christian program.

La Scala Open to American Students

Clement C. Petrillo, American representative of La Scala Opera School in Milan, Italy, reports that the school will be open to American students in September, 1948. Fifty young aspirants will be accepted by audition and one scholarship will be awarded, including round trip passage.

Margaret Walters, Inc., of New York City will receive applications for auditions, which will be held in New York.

Music Gets New Lift at Columbia U.

step. Teresa Stich, the soprano in the title role, is a singer from whom we should hear much in the future.

Princeton Choir

THE Harris mass came at the close of an organ recital by Carl Weinrich, organist and choirmaster of Princeton University Chapel. His men's choir sang the new score. Before the mass, Weinrich played a fine series of modern works, with a subtle toccata by Hubert Lamb, Cecil Effinger's prelude and fugue, Walter Piston's Chromatic Study on the Name of Bach, and music by Sessions, Hindemith and Donovan. None of these works was new, but, except for the Hindemith, all were written within the past decade.

It is an unhappy circumstance that few indeed of America's leading composers today write music for the church. Roy Harris, Aaron Copland, David Diamond, Roger Sessions, Leo Sowerby, Samuel Barber, and other names prominent in American musical scenes fail to disclose one man writing for the largest music consumer in the country, the church, with the single and notable exception of Leo Sowerby.

Roy Harris wrote his mass for men's voices and organ at the request of Charles Courboin of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City. It seems safe to prophesy that the work will never be heard in that edifice. Musically it is sterile, relying upon a narrow range of harmonic devices, a restricted dynamic scale, and a limited sense of the text.

Harris claims that the mass is "extracted from prototypes of American folk song." That phrase covers a lot of ground, but does not explain the gauchery of such themes as that employed at the line, "Et incarnatus est" where a gentle trucking motion is highly inappropriate. The complete lack of psychological differentiation in setting the line, "et sepultus est" and the succeeding "et ascendit tertia die" is hard to believe.

Less Successful

WALLINGFORD RIEGGER'S third symphony is skillful, but its skill is, for this reporter, much like that of many growing composers today, who manipulate themes and tones at will, but do not always produce a convincing composition. Compared to the ease with which Porter achieves his concerto, Riegger is less successful. We do not forget, however, the pure beauty and fine workmanship of much of this composer's writing, including the canon and fugue with which Kindler opened a National Symphony concert this season.

Lukes Foss is 26, and his string quartet, played at the Friday night session of the festival, shows him to be growing fast and well. It is a far more substantial work than his early and exciting "Praire" and concerns itself with purely musical ideas. If this particular work is not often played, it will nevertheless form a part of the composer's experience in leading him to what promise to be highly individual and interesting scores in the future.

Washington is happily familiar with Robert Ward's second symphony. This score, new to New York, brought Ward high praise from audience and critics alike, as did Robert Palmer's ingenious and thoroughly worthy sonata for two pianos. For these repetitions and for the organ recital, plus the Porter viola concerto, the festival was eminently worth while. No such gathering of music and musicians is ever uniformly successful and Columbia continues to strike a good average.

Film Shot in Rome Uses Main Parts Of Four Operas

Under the title, "The First Opera Film Festival," Classic Pictures, Inc., brings to the screen Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," Bizet's "Carmen" and Rossini's "William Tell."

The festival represents a new movement to acquaint the moviegoing public with popular operatic works. The scores have been reduced to the more important arias and the plots have been stripped of all unessentials.

The director chose the voices which best suited the roles. If the singer looked the part as well, he was given a dual role—actor and singer. Some of the performers sing one role and act another. None of these innovations would be possible on the operatic stage. Moviegoers will be able to hear Cloe Elmo of the Metropolitan Opera Company, singing the title role in "Carmen"; Tito Gobbi, young baritone of La Scala, Milan, appears as William Tell; Zabia, one of the greatest Mozart singers in Italy, sings "Susanna" in "The Marriage of Figaro," and La Scala's giant basso, Luciano Neroni, sings the title role in "Don Pasquale."

The orchestra, chorus and ballet are from the Rome Opera House, and the entire film was shot on the stage of that institution.

Negatives Are More Valuable Than Prints—Preserve Them

By Irving Desfor

NEGATIVES—Their Value, Care and Preservation. Few amateur photographers realize that their negatives are actually more valuable than their prints and should be preserved carefully.

At any time you can make any number of good prints from your original negatives at a minimum cost. If a print is lost or manhandled, duplicate prints can be made only by a more expensive process of copying an original photo, and the finished print somehow never manages to have the "quality" or sparkle the picture started with.

Learn to Judge Negs

FUNDAMENTALLY, you should begin judging your picture-snapping results not merely by the photo prints, but by the negatives as well.

And many times they can prove that some of your "bad pictures" were only "bad prints" turned out by careless photo finishers in a rush.

Doing your own developing is a good shortcut in learning how to judge negatives. For now, however, we'll just assume that your negatives are being processed properly—fixed, washed and free from dirt and scratches. Now what?

How to File Them

THEY should be filed in some sort of uniform envelope system, dated and identified on the outside and kept in a file box—a sturdy cardboard one will do for a start. The exposure data might be added on the envelope if you intend to profit by your mistakes and successes. If you can't obtain regular negative envelopes, you can make your own with ordinary stationer's envelopes. Seal them, then cut them in half and you'll have two containers open at one end.

Your filing system should be simple and should answer an ever-ready question about each picture: "If I were to want this again, where would I look for it?"

It won't be long now until this is the type of shot you'll be making. And when you do, keep that negative—tagged and catalogued.

Simple personality pictures are easy—the person's name leads off on the upper left of the envelope, then the date, and any other information that will identify that particular negative. Thus no time is lost in dragging it out of its envelope to see if it's the particular one you want. Naturally all pictures of one subject taken at the same time should be kept in one envelope. This saves envelopes and writing.

Keeping in Order

SOME people like to keep their files in chronological order. I'm agin' it. I've found that anything more than a few months back faded into a mental fog. I file in alphabetical order, and if I want Susan's baby picture of 5 years ago I need only thumb through to the "S's," where I find a pack of envelopes all marked "Susan," and pass them by till I find one dated "1943, Spring—Fishing."

'Tams' Dance for Schooling

husband with the "Fame" because she doubles as his secretary. Then, too, she's his most severe critic.

"I like to have her out front when I'm directing," her husband said. "She catches a lot of things that I can't see and the kids know it, too. They turn in a bangup performance."

Former Coach

IN 1935 Gouze was assistant football coach and head basketball man at St. Edwards University, Austin, Tex.

"I never thought I would wind up as a musical director," Gouze grinned. "But I had a little time on my hands and I was interested in the tamburitza type of music.

"I began instructing a few students and it wasn't long until I found myself with a full-sized ensemble. Then in 1936 we made a tour which included Pittsburgh. Duquesne officials became interested in the music and so did Slavic groups here. So, the first thing I knew I had an offer of a job and I believe we now have the largest outfit of its kind in the country."

Gouze works at his job on an around the clock basis. He even helps on advance publicity but he doesn't need much—Slavic groups throughout the Nation guarantee a capacity house at every appearance and the Tams are accustomed to playing to more than 100,000 persons annually.

"The biggest crowd we ever had was 18,000," Gouze said. "That was a few years ago at Madison Square Garden."

Since the "Tams" came into being 11 years ago the Croatian Fraternal Union has become its biggest backer, but Gouze says "we're finding that our type of music is 'catching on' with many other people, too. We hope to go on for years."

Gouze shouldn't have to worry about that. Last year, the "Tamburitzans" was formally incorporated in Pennsylvania as a nonprofit organization. All profits go into the organization's revolving fund. That insures the scholarships—and plenty of talent.

Clerks Are Urged to Use Stamps When Requested

By William M. Stuart

UNREASONABLE conditions surely exist when a post-office employe refuses, on request, to use stamps of large denomination on parcel post packages because of inconvenience. Meter machines instead supply the postage. This is enough to exasperate any stamp collector, and just now seems to be the time for the Postoffice Department to issue new regulations, especially applicable to employes refusing the request of anyone that postage stamps be used on his mail.

The meter has its place in the postal service, as has the postage stamp. There is no just reason for postal clerks refusing the use of stamps when, as a matter of fact, billions are made and sold each year. They should be well supplied at all times with every denomination of stamps, and when a person requests that stamps only be used there should be no argument. Any customer, especially a stamp collector, should be privileged in this respect. Let us hope a new ruling will abolish a former nuisance—considered so especially by collectors.

The 5-cent commemorative stamp in honor of the Swedish pioneers will be released in Chicago on June 4. The central design depicts a Swedish pioneer moving westward in a covered wagon. The stamp will be printed in blue.

The Capital Precancel Club will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Weeks Stamp Shop, 1229 New York ave. nw.

AT AN auction at the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., on Tuesday evening Ellery Denison disposed of 75 lots of good material. At the next meeting, Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth st. nw., air mail material will be exhibited.

The second annual exhibition of the Howard University Stamp Club closed last night after daily and evening exhibitions for the past two weeks. The stamps were of an unusual character and the many frames were excellently displayed. Those who participated were Clarzell Green, E. Zeno Edwards, James W. Harper, William H. Lee, George S. Reid, William E. Weir, James B. Clarke, jr., Raymond F. Cooke, M. Lucille Harris, V. D. Johnston, Raymond W. Logan, Lee Purnell and Phyllis S. Byrd. At the club meeting on Monday evening the speaker was William M. Stuart. Lee J. Purcell is president of the club.

The Wisconsin Statehood commemorative stamp will be released first day in Madison on May 29.

The central design will be a reproduction of the State capitol and a scroll depicting an outline map of the State around which in dark Gothic is the inscription "Wisconsin Centennial 1848-1948." Directly above the capitol in the same style type is the word "Forward." Across the bottom of the stamp appears "United States Postage 3c" in white Gothic. The stamp will be printed in purple, arranged horizontally with a single outline border.

Aiken and Gillen Delegates

PAUL AIKEN, Second Assistant Postmaster General, and John J. Gillen, Deputy Second Assistant Postmaster General in charge of international postal service, were designated by Postmaster General Donaldson to represent the United States at the provisional executive and liaison committee meeting of the Universal Postal Union which convened in Berne, Switzerland, on April 6. There were many matters of importance to the mail service of the United States considered at this meeting.

On April 23 air mail service was inaugurated over route A M-87 between Roanoke, Va., Danville, Va., Greensboro-High Point, N. C., Raleigh-Durham, N. C., Fayetteville, N. C., and Wilmington, N. C. Special cachets were provided for Roanoke, Danville, Greensboro, High Point, Raleigh, Durham and Wilmington.

THERE WERE 10 million souvenir sheets of the 5-cent and 10-cent 1847 stamps issued in May, 1947, in honor of the centenary exhibition in New York, celebrating the centennial of the first adhesive stamps of the United States. These sheets have been on sale at the Philatelic Agency and will continue to be sold until the supply is exhausted. For a limited time only the sheets may be secured from the following postoffices: Atlanta, Ga.; Baltimore, Md.; Boston, Mass.; Brooklyn, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Cincinnati, Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio; Dallas, Tex.; Dayton, Ohio; Detroit, Mich.; Denver, Colo.; Honolulu, Hawaii; Houston, Tex.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Kansas City, Mo.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Tenn.; Miami, Fla.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Newark, N. J.; New Orleans, La.; New York City; Oakland, Calif.; Omaha, Nebr.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Portland, Oreg.; Rochester, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; St. Paul, Minn.; San Diego, Calif.; San Francisco, Calif.; Scranton, Pa., and Seattle, Wash.

Big Sale for Miss. Stamps

THERE were 434,804 first-day covers canceled at Natchez on April 7, when the Mississippi Territory commemorative stamp was released and 880,346 stamps sold.

Video Boom Creating Lots Of New Jobs

NEW YORK, May 22 (AP).—This is television's first real boom year and it is creating a lot of jobs. How many, it's a little too early to tell, but a look around at New York telecasting might give some indications.

One good example of the mushrooming of staffs is found in some figures from NBC. Back in 1943, when the war was it its height, three persons were regarded as enough to meet the maximum requirement of four hours a week on the air.

Today, with a television drive under way, the staff has leaped past 260, with top limit not yet in sight.

At CBS, too, they got down pretty low during the war. Right now the television department has gone up to 150. ABC, preparing for the opening of its own stations, has set up a division of 30. Not so long ago its crew had dwindled to nothing.

A like story comes from DuMont, where the ratio of increase has followed a similar pattern.

HERE are some other developments on the radio scene:

RFD America, farm quiz introduced last winter on MBS, has moved to N. B. C., where it is expected to serve as a summer replacement. Its last on MBS was May 13. Joe Kelly of the Quiz Kids is quizmaster.

Picked as the summer replacement for Quick as a Flash on MBS from June 6 is "what makes you tick," described as a quiz based on the ability of a contestant to judge himself.

Double or Nothing, Walter O'Keefe quiz once on MBS and now on CBS, is to move to NBC May 31.

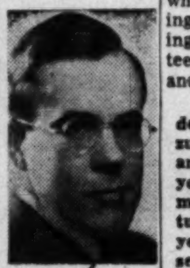
'Pirate' Pinweight

"THE PIRATE" (MGM) presents Judy Garland and Gene Kelly in a frantic musical romance with a pinweight plot. It is an entertaining morsel, played against a brilliant background (the Caribbean was never like that). The film's greatest asset is the terrific dancing of Kelly, who returns to the screen in a big way after one false start.

Record Player

A Good Scarlatti Set

SCARLATTI: Eight Sonatas for harpsichord. Ralph Kirkpatrick, harpsichordist. Concert Hall Society B 5.



KIRKPATRICK

Domenico Scarlatti, known as the father of modern piano playing, was born in the same year (1685) as Bach and Handel. Son of the famous Alessandro, Domenico's name outshines his father's in our time.

A virtuoso of the harpsichord, Domenico Scarlatti introduced into his writings for that instrument devices which today are regarded as purely pianistic, thus changing the concept of music for keyboard from a strictly organ-like approach.

Ralph Kirkpatrick, heard in Washington early this month in Bach's B Minor Mass, is not only an outstanding exponent of music for harpsichord, but a student who has spent a great deal of time studying the life and works of Domenico Scarlatti. His biography of the great 18th century master will appear next year.

This set, made without over-amplification (a vice which spoils so many harpsichord recordings), is the finest sounding music on records by this instrument that we have heard. Surfaces are flawless, and the performance — well, the playing is absolutely miraculous.

Excitement in precision, virtuosity in color and structure make it a solid stream of baroque grandeur.

RAVEL: Sonata for violin and cello. Oscar Shumsky, violinist, with Bernard Greenhouse, cellist. Concert Hall B 4.

Washington has good reason to know these two musicians better than other cities. Both men were stationed here and played publicly almost weekly, as members of the Navy Band Symphony Orchestra. They are superb musicians, beautifully matched in this set.

The sonata for two string instruments was written between 1920 and 1922, and stands between La Valse, and the Tzigane for violin and orchestra. As in almost every other work from his gracile pen, Ravel has fashioned a score perfect in design, balanced in sonority, and alluring to the ear. At no time is one conscious of any sense of thinness; the two instruments are so skillfully woven together, and the melodic and structural facets of the sonata so appropriate to the medium that the music is entirely sufficient in itself. Again, Concert Hall has recorded music of high worth, and done it well.

STRAVINSKY: Concertino for string quartet; Three Pieces for String quartet. Gordon String Quartet. Concert Hall B 6.

Igor Stravinsky has written for many chamber combinations, but these are his only works for string quartet. Played to perfection by the Gordon String Quartet, and recorded with unusual fidelity, they present more than a few problems to the listener.

The concertino dates from 1920, and shows Stravinsky fairly well launched in the neo-classic period which produced Les Noces, the woodwind octet, concerto for piano and woodwinds, Oedipus Rex, and Apollon Musagete. While it does not seem to us to possess the same degree of clarity found in the capriccio for piano and orchestra (1934), it is a score of classic design, one movement, in extended sonata form. The middle section is highly persuasive to the ear, while the outer sections are more appealing in rhythmic design.

The pieces for string quartet are from the same time as Sacre, and give one something of the same electric shock. Again the Gordon players deserve high commendation for their admirable work in this difficult medium. And Concert Hall can take more bows for its unflagging zeal and high standard of achievement, technically and musically.

KHATCHATURIAN: Masquerade. New York Philharmonic under Stokowski. Columbia 729. $4.60.

Here at last we have one of our greatest orchestras, and one of our greatest conductors, joined in their first recording. Please, Columbia, let us have many more from this pair.

The tone which Stokowski draws from the famed Philharmonic is as beautiful as it is unique. There is a quality of separated beauty, if you will, which makes the playing of this symphony one of the aural joys of our time. And Stokowski knows best how to employ that tone. He does so in music which is as trivial as it is appealing. Pay no attention to the blowing of the Soviet Central Committee. This is music for the people, and for plenty of 'em.

It has a waltz, a mazurka which does more for you than any mazurka I have heard in the past, and several other sections. If you like to play games with your musical guests, put on the Nocturne and Romance and offer your friends any amount that seems reasonable to you if they can guess the composer in five playings. You won't lose.

The recording is excellent in every way. The odd side is filled with one of the few pieces of music in the world that makes me ill. I can't bear "In the Village," from those Caucasian Sketches by Ippolitov-Ivanov. Since that is on the odd side, I am unable to report on the piece, because I haven't yet gotten myself to the point of listening to the darn thing. Sorry.

—PAUL HUME.

Whistle Stopping

Travelers Stick To Beaten Path

By Orval Hopkins

THE somewhat disquieting news that travel trends this season are again to regions of long-established popularity is passed along by Edward O'Connor of Thos. Cook & Son. California and the Canadian Rockies, Yellowstone, Gaspe Peninsula, tours of New England, Virginia and the Great Smokies—these, as in other seasons, are the lure. Is this the spirit of adventure? Is this the steely-eyed, square-jawed pioneer (as played by Errol Flynn or Randolph Scott)? Let's get out into southeastern Colorado or southwestern Kansas, surely among the earth's most forsaken acres. Let's get off into the salt marshes and deadly flats of northwest Utah, where not even a rattlesnake can survive. Or let's pay a visit to Stockton, Calif., one of the ugliest, dreariest river towns on this our footstool.

SOMEBODY (and I suspect the Asheville, N. C., Chamber of Commerce on account of it begins, "Honeymoon in June in Asheville and Western North Carolina") has sent me a publicity release about North Carolina. They're no dopes down there, you know. They know what rhymes with "honeymoon." This piece mentions in glistening prose the Great Smoky Mountains National Park (1,186,748 visitors last year), the Craggy Rhododendron Gardens (a mile in the sky), the Blue Ridge Parkway (nearing completion), Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests (no charge for water and sanitary conveniences), Climate (practically ideal) and Accommodations (available) . . . The third annual "International Good Will Tourist Promotion Tour" conducted by the Lake Erie International Vacationland Conference starts June 14 at Cleveland and it has been suggested that the two titles be condensed to the single word, "Zowie." . . . Impenetrable cryptic from Virginia Beach: CAVA means "ceiling and visibility unlimited." Abject, maybe they meant to say. Or abhorrent. Absent, perhaps. Oh well.

THE GABLES Hotel at Elkton, Va., is under the direction of Thomas J. McCarthy of Pulaski, Va., and Barney H. Harris of Warrenton, Va., this year. The hotel is owned by Stewart Huston, of Coach-and-Four Inn, Coatesville, Pa. . . . American Express says visitors to Salt Lake City who have marveled at the harmony and beauty of construction in the famous Mormon Tabernacle may see three other Mormon Temples in Utah . . . Of course, AE, a tabernacle is one thing, a temple quite another. The tabernacle is open and beckoning to the dusty tourist. The temple is strictly sanctorum, tabu, and this means you.

THEY'RE SELECTING Miss Atlantic City at the Hotel Traymore next Saturday. She'll be the lass who welcomes the girls coming in for the Miss America pageant next September. She also gets a $1000 scholarship . . . Colonial Airlines has started its nineteenth year, according to a note here, without a fatality to passenger or crew. Seems to me CA would have been tempting fate a little less by saying it had completed 18 years instead of begun the nineteenth . . . British Travel Association says King George VI will inspect special guards of honor from the three British services on June 10 at the opening of the Royal Tournament at Olympia in London. I know a party who fancies he looks like King George and is insufferable about it—why, I can't guess.

Hiking Trip Schedule

Asheville, N. C., May 22.—Hiking trips of the Carolina Mountain Club, an organization of outdoor fans, includes varied hikes for the next few weeks. Visitors are welcome to join the hikes provided they abide by club rules designed for the safety and convenience of the group.

Hikes are scheduled as follows:

May 29, 30, 31—A three-day camping and hiking trip in the rugged Linville Gorge section.

June 6—Half-day, four-mile hike to Burney Mountain.

June 13—All-day, 14-mile hike to Mount LeConte in the Smokies.

June 20—Half-day, three-mile hike to Shumont.

June 26, 27, 28—Appalachian Trail Conference at Fontana Dam.

There also is here a Wilderness Hiking Club headed by Dr. S. Robinson, Forest Hill drive, Asheville, N. C.

$200–Two Weeks in Miami

Miami, Fla., May 22.—Two hundred dollars or less will buy a two-week vacation in the Greater Miami area this summer.

This estimate was made by the City of Miami Research Bureau after a survey of summer recreation and hotel facilities and prices.

Double rooms in ocean-front hotels will be available for $5 to $6 per day. Smaller hotels are offering accommodations as low as $3 a day. Luxury hotels will drop to $12 a day, as compared with some suites priced at $50 a day during the winter season.

Swank night clubs offer summertime steaks at $6 as compared with $8.50 to $10 during the winter. The Scotch and soda that cost $1.25 in the winter is marked down to 80 cents for the summer.

Portland Fete June 9-13

Salem, Oreg., May 22.—Portland's mythical realm of Rosaria will again hold sway from June 9 to 13 during the fortieth annual Portland Rose Festival, the Oregon State Highway Commission travel information department reports.

Colorful events, including the floral parade of the 12th, will revolve about the theme, "Fables in Flowers." There will be coronations, pageants, junior activities and night shows. A snowy climax, high on the slopes of Mount Hood at Timberline, will be reached June 13 with the annual Golden Rose Ski Tourney attracting outstanding racers from all parts of the Nation.

It's Tulip Time Again

Holland, Mich., May 22 (UP).—Townspeople here are preparing for their twenty-first tulip festival.

When a high-school botany teacher suggested in 1927 that they plant one kind of flower, they chose the tulip because 85 per cent of them were Dutch descent.

The next year, the town council appropriated money to import 100,000 tulip bulbs from the Netherlands, and more have been added yearly ever since.

On May 19 and 20, when thousands of visitors are expected to watch the festivities, people will turn out in Dutch costumes and wooden shoes to wash their streets and play traditional Dutch games.

Guides for Motorists

The first three of a series of "Hobbs Guides" for motorists have been issued by Rand McNally & Co. The handy, pocket-size booklets give information on restaurants, hotels, motels, scenic attractions, special highways to follow, sports, parks and other tourist attractions.

Guide No. 1 covers Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas; Guide No. 2, Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, New Mexico and Arizona, and Guide No. 3, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada and Idaho. Other guides are being prepared covering the West Coast, the Midwest, South and Atlantic Coast. The guides are arranged by routes, rather than alphabetically, for the convenience of the motorist.

Idaho River 'Rats' Plot Log Show for Tourists

Breaking a log jam is tricky business

By Bill Johnston

PRIEST RIVER, Idaho, May 22 (AP).—One of the West's last big log drives is now being run off here on Priest River in northern Idaho.

Such log drives once were common in the United States. Now they are considered so rare that the Priest River Chamber of Commerce has planned a celebration to promote the drive as a tourist attraction.

North Idaho has another major log drive along 120 miles of the Clearwater River, but it will not be held this spring because of a small cut of timber last year.

The Priest River drive starts at the outlet of Priest Lake. The "river rats" herd the logs downstream 67 miles to Priest River's mouth on the Pend Oreille River.

Bill Whetsler, drive superintendent for the Diamond Match Co., said his crews would cover the river in advance to remove obstructions. Then the logs will be towed across Priest Lake in booms and released into the river.

The "river rats" work from the shores on the wings of the drive. If logs jam in the middle of the river, the crews reach them in bateaux, 32-foot boats pointed at both ends.

One of the essentials of breaking log jams is getting back into the boats after jams have been cracked loose. If the men fail to scramble into the boats in time when the logs start moving, they can only attempt to ride the twisting logs down the river. And that, even veteran "river rats" admit, is tricky business.

Monaco's Fortune Now Hinges on New 'Wheel'

IN EUROPE'S once glittering resort of Monaco, where chance-taking has been big business for 87 years, the wheel of fortune has turned serious subjects up and frivolity down.

Monaco's admission to UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) puts the emphasis on a more staid side of endeavor than popularly associated with the little state whose palaces of play and pleasure look down from scenic crags on the blue Mediterranean.

As an added factor in the shift, the cold winds of postwar adversity have been blowing down the corridors of the palaces themselves, including the famous Monte Carlo Casino. Exchange problems and tourist shortages are now reported combining to put the business of pleasure "in the red."

Marine Treasure House

LONG overlooked in the gaiety of crowds who sought the bright lights and gaming tables of Monte Carlo have been the technical and other international conventions meeting in Monaco.

For scientist as well as sightseer, this principality of some 370 acres and 25,000 people contains one of the world's outstanding marine museums and laboratories. Rising from sheer cliffs, this treasure house of sea lore was opened in 1910 by the late Albert I, noted oceanographer and member of the Grimaldi family which has ruled Monaco for many centuries.

Prince Albert, father of the reigning prince, Louis II, roamed the seas for his collection. Pictures and models, graphs and gadgets tell the story of marine life and the physical laws that govern it.

There are ship models in water representing ocean depths; technical equipment for measuring currents and temperatures, for analyzing sands and water. Among the exhibits are shells, sponges, and octopuses, exotic fish from everywhere, pictures and equipment illustrating fishermen's methods, new and old. Salt water for the aquarium is forced up by an ingenious wave-pump, powered by pounding surf far below.

Enjoyed Long Prosperity

INDEPENDENT Monaco has its own flag and postage stamps, though customs and other financial arrangements are based on those of surrounding, protective France.

Stamp sales have developed into a thriving industry. With income from these and other resort offerings, the pocket principality has had sufficient income to require no direct taxation.

Until recently, there had been few thin years for the Casino since the gaming concession was granted in 1861. During most of World War II, in spite of Axis occupation and underground activity, Monaco's bathing beaches and golf courses were crowded, its hotels and Casino booming.

Norway Has Quick Recovery

Oslo, May 22 (AP).—Director G. B. Lampe of the Norwegian Travel Association in a general view of the tourist industry, announced that foreign tourists during 1947 spent in Norway about the equivalent of 20 million dollars in foreign currency.

He said the number of tourists was almost as great as in the best years before the war. The reason the tourist trade has recovered so quickly is mainly that Norway's hotels and communication system were restored so quickly Lampe said.

Highest Paid Writer

Newport, R. I., May 22.—The world's highest paid writer is probably John Howard Benson. Newport stonecutter, who gets as high as $50 per word for chiseling inscriptions on statues and other monuments. Benson, a native of Newport, does business in a shop founded 242 years ago.

The Virginia-Tennessee State line runs along the middle of the main business thoroughfare of Bristol, and the city is claimed by both States.

Air Flights Appeal To the Children

By Norine Clark

NEW YORK, May 22 (U.P.).—Commercial flights are becoming an increasingly popular mode of travel for children, a survey showed today.

Approximately five per cent of all air travelers, or one out of every 20, are children under six, the survey showed.

In 1947, for example, 659,468 of the 13,189,366 domestic air travelers were children and 70,629 of the 1,412,580 persons making international flights were under six years of age.

The enthusiasm with which parents have greeted air travel for their children presages an even greater number of small-fry travelers in future years and airlines have acted accordingly.

Standard equipment on most planes now includes baby food, bassinettes, rubber crib pads, paper diapers, bibs, baby powder and oil, harnesses and the like. And stewardesses are trained in their use.

One of the youngest babies ever to fly the Atlantic was eight-week-old Jackie Hall, who flew from London to New York. Jackie was changed and fed by the stewardess and burped by the captain. The trip was just one long nap for Jackie, who, Pan-American statistics showed, utilized one diaper every 306 miles.

American Airlines Stewardess Louise Brown, who cared for a two-day-old girl from El Paso, Texas, to Los Angeles, reported that "babies are excellent travelers. They sleep most of the time. The hum of the motors seems to have a sleepy effect on them."

Trans World Airline's chief hostess said that babies on planes today were "so commonplace that we do not consider a flight normal unless there's at least one baby aboard."

Parents mostly appreciate the time-saving angle of air travel, pointing out that children become fidgety and hard to manage as journeys lengthen into days and weeks.

Williem Heemskerk and his wife, Marie, who recently flew the 3500 miles from his station at Curacao, Dutch West Indies, to Holland with their three children, had this to say:

"In a plane you don't have to watch them every minute that they don't fall down a hatch or slide overboard. They are no trouble in the air. Just give them a drink of water before landings and takeoffs to counteract the distress of pressure on their eardrums."

About the only complaint was against the lack of facilities at most airport terminals. Many pointed out that very few airports were equipped to care for children while parents waited for planes, cleared customs and immigration or stood by because of bad weather or mechanical difficulties of planes.

As one recent arrival here said: "Everybody in the world knows about New York, the world's greatest city. But if you need something for your baby while at La Guardia airport, it's not to be had. It's a bloody shame."

The Bridge Table

Mid-Atlantic Tournament Set for Virginia Beach

By Marian H. Barre

A FIRST-TIME regional tourney in this area is the Mid-Atlantic Championships at Virginia Beach from May 28 to 31, inclusive, all sessions to be held at the Dunes Club, Atlantic ave. at 48th. The Washington Bridge League is one of the sponsoring units. "Bill" Cheeks had dreams of this regional long ago . . . now it becomes a reality more than a year after his death.

On the program are: Mixed pairs, Friday evening; men's and women's pairs concurrently, Saturday at 2 p. m.; a three-round open championship beginning Saturday evening, continuing through Sunday; team-of-four play in two sessions Monday. A. M. Sobel of the ACBL will direct. Members of the Washington committee are Dr. W. S. Benedict, Dr. W. H. Gorton, C. C. Johnson and Dr. N. J. McHugh. Paul E. Golden is a member of the rules committee.

Master point awards will be commensurate with the importance of the tournament. It's the first chance for mid-Atlantic fans to win regional points in their own bailiwick.

A carload of Capitalites took off for the Canadian-American International Championships at Niagara Falls. In the party are Mrs. J. A. Dearing, Mrs. N. A. Olmstead, Mrs. T. E. Turner and Robert Wilson.

The Lehigh Valley annual ends tonight in Bethlehem, Pa.

THE championship play-off in the Federal Bridge League ended Tuesday with the capture of the Luther Stewart Trophy by the Cascade foursome, playing J. G. Stone, Miller Roberts, and Col. and Mrs. J. T. Willis, with a total score of 30 matches. This was an 8½-board lead over the Bloopers, who in turn were one board up on the Empire team. The match concluded the League's team season; hereafter, summer games will be open to friends of members, beginning with the master-point pair contest on May 25 at Pierce Hall.

Something doing every day of the current week!

Tonight—Final round of the mixed pair championship at Arlington Farms Duplicate Club; first session was played last Friday.

Annual battle of the sexes Monday at the Capital City Chess Club, a stag organization; paired members play against their women guests. (It's duplicate bridge, not chess.)

Tuesday—The Federal League's nationally-awarded monthly.

A first-time event for the Washington Bridge League—men's pairs and women's pairs played concurrently, beginning at 8 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt. Finals will be held June 3.

The usual schedule for the next two days—Thursday, the Chess Club series; Friday, Euclid Studios, and Arlington.

Saturday—The distaff championship of Euclid studios at 12:30 p. m. This is a "party"—all entrants are guests of Manager Mrs. D. E. Stephan; please "R. S. V. P." not later than Thursday . . . The Walsh Club meets Saturday evening.

Master-point winners in recent games:

At the Washington Bridge League, May 19; Section A, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gardner; Miller Roberts-Colonel Willis. Section B, Mrs. D. E. Stephan-Mrs. Marian H. Barre; Charles Geier-L. Levinson. Second-place awards went to B. Bendette-T. Levoy; Mrs. P. E. Golden-Walter O'Loughlin; Mrs. W. H. Gorton-William Million; Dr. A. J. Steinberg-J. G. Stone.

At the Chess Club monthly, May 15, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Boyd; Mrs. Frederick-Eberson-Stone.

Also on May 15, at Euclid Studios—Mrs. M. Boschan-W. S. Benedict; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson. Runners-up were Harold Mayer-T. Patterson; Stone and David Murray.

At Arlington Farms May 14; a tie north-south between Capt. and Mrs. J. L. Herlihy and Mrs. J. A. Dearing-Mrs. Henry Walker. East-west: Ella Welker and David Kandel. In second spots were Capt. J. L. Carr, jr.-Maj. M. A. Ciccone, and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Manfred J. Haas.

Jr. Police Going National

HARRISBURG, Ill., May 22 (AP).—A 40-year-old father with an idea how to whip juvenile delinquency is organizing a National Association of Junior Police.

Eddie Wise, father of six sons and a daughter ranging from 1 to 15, got started on his one-man youth project from an idea broached by his eldest son, Bob, and, says Wise, "I took it from there."

Wise is a radio announcer, deputy sheriff and former sergeant in the Illinois Reserve Militia. "I realized that most of the junior police units in the country were operating much like our own," he says. "I decided that if these units were brought together into one great organization, working with each other and exchanging ideas of operation, we all could do a much better job for our communities and the country."

The Harrisburg NAJP headquarters serves as a clearing house for chapters in other cities, on ideas, programs and supplies.

The junior policemen help handle crowds at parades, fires and accidents and watch for traffic law violations.

Fathers are urged to attend the weekly meetings, which include a 20-minute close-order military drill and recreation. Outside activities have included all day outings, athletic competition and 'cycling patrols.

Northwest Has Visions of a Record Season

By O. R. Geyer

THE Pacific Northwest States of Oregon and Washington, having drawn record-breaking numbers of visitors in 1947, are looking forward to the greatest tourist flood in their history.

The two most spectacular attractions, aside from the cities of Portland, Oreg.; Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., are Mount Hood, near Portland, and Mount Rainier, dominating the landscape from Seattle and Tacoma as well as Portland. Trips to both are inexpensive and hotel accommodations are good.

Available from Portland is an all-day trip up the Columbia River to Hood River and along that stream to Mount Hood, with luncheon at a lodge well up on the snow-capped mountain.

The season for this trip is from now to October 15, depending on snow conditions, and it includes stops at numerous scenic spots along the Columbia River, including Bonneville Dam and the famed Multnomah Falls.

A variety of shorter sight-seeing trips in and around Portland and up the Columbia to Bonneville Dam can be taken at small cost in comfortable new sightseeing cars. Portland's week-long Rose Festival early in June is one of the major events of the season.

The outstanding side-trip for any tourist, however, is a visit to towering Mount Rainier and its national park, from either Tacoma or Seattle, on an all-day tour through some of the most spectacular mountain scenery in the world.

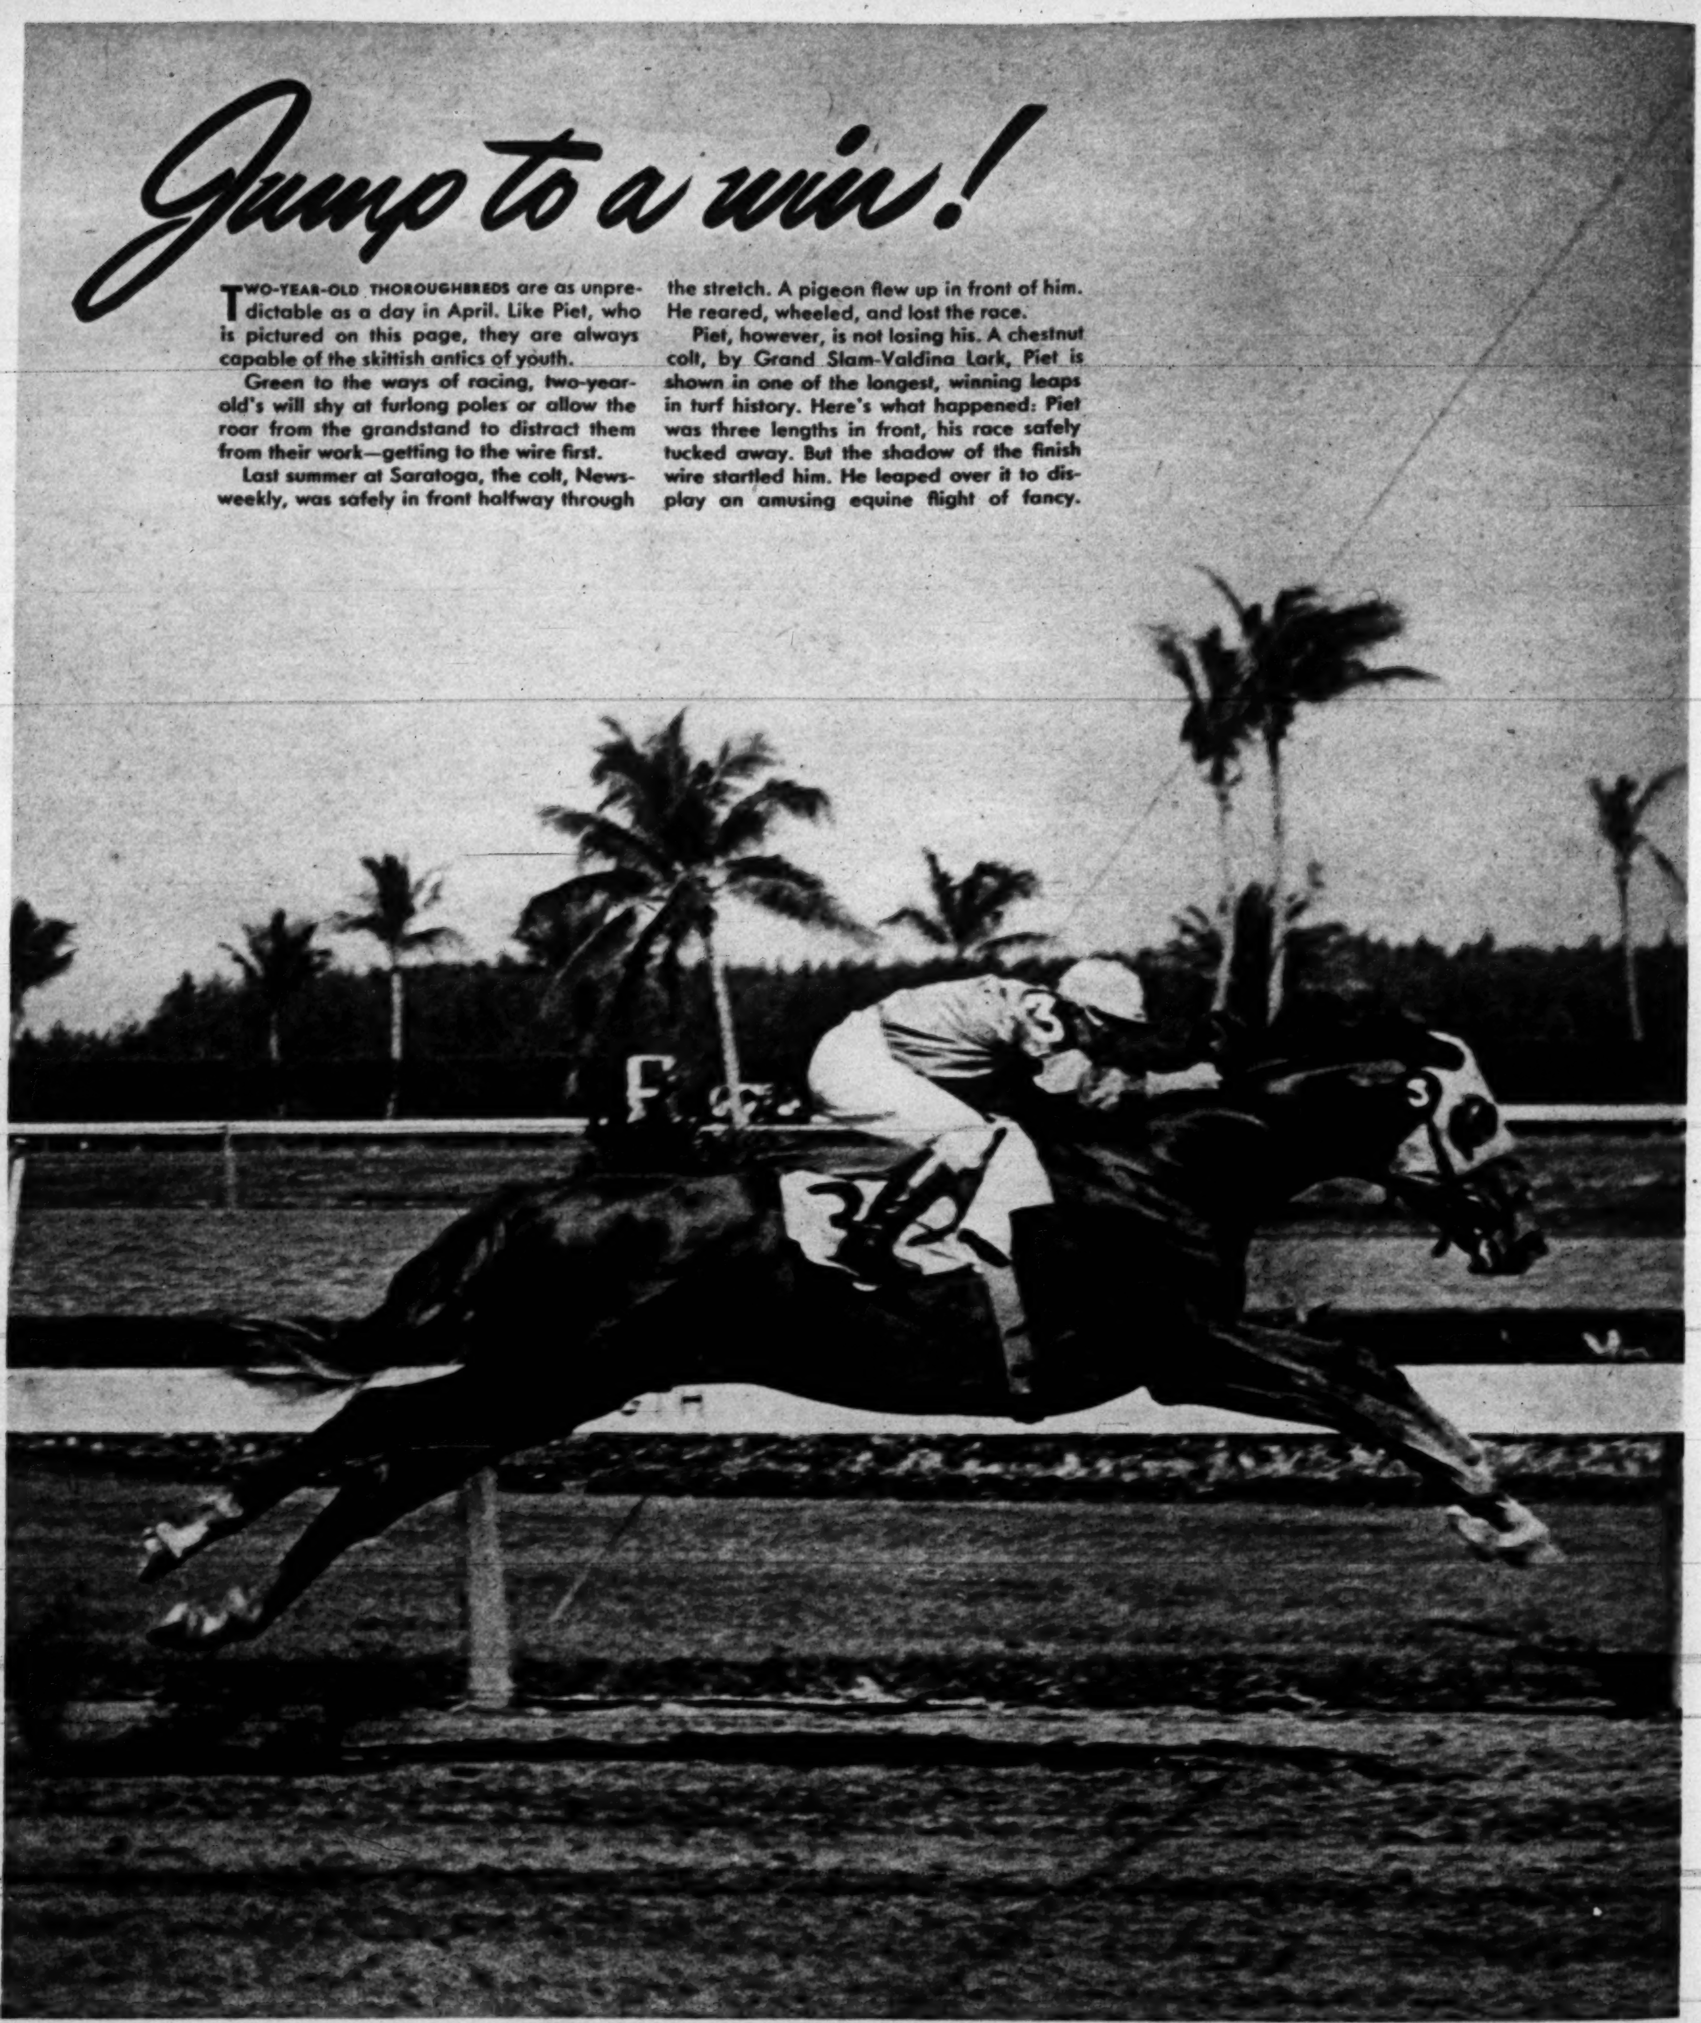
Jump to a win!

TWO-YEAR-OLD THOROUGHBREDS are as unpredictable as a day in April. Like Piet, who is pictured on this page, they are always capable of the skittish antics of youth.

Green to the ways of racing, two-year-old's will shy at furlong poles or allow the roar from the grandstand to distract them from their work—getting to the wire first.

Last summer at Saratoga, the colt, Newsweekly, was safely in front halfway through the stretch. A pigeon flew up in front of him. He reared, wheeled, and lost the race.

Piet, however, is not losing his. A chestnut colt, by Grand Slam-Valdina Lark, Piet is shown in one of the longest, winning leaps in turf history. Here's what happened: Piet was three lengths in front, his race safely tucked away. But the shadow of the finish wire startled him. He leaped over it to display an amusing equine flight of fancy.



Piet, two-year-old colt, frightened by shadow of overhead wire, takes a tremendous leap over the mythical line for his first win at Gulfstream Park.

DR. LEONARD A. SCHEELE

His efforts can determine the health of generations yet to come

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele

IF OUR NATIONAL HEALTH remains at, or surpasses, its present high level in the years to come, much of the credit will belong to a soft-speaking, 40-year-old midwestern doctor named Leonard A. Scheele. Sworn in as Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service this Spring, he has become the most influential force in American public medicine, with direct responsibility for the physical and mental well-being of the country.

There is plentiful evidence that Scheele is peculiarly well-fitted for what many consider the chief health problems of the future: making a frontal attack on the still unsolved ailments of old age in a population whose age level has been moving steadily upward; and organizing public health facilities in event of a total war that could fall heavily on civilians for the first time in U. S. history.

Led fight against cancer

Born in Ft. Wayne, Ind., and educated at the University of Michigan and Detroit's Wayne University, Scheele began to fight the menace of cancer shortly after he won his M.D. in 1934. He served as Officer-in-Charge of the National Cancer Institute's country-wide Cancer Control Program from 1939 to 1942. After the outbreak of war, Scheele became Chief of the Field Casualty Section, Medical Division, of the U. S. Office of Civilian Defense, a job he left to serve with Military Government and the Allied Commission in Italy. The new Surgeon General eventually headed the Preventive Medicine Section of the G-5 Division of Supreme Headquarters under General Eisenhower and, after the Nazi surrender, served as a representative on the Allied Control Council in Berlin.

As chief of our 150 year old Public Health Service, Dr. Scheele will head nearly 20,000 Service employees in a far-flung network of hospitals and clinics, allocate funds for new hospital construction, research and special training, technical and consultant services, and cooperate with local public and private authorities in maintaining standards of health.

Under his distinguished predecessor and former chief, Dr. Thomas Parran (now Scheele's assistant), the Service made notable strides towards eliminating many of the communicable diseases which formerly accounted for a huge toll among the young and middle aged, and made a start towards tackling the mental health problem.

In addition to keeping up Dr. Parran's work, Scheele will attempt to step up the attack on maturity's cardiovascular and kidney diseases, cancer, arthritis, and rheumatism. Upon his success will depend the health of generations to come.

ON PARADE...

Starting from the moment that Phyllis Ponn (Miss Television)—see page 16—stepped off the train in New York one Wednesday night she moved as fast as the wavy lines in a cathode tube. Flash bulbs popped as she left the train, popped as she checked in at the Waldorf-Astoria, popped after breakfast the next morning when she went to Radio City to pose with NBC President Niles Trammell . . . With her mother and Boston Post radio writer Howard Fitzpatrick panting in her wake, she rushed off to be introduced to some 500 radio and newspapermen at a radio award luncheon, rushed back to NBC for rehearsals, rushed up to Carnegie Hall . . . On Friday morning, she posed for PARADE, rushed off to meet fellow Bostonian Fred Allen, rushed back for more rehearsal, made her broadcast, and ended at the Stork Club, still looking fresh. Saturday, she raced up Fifth Avenue on a last minute shopping trip, spent the evening seeing "Allegro." Sunday, she went sightseeing. Monday she went to Camden, N. J. Tuesday, she and Fitzpatrick visited PARADE writer Ernest La France (above, left) and raced for the train to Boston. She made it.

NEXT WEEK

Gambling is big business in Las Vegas, Nev., and PARADE will journey behind the scenes next Sunday to see what it's all about . . . Also in the same issue will be a story outlining points to watch for when you build that new home... Watch, too, for a preview of the Indianapolis auto race classic and an advance peek at the toys junior will probably want next fall . . . Next Sunday is the date for PARADE's review of movies of the month.

THE COVER...

Today's cover pictures the latest successfully-tested flying auto. A bizzare machine, this mechanical hybrid is the invention of Theodore P. Hall, veteran aircraft designer for the Consolidated Aircraft Company (see "Flying Auto," pages 12-13). Designer Hall built his first flying auto, a single-engined craft, in 1939. In his newest model, he improved on the original by installing separate engines for both automobile and plane. Hall hopes to see the day when flying autos are mass produced so that thousands of traveling Americans can take to the air in their cars. Color photo by Ross Photos.

A mushroom of destruction grew in Bikini Bay when bomb dropped in 1946. But at Brookhaven L. I., science is turning the atom to peaceful uses.

The Atom Fights for Peace

At Brookhaven L. I., it serves medicine, industry

BY FRANK DE BLOIS

WHEN THE UNITED STATES ATOMIC ENERGY Commission decided—early in 1947—to establish at Brookhaven, L. I., a nuclear energy research laboratory, Long Island residents from Queens to Quogue rose in revolt.

Unable to associate atomic force with anything but destruction, some Long Islanders took immediate and drastic steps. A man in Roslyn closed his mortuary chapel and moved his family to the Dakota badlands. A woman in East Moriches started to dig a cyclone cellar and a small boy in Patchogue began to take pot-shots at the laboratory's construction workers with his air rifle.

As it developed, these precautions were unnecessary. The scientists employed at the Brookhaven National Laboratory are concerned not with making atom bombs for war but merely with exploring the possible uses of nuclear energy for peace—in the fields of physics, chemistry, biology and medicine.

In general terms, the principal purpose of the work at Brookhaven—which is the nation's first research laboratory to be devoted exclusively to the constructive, civilian use of the atom—is the fundamental study of nuclear forces and the nature of matter itself. Eventually the work is expected to progress towards the application of new knowledge in the cure of disease, greater productivity of agriculture and improvement of industrial processes.

Although Brookhaven's laboratory work is mainly basic and probably will not result in any immediate cures for whooping cough, eczema or crop worms, much of the project's scientific work will result in findings that should be useful in hospitals, farm centers and industrial plants.

To Co-operate with Outside Hospitals

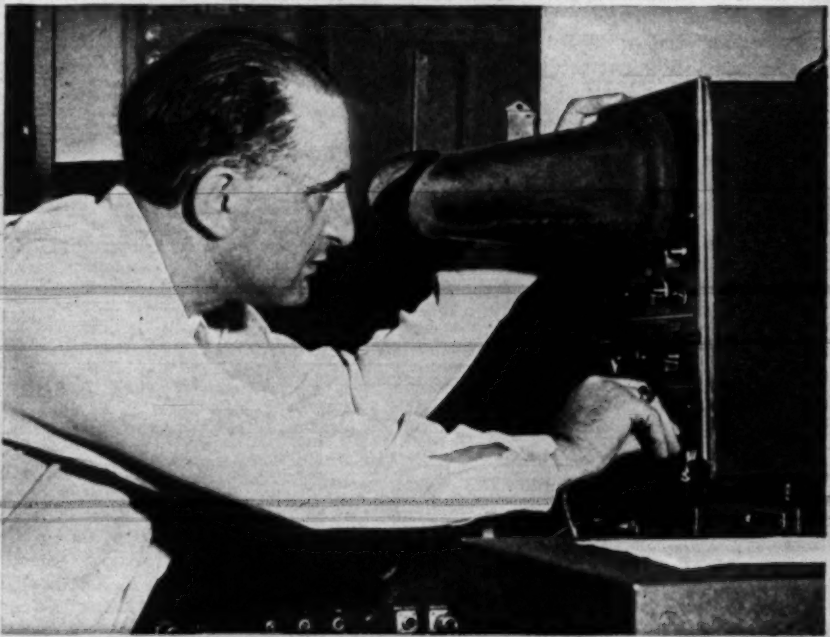
IN THE FIELD OF MEDICINE, for instance, the laboratory's scientists will investigate the nuances of radio-iodine, which is now used for the treatment of certain varieties of cancer, and those of radio-phosphorus, used, too, for therapeutic purposes. In time, the staff hopes to find out more about hardening of the arteries, diabetes and other degenerative diseases through radiation experiments in co-operation with outside hospitals.

Radioactive isotopes for agricultural research already have been distributed by scientists to all regions of the country and to more than two-thirds of the states. "In agriculture," says Dr. Philip M. Morse, who is managing-director of the Brookhaven project, "The prospects are really quite exciting."

Although they have not, as yet, learned how to drive the Queen Mary from New York to Southampton by means of an atomic power plant the size of a kidney bean, Brookhaven's scientists—in their basic industrial research—have been working with radioactive carbon for some time. Radioactive carbon is made by bombarding nitrogen with neutrons and, when perfected, is expected to simplify oil refining.

According to Dr. Morse, Brookhaven actually has three main purposes. Its initial aim is to pursue a fundamental search "for beneficial and peaceful applications" of the new knowledge. Its secondary purpose is to train young scientists to carry on the work. Its third: to remove fear of the atom from the minds of men.

Fear — particularly on the part of those Long Island residents who, like Roslyn's mortician, felt that no amount of distance was too great to place between themselves and the "atom plant" at Brookhaven—still plays an important part in the lives of the laboratory's staff members. One of their biggest jobs is to dispel it and scientists are working overtime right now in an effort to allay a variety of suspicions held by Long Islanders concerning their work.



A neutron counter in the electronics division of the Brookhaven Laboratory is tested by a physicist. Equipment also includes a cyclotron and a $10 million nuclear pile.

ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION
Brookhaven Area

Office workers at Brookhaven headquarters, who are residents of neighboring Long Island towns, work 40-hour week.

ATOM Splitting MACHINE

Converted friend of the atom is Patchogue's Mayor Swezey (second from right) chatting with Brookhaven officials.

Hungry for knowledge of atom, Patchogue residents follow lecturer through exhibit held in high school gymnasium.

Like fire, atomic force can work for good—or evil

Long Island neighbors are shown that Brookhaven is there to help them

NATIVES OF LONG ISLAND have complained that "radioactivity" generated by the Brookhaven Laboratory's nuclear energy research has killed Long Island oysters, driven off Long Island ducks, eroded Long Island soil and made the breakfast coffee taste bitter. Most of these misconceptions, Dr. Morse believes, are due to the fact that many people are still Hiroshima-conscious and, as such, are unable to realize that atomic force—like fire—can become an instrument for good as well as evil. To counteract these fears, the laboratory has dispatched scientists on a series of lectures at neighborhood club meetings, church suppers and oyster frys.

The scientists, who have been digesting creamed chicken and pale green peas at these fetes for more than six months now, finally believe that they have succeded in assuring even the most skeptical members of their audiences that no atomic weapons are being manufactured at Brookhaven, and that discovering peaceful uses for the atom is the sole purpose of their work.

"Our job in this public relations work," Dr. Morse said recently, "is to emphasize over and over again that Brookhaven is not a bomb laboratory and that it will not become a military establishment in any sense of the word. We are interested exclusively in the beneficial uses of atomic energy for peace-time purposes."

Determined to protect itself further against these popular superstitions, the laboratory is undertaking a comprehensive survey of plant and animal life on Long Island. When it is completed Brookhaven will be able to reply with scientific evidence to any ill-founded charges that radioactivity is hampering the surrounding area and population.

"This work is progressing nicely," said Dr. Morse, "and I think that before we're finished, we will have convinced even the skeptics that atomic energy is here—for good."

Work Is Progressing Steadily

BROOKHAVEN TODAY IS MORE than a year old and, although the laboratory has not as yet been completed or fully staffed, work is progressing steadily. The project now employs about 1,000 people, many of whom are native Long Island construction workers, who, having overcome their fears of radioactive disintegration, are at present engaged in building a huge nuclear reactor, popularly known as a "pile." A pile, a source of neutrons, actually is a pile of graphite blocks in which pieces of uranium are embedded. Brookhaven's pile, upon which the entire research of the project will eventually depend, will probably cost more than $10 million by the time it is completed later this year.

Ultimately, the laboratory will have a permanent staff of 200 scientists plus a visiting staff of 200 more, all to be drawn from the nine universities (Columbia, Cornell, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, M.I.T., Pennsylvania, Princeton, Rochester and Yale) that are running the project, and from other scientific and educational institutions in the area. The scientists will include a good many of the members of American physicists' associations and an additional seasoning of chemists, meteorologists and biochemists, most of whom, since nuclear physics is a young science, will be under forty.

Gates Guarded by Single Policeman

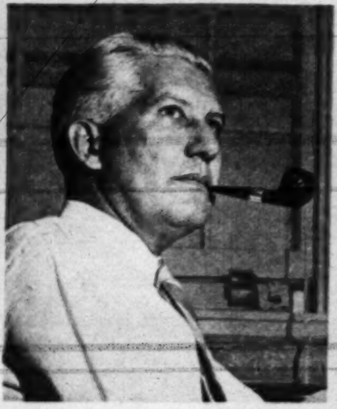
ALTHOUGH THE LABORATORY'S staff members are bound by restrictions of the McMahon Act, which provides for rigid supervision of all work in atomic energy, the laboratory is relatively free from the hush-hush type of military secrecy found at Oak Ridge and Los Alamos. Brookhaven's gate is guarded by a single policeman, a middle-aged resident of nearby Port Jefferson, and visitors are allowed to roam the area unmolested. The project's pile construction site, of course, remains off-limits to sightseers, picnickers and visiting salesmen, but all in all, security regulations are informal enough to give Brookhaven, which was once the site of an Army induction center, the atmosphere of a campus rather than that of a drill field.

"You see," Dr. Morse explained, "when we begun we had a tough time getting scientists. They didn't like the idea of working under government supervision. So we ditched most of the supervision and developed a kind of university setup instead."

Dr. Morse leaned back in his chair and flicked a cigarette ash from the sleeve of his university-cut jacket. "So far," he said, "it has worked out just fine."

From college halls and machine shops, these people have come to work with nuclear energy . . .

Robert Szmala, veteran machinist of Patchogue, L. I., was wary of atom when he first came to Brookhaven. "Now I'm for it," he says. "It's something worth while."

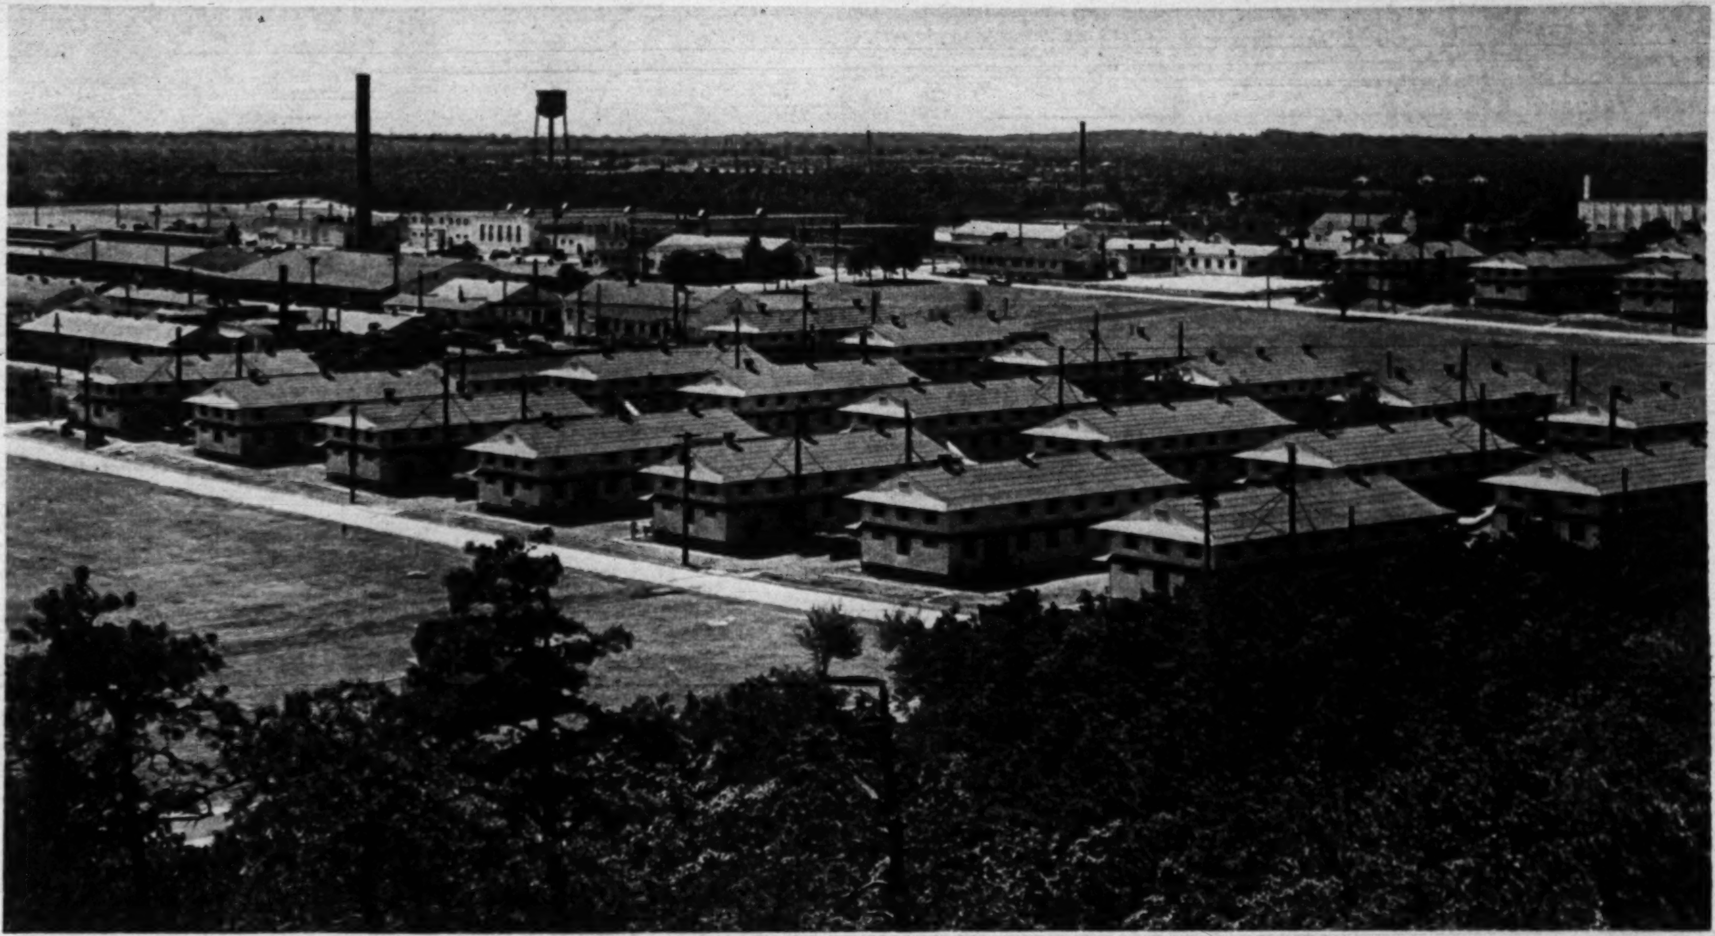


Eldon C. Shoup, executive administrative head, hires most non-scientific help. "We tried to hire local residents," he says. "We want them with us."

Paula Campbell, ex-Barbizon model, is file clerk at Brookhaven. "It's better than modeling," she says, "and much closer to home." She lives in Port Jefferson.

Dr. Philip M. Morse, director of Brookhaven project, says half his battle is to win support of people. "We'll win it," he says, "by ending fear of the atom."

Brookhaven cop, V. J. Indiveri, was former M. P. at Camp Upton. "It's better out here now than then," he says. Indiveri lives in Belden, 20 miles from Brookhaven.



Brookhaven National Laboratory occupies 6,000-acre tract on site of Army's Camp Upton. The camp's barracks have become machine shops, research labs, chart rooms. Its enlisted men's mess now houses cafeteria where scientists, stenographers, day laborers, executives all stand in line. So far, $25 million has been spent on project. THE END.

Wanda Hendrix's smile wins role in Paramount's "My Own True Love"—

The smile that wins is the Pepsodent Smile!

Wanda Hendrix, Paramount Starlet, plays a leading role in Paramount's "My Own True Love." Toledo's unique "Letters for Democracy" contest drew more than 18,000 entries. Sorting letters are (left to right) Allen Saunders, Mayor Michael V. DiSalle and Edward C. Ames.

Friendship by Mail

"Letters for Democracy" are year-round task in Toledo

DESPITE COMMUNIST CLAMOR that mass letter writing to citizens of a foreign country is an infringement of national sovereignty, many observers agree that America's friendship letter campaign, inaugurated this spring, is likely to become one of this nation's permanent "ambassadors" of good will.

As argument, advocates point to the role thousands of letters sent by Americans to relatives and friends in Italy played in deciding the Italian election.

American letter writers deny that they unduly influenced a foreign election. They contend that their efforts were a legitimate means of counteracting false propaganda about the United States.

The plan to send personal letters to Europe was hatched in Toledo, Ohio, as a result of a conversation between Mayor Michael V. DiSalle and his father, who emigrated from Italy 46 years ago.

When a section of the Friendship Train reached Toledo, Mayor DiSalle explained his plan to commentator Drew Pearson. Soon after, Pearson mentioned it on the radio and in his column. Well-publicized, the idea swept the country.

18,000 Students entered Toledo contest

In Toledo, April was set aside as "Letters for Democracy Month." Plans were made to send letters not only to Italians but to persons in other European countries as well. More than 16,000 high school and 2,000 college students entered a letter-writing contest.

"The real purpose of this movement," explains Mayor DiSalle, "is to encourage letter writing to friends in all European countries. Letters should be written in a personal vein to get over the idea of what America means to the writer. Not a sermon or lecture, each letter should tell of such things as new jobs, business experiences, family life or pleasant vacations."

Don Fair and Dorothy Keaton, both high school students, put final touches to posters.

Francis J. Semetko informs relatives in Hungary about life in United States via letter.

As Leo Salpietro dictates, neighbor Marie Giaimo pens letter to his old buddy in Sicily.

Active in campaign is 70-year-old Dr. Geza Farkas, publisher of a Hungarian newspaper.

French warbride Paulette Willhite, with husband and child, writes to old folks at home.

Mrs. Mary Frisk has been "selling America" in letters to Denmark for 60 years. THE END.

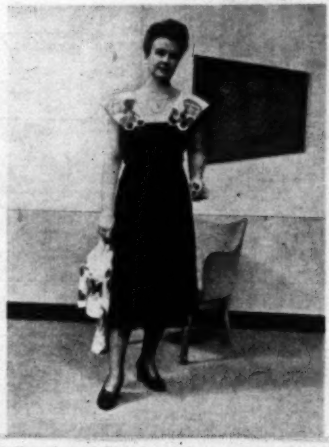
The head line is as important as the hip line. When Mrs. Jones traded her flat, shovel-brimmed felt for white Swiss straw with side bow, its perky upsweep made her look like a new person. The hat: $15.

Stout women look thin when they choose scientifically-designed clothes

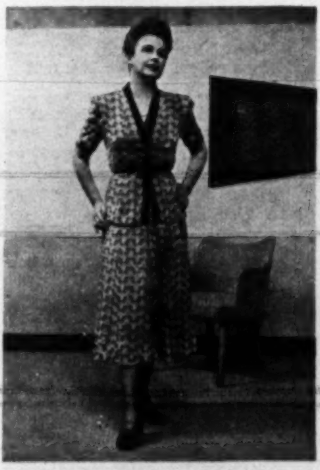
THE FASHION WRITERS have a word for it. They say "stylishly stout," or "pleasingly plump." But the woman who fits these categories is not concerned with phrases. Her problem is to find clothes that are stylish, yet flatter her figure.

As the photographs on these pages show, Lane Bryant has succeeded in creating stylish fashions for plus-forty sizes. Bryant fashion experts made a scientific study of how a stout woman can "take off" pounds by choosing the right clothes. They discovered that it is a triple problem: materials, patterns and styling must all be correct or the plump woman will look plumper in her new outfit.

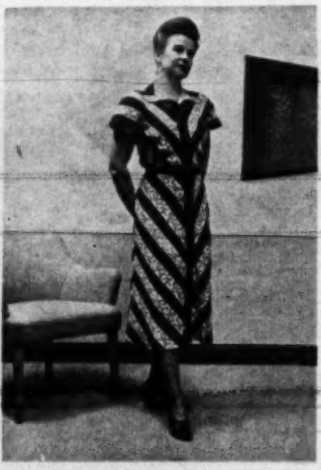
The "New Look" is flattering to the stocky woman in many ways. Loose flowing lines are always best for the heavy figure; tight, skimpy lines must be avoided. Patterns should be neat and small, not bright and splashy. On the whole, dark colors are best, but they should be combined judiciously with brighter touches. Stripes are miracle workers in creating the much-desired illusion of slimness.



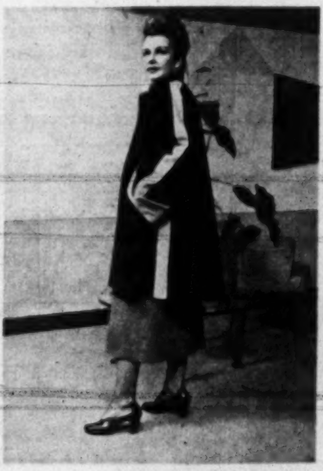
Extra-wide shoulder straps are slim trick in this sunback dress of black butcher linen. Jacket and straps are in printed pique. Outfit is priced at $17.95.



Stout women should avoid loud prints. The small, over-all pattern of this Bemberg sheer minimizes figure size as does the dark trim on the long jacket. At $25.



Done with stripes! Mrs. Jones looks pounds slimmer in this cleverly-styled spun rayon daytime frock. It comes in wine, navy or black combination at $14.95.



No more tight-fitting coats for Mrs. Jones. She dotes on all-wool suede topper with its loose lines, slimming stripe on sleeves The price: $49.95. THE END.

Takeoff view shows trim lines of designer Theodore Hall's experimental flying auto. All-metal flight section has 34½-foot wing-spread. Craft cruises at over 100 m.p.h.

FLYING AUTO

California inventor has built a new type of craft

AMERICANS, SINCE THE DAYS of Eli Whitney and Samuel F. B. Morse, have never ceased to be putterers and tinkerers, and out of their workshops have come some of man's most useful mechanical servants.

The fascinating equipment of the air age has not been immune from this urge to make good better. Thus one of the most tantalizing goals of Americans with a mechanical bent has been the manufacture of a successful automobile that will fly. Robert E. Fulton, jr., of Danbury, Conn., has created a plane that can be driven on a highway (PARADE, Jan. 25), but it remained for a nimble-witted western designer to build and fly the first practical airborne auto.

The designer of this new type of car with wings is Theodore P. Hall, of the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Company's engineering department in San Diego, Calif. Hall built his first flying auto in 1939 and saw it successfully test-flown the following year. This model employed a single engine for both automobile and plane.

Powered by Two Engines

Designer Hall's latest Consolidated-Vultee craft has separate engines for car and plane. The automobile is driven by a 26½-horsepower car motor located in the rear, while the flight section is powered by a 190-horsepower Lycoming aircraft engine. In the air the craft is said to compare favorably in performance with a standard four-place airplane.

The four-passenger car, which actually serves as a landing gear for the flight section, is equipped with hydraulic brakes, special shock absorbers and fluid drive. Into its lightweight plastic body is built a tubular steel-aluminum structure which supports the flight section, secured to the roof of the car by three locking bolts.

Although the flying automobile is still in the experimental stage, designer Hall hopes that the next decade will see models turned out by the thousands for travel-loving Americans.

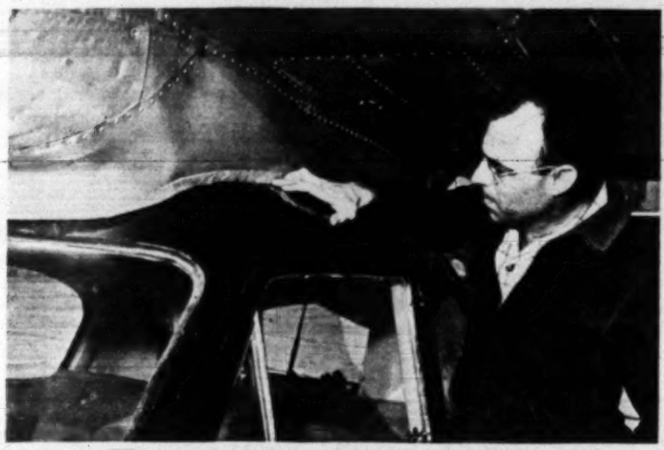
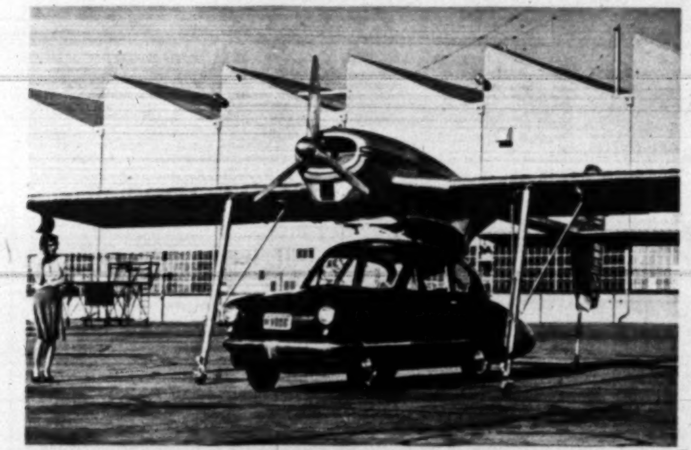
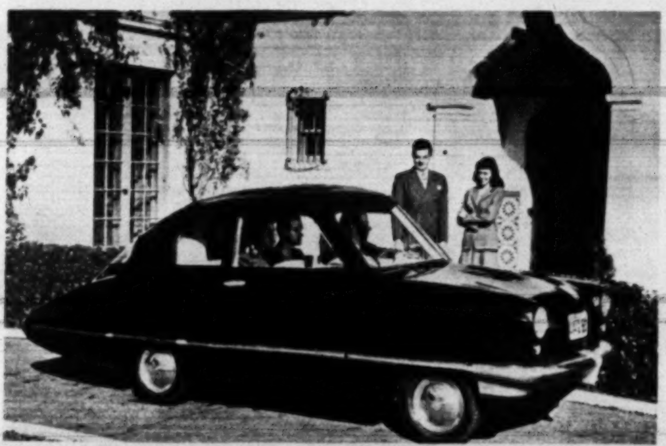
Flying auto has separate engine for car and plane. In flight, it performs like any four-seater plane. Car body is of lightweight plastic.



Nesting snugly on car roof, braced with strong tubular steel-aluminum members, flight section is fastened down by three locking bolts.



Disengaged, flight section is raised by 4½-pound jacks lowered from either wing. The car can then be driven away under its own power.



Smartly designed car seats four comfortably, is driven by Crosley motor in rear. Special shock absorbers ease landing impact. THE END.

Spicy gingerbread plus fluffy marshmallows, bitter-sweet chocolate equal High Hat Gingerbread.

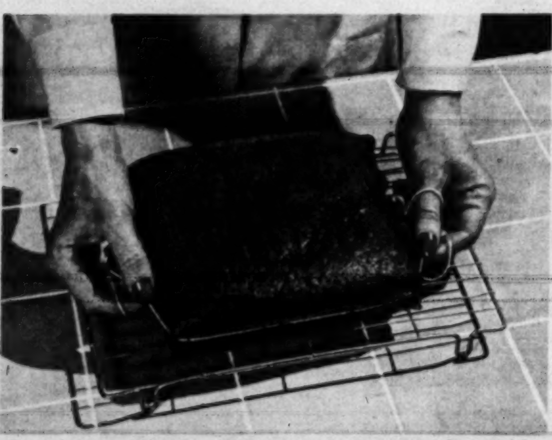
High Hat Gingerbread

THE FRAGRANCE OF HOT, SPICY gingerbread has wafted through American kitchens for generations. One of the present-day, packaged gingerbread mixes, in fact, is patterned after a recipe found in the personal cookbook of George Washington's mother! So we feel sure that a dessert made with gingerbread as a base is certain to be a success. Just three ingredients—gingerbread mix, marshmallows and chocolate—to make a luscious cake. And with the greatest of ease, too. With warm weather lassitude already upon us, it's nice to know of a quick dessert that is so appealing. To be consistent, the rest of the meal should have a "take-it-easy" air. Begin with jellied consommé Madrilene, chilled right in the can and broken up with a fork to serve. Follow with pan-broiled fish fillets, potato chips and cooked, quick-frozen broccoli or green beans. Then the dessert—accompanied by delicious frosted iced coffee or tea.

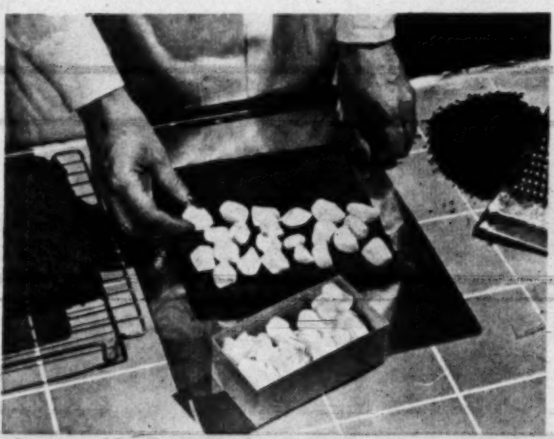
High Hat Gingerbread

1 package gingerbread mix ½ lb. marshmallow
2 squares (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate

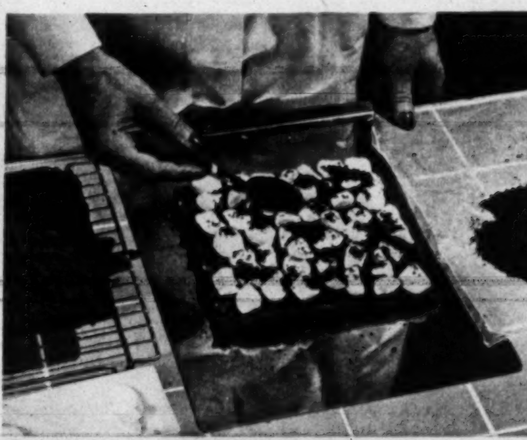
Make and bake gingerbread according to package directions. Split hot gingerbread. Cut marshmallows in quarters; grate chocolate. Spread cut surface of one-half of gingerbread with half of the marshmallows; sprinkle with half of the chocolate. Place remaining half of gingerbread on top; cover surface with remaining marshmallows and top with remaining chocolate. Place in moderate oven, 350 F., long enough to melt marshmallows slightly. Yield: 8 servings.



To cut hot gingerbread into two layers, use clean white twine held in both hands. Pull twine gently toward you.



Cut marshmallows in fourths with scissors dipped in powdered sugar. Spread generously over half of bread.



Sprinkle grated chocolate over marshmallows. Place other layer on top, cut down; repeat. THE END.

Try These Cinnamon Fruit Drops!

- ½ cup Durkee's Margarine
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1¾ cups all-purpose flour
- ½ tsp. salt
- 2 tsp. Durkee's Cinnamon
- ⅛ tsp. Durkee's Powdered Cloves
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1 cup nuts, chopped
- 1 cup raisins
- ½ cup sour milk or buttermilk

Cream Margarine. Add sugar slowly and beat until light. Beat in egg. Sift flour. Sift again with salt, cinnamon, cloves and baking soda. Add nuts and raisins to flour mixture and blend well. Add mixture to other ingredients alternately with sour milk or buttermilk and mix to form a stiff batter. Drop by teaspoons on greased cookie sheets. May be decorated with nuts and glacéed fruits (optional). Bake in moderately hot oven (375°F) about 10-15 minutes. Approx. 40 cookies.

Springtime Platter with Cheese Sauce!

Virginia Coates
Home Economist

A new idea and a tempting dish. Try it! It's easy to make and it's thrifty, too! Durkee's Margarine is the wonder-worker here. It's so mild and sweet—and fresh as a spring dawn! Ideal for cooking and baking, on hot vegetables and as a spread. That's because Durkee's is a smooth blend of pure vegetable oils and fresh pasteurized skim milk. Nutritious, too, with 15,000 units of Vitamin A the year 'round.

SPRINGTIME PLATTER

- 2 bunches cooked asparagus
- ¼ cup melted Margarine
- 6 slices cooked ham or chicken
- 2 cups cheese sauce

Toss the asparagus in melted Margarine and arrange on serving dish. Place ham or chicken on top, garnish with vegetables and cover with cheese sauce. Brown lightly under broiler before serving.

CHEESE SAUCE

- 4 tbsp. Durkee's Margarine
- 1 tsp. Durkee's Garlic Salt
- 4 tbsp. flour
- 6 tbsp. grated cheese
- 2 cups top milk
- ¼ tsp. white pepper
- 1 egg yolk, beaten

Melt Margarine over low heat. Stir in garlic salt. Remove from heat and stir in flour with wooden spoon. Add top milk slowly, reserving 2 tbsp. Stir over heat until mixture boils. Add pepper and egg yolk mixed with 2 tbsp. milk. Add grated cheese and stir until well blended. Makes approximately 2 cups sauce.

Telegenic is the word for Phyllis

A Boston co-ed with looks, ability and personality is video's choice

BY ERNEST LA FRANCE

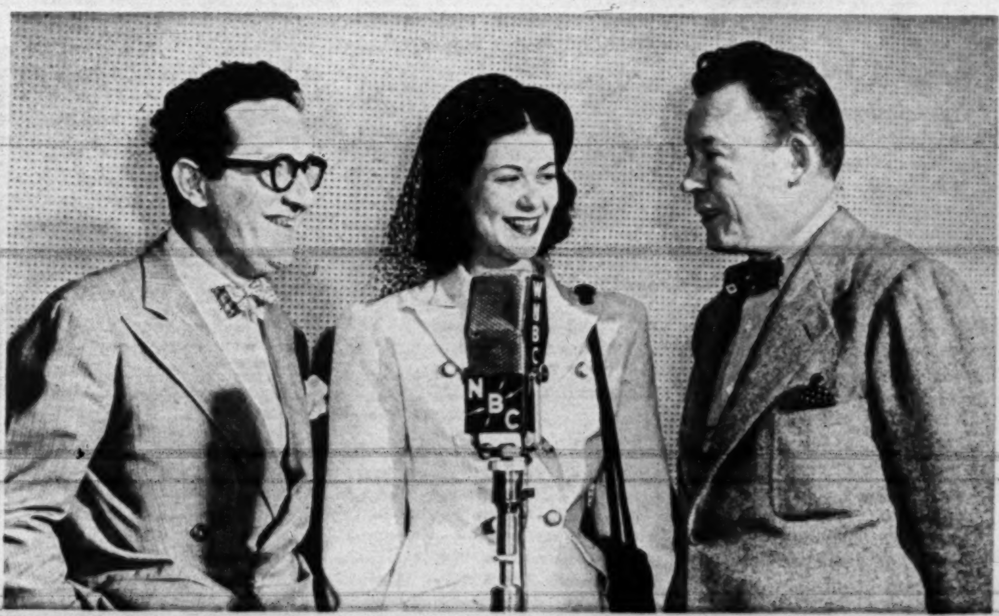
IF YOU FIND YOURSELF THINKING of television as a willowy brunette with sloe eyes and a nice pair of legs, it will be due to a Miss Phyllis Joyce Ponn, of Brookline, Mass. The winner of a contest conducted by the Boston Post, station WBZ-TV and the Electric Institute to discover the New England-girl-who-has-the-most-to-give-to-television, she has been officially crownd Miss Television of 1948 by the National Broadcasting Company as the living symbol of the radio wonderchild.

In private, or non-televised life, Miss Television is a 17-year-old Boston University freshman, daughter of a Boston attorney, an accomplished tap and ballet dancer, and spare time fashion model. Up until a few months ago, television to her was just a dictionary word.

Entering the contest with some of the do-or-die spirit that defended Bunker Hill, she held out against a field of 1,200 other contestants, danced an arrangement of "Tico Tico," and romped off with the title. With it were a $200 wardrobe, $2,500 in gifts and a trip to New York, where she was lodged at the Waldorf-Astoria, dined at the Stork Club and launched into network television over WNBC-TV.

Television, already old enough to have coined the word "telegenic," but still too young to know what it is talking about, defines it as "something you have when you have it."

In the present case, it means 5′ 6½″ and 118 pounds of trim lines, well-modeled features, softly curling black hair, a dulcet voice, and a sparkling smile that should charm society matrons and bartenders alike, plus a proven ability to do something in front of a camera. She gained the ability through years of ballet training and proved it through dancing in operas and summer resort entertainment. She has it.



Congratulated by fellow Bostonian Fred Allen and Kenny Delmar (Senator Claghorn), Miss Television quipped she would not compete in humor field if Allen would keep away from ballet. THE END.

Are you letting your daughter enter Marriage Blindly?

Every Bride Should Know These Intimate Physical Facts . . .

Before a girl marries she should be fully aware how necessary douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, marriage happiness, to combat odor and after menstrual periods. In fact, the question today is NOT whether to douche, but rather WHAT to put in the douche.

Here's Scientific Truth You Can Trust: Scientists tested every generally known antiseptic-germicide they could find on sale for the douche. And NO OTHER type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested proved SO POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to tissues. This ZONITE principle was developed by a world-famous Surgeon and an eminent Chemist. What better recommendation could you desire?

Cautions Against Weak or Dangerous Products

Pity the old-fashioned woman who from ignorant advice of friends, still uses salt, soda or vinegar for the douche. Foolish woman! Doesn't she realize these 'kitchen makeshifts' are NOT germicides in the douche? They never in this world can give the great germicidal action of ZONITE with its marvelous deodorizing properties.

Yet ZONITE is so inexpensive, any woman should be able to afford its wonderful benefits.

A Modern Miracle!

ZONITE positively contains no phenol, no mercury—no harsh acids—overstrong solutions of which may damage tissues and in time even impair functional activity of mucous glands.

You can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without the slightest risk of injury. It's absolutely non-irritating, non-burning, non-poisonous.

ZONITE actually destroys and removes odor-causing, clinging waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It immediately kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can BE SURE ZONITE DOES kill every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Scientific douching directions with every bottle.

HY GARDNER'S NEWSREEL

PHILOSOPHY: Alice Roosevelt Longworth, America's George Bernard Shaw, says a sure sign that a woman is growing old is when she has to put on her spectacles to apply her lipstick!

FROM THE PERSONAL COLUMNS of the Yonkers Herald: "Tall, dark, lonesome male with male cocker spaniel, wishes to meet tall, blonde and winsome female with a female cocker spaniel. Object matrimony—for the cocker spaniels" . . .

ANYWAY IT'S SAFER! Asked bluntly why he never took out his former showgirl-wife, a middle-aged man suing for divorce in Reno told a judge he was ashamed to be seen with her. "Where there used to be curves," he sighed, "there are now detours" . . .

ADD ACCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE: There's a White House located at 340 Bowery, in New York City, where transients can buy lodgings for 45¢ a night. But unlike its more famous namesake, the Bowery White House is fireproof!

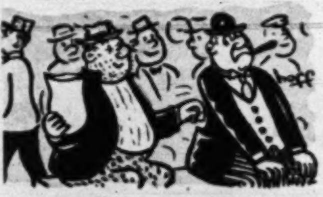
WHAT PRICE COURTESY? At a Madison Square Garden sporting event, a pickpocket reached into a spectator's pocket, removed a dollar bill, bought some popcorn—and was arrested trying to put back the change into his victim's pocket . . .



STRETCHING IT TOO FAR: Maybe it's just coincidental, but the day after the Nebraska primaries, a Minneapolis haberdasher advertised a sale of "MacArthur Supporters, two for the price of one" . . .

IN KANSAS CITY, a firm which does most of its business through the distribution of catalogs is so tired of revising its price lists that its newest catalog has this note attached "The only figures we're sure of in the enclosed are those included in the phrase 'Established 1901' " . . .

SMALL FRY HUCKSTER: A recently married advertising agency friend of Irving Hoffman's was filling out his income tax form when he came to the space marked "Exemption claimed for children." "Watch this space," he penciled in . . .

PARADE'S GUEST QUIZ . . .

JACK BARRY

THE QUESTIONS (and answers) in this week's test sprang full-grown from the brain of quizzer Jack Barry, otherwise notable as the inventor and M.C. of "Juvenile Jury," broadcast each Sunday at 3:30 E.D.S.T. over the Mutual network. When not asking questions, Barry is an easy-going, ex-lifeguard with a B.S. degree who wandered into radio after a spell in his father's handkerchief manufacturing business. His ability to get along with children (he is still a bachelor) nets him a cool $50,000 per year. Answers to questions appear at bottom of page.

1. How long does a reservoir remain useful—75, 100 or 250 years?

2. Is "picaresque" another spelling of picturesque?

3. Which of the following men is a well-known polo player? Atwater Kent, Oleg Cassini, Pete Bostwick.

4. Is Roosevelt Hospital in New York City named for Franklin Delano, Theodore Roosevelt or James Henry Roosevelt?

5. What does the Roman numeral CD stand for?

6. Which of the following is an eight-year-old boy prodigy conductor? D'Artega, Gian-Carlo Menotti, Ferruccio Burco, Ferruccio Tagliavini.

7. Name two popular songs that have birds in their titles.

8. What design will be on the forthcoming new 50-cent piece?

9. What Indians have a reservation in Florida—Iroquois, Apaches, Seminoles, Sioux?

10. Which of these men was a shorthand expert before becoming a showman: Isaac Pitman, Barnum & Bailey, Billy Rose.

11. "Little Joe from Kokomo" is a slang expression in which of the following games: marbles, roulette, cricket, dice.

12. Name four well-known animals that never existed.

13. Are stowaways on steamships coming to this country deported or subject to punishment?

14. The expression "flaming youth" was popular in the '20s. With which writer did the phrase originate? Hugh Walpole, Sinclair Lewis, Upton Sinclair, William Shakespeare.

15. What was the average length of life in ancient Rome?

16. For which of the following is shark skin used commercially: men's belts, briefcases, purse linings.

17. What animal can look backwards without turning its head?

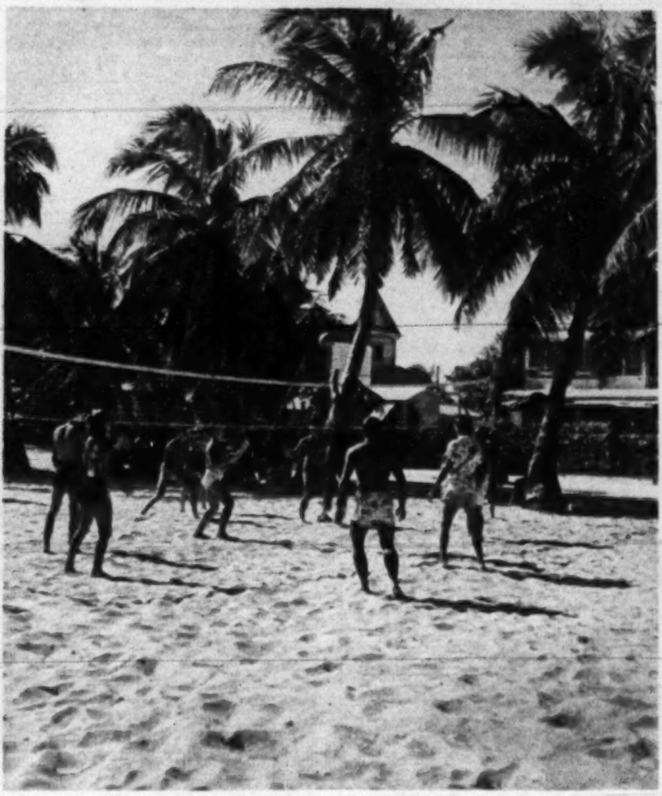
18. Are the so-called "blue babies" really blue?

19. What do the three balls over a pawnbroker's shop mean?

ANSWERS TO PARADE'S GUEST QUIZ

1. About 250 years. 2. No. Picaresque means pertaining to rogues or rascals. 3. Pete Bostwick. 4. James Henry Roosevelt. 5. 400. 6. Ferruccio Burco. 7. "Nightingale," "Flamingo," "Poor Butterfly"—or any others. 8. Benjamin Franklin on one side; Liberty Bell on the other. 9. Seminoles. 10. Billy Rose. 11. Dice. 12. Unicorn, dragon, mermaid, sphinx. 13. Yes, deportation and fine. 14. Shakespeare—Hamlet: "To flaming youth let virtue be as wax." 15. 25 years. 16. Men's belts. 17. The chameleon. Its eyes are set in cone-shaped barrels and can be used to look in all directions. 18. Yes. 19. They were originally the coat of arms of the famous Florentine family of the Medici, who were money lenders.

Running from the Atlantic to the Gulf of Mexico, Key Westers refer to Duval Street, main thoroughfare, as "longest street in the world."



Between dips in the rolling surf at South Beach, swimmers often get together for a hostly contested game of volley ball on the sands.

KEY WEST

Scenic Overseas Highway brings boom in tourist trade to island

LUSH, LACKADAISICAL KEY WEST, southernmost city in the United States, is headed for opulence once again because a hurricane blew most of its only railway into the Gulf of Mexico. In its place now threads picturesque Overseas Highway, affording tourists easy access to the keys.

Few communities have had the "riches to rags to riches" experience of Key West. Around 1834 it was considered the richest city per capita in the country. A hundred years later it was bankrupt. In between, it had a fantastic series of ups and downs.

Tropical in its climate and in the attitude of its natives, Key West at various times has been the haven for a flourishing pirate trade, favorite rendezvous for prohibition rumrunners and scene of profitable activity by adventurous salvagers rummaging through the hulks of ships smashed on the treacherous coral reefs.

Overseas Highway—affording a scenic three-and-a-half hour drive from Miami over 38 bridges connecting the green Florida keys to the mainland—traverses the right-of-way of the old overseas extension of the Florida East Coast Railway built in 1912.

Dwindling receipts and the devastating hurricane of Labor Day, 1935, which wiped out 40 miles of track, put the road in bankruptcy. In 1937 the right-of-way was taken over by the Monroe County Toll Bridge Commission. Utilizing the bridges over which the trains had run, the highway was opened a year later. Now, it affords Key West the most likely means to recover its once proud position through an accelerated year-round tourist trade.

U. S. Navy maintains key submarine base on island. Navy personnel plus tourists form main prop of Key West's economy. Although Key West has no large industry now, it once was the world's greatest manufacturer of cigars. Razed by fire in 1886, plants moved to Tampa.

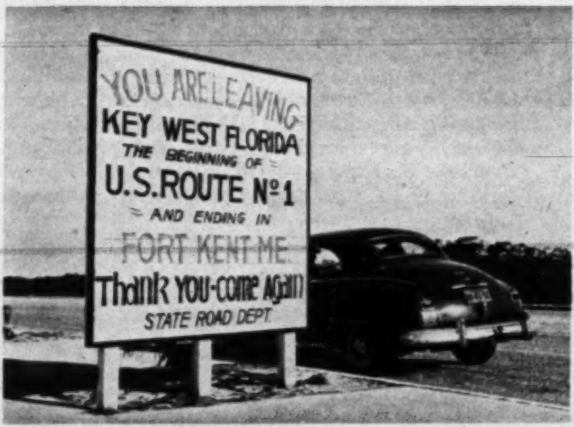
Subsidized by Cuban government, San Carlos School offers Spanish and English to Key West children. School was founded in 1871 for children of Cuban expatriates, now is open to all young Key Westers.

Sports, climate lure visitors



Leaving Key West, motorists return to the Florida mainland over scenic Overseas Highway, the "road that goes to sea."

COMPACTLY SQUATTING ON A two-by-four-mile coral island, Key West actually is closer to Cuba (90 miles) than it is to the Florida mainland (111 miles). Washed by the rolling Atlantic on the east and the billowing Gulf on the west, the island has a foreign atmosphere, enhanced by thousands of natives of West Indian descent.

Almost everywhere Spanish is spoken—one-fourth of the 19,000 year-round population is Cuban—along with English and a distinctive Negro dialect.

In the main a winter resort, the pleasant climate — a mean seasonal 70.7-degree temperature — is the island's greatest tourist lure. Certainly, visitors aren't drawn by a rip-roaring welcome, for the average year-round Key Wester strangely doesn't seem to Key West has delightful tropical climate. Natives boast of fact that it is 375 miles further south than Cairo, Egypt.

Many visiting motorists stop at convenient motels such as this one at South Beach.

San Carlos Opera House also houses San Carlos School and Cuban Consulate.

Turtles, shark oil are valuable sources of income for year-round Key Westers.

As no railway runs to island, Key Westers receive most of their supplies by truck.

Artist Cyril Marshall lives in Key West as do an ever-increasing number of painters.

care whether the tourists come or not.

The island has most standard warm-weather outdoor sports—tennis, golf, swimming, boating and fishing. Swimming is especially attractive from smooth, coral-dredged beaches. On a well-kept municipal beach, bathers splash about without paying admittance charge.

Game fish abound in Gulf

With emphasis on deep-sea fishing for strange tropical species, Key West is a fisherman's paradise. Hard-fighting game fish—sailfish, dolphin, bonito and tuna—abound in the Gulf Stream. For $50, a party of five or less can charter a boat for a day's deep-sea fishing. Boats that stay closer to shore can be boarded for $3 a head. The latter charge includes bait and drop lines.

Key West has but one big, swank hotel, the Casa Marina. During the main winter season, a double room with private bath commands from $38 to $45 per day, meals included. Tourist rooms and small hotels are less expensive, while attractive motels (motor court buildings) on the beach charge about $8 a day for a double room and bath.

In contrast to the early thirties when about 80 per cent of the city's residents were on relief, there are more jobs in Key West today than there are persons to fill them.

Product of the depression days, the island now has a large artists' colony. When traditional fishing, sponging and shipping furnished scant livelihood, government relief agencies brought a small group of artists to Key West to stimulate a lagging economy.

Through the years, the island's blazing sun and lush colors have attracted more and more painters. Today many of Key West's permanent residents are professional artists and art students.

Deep-sea game fish abound in waters, making Key West fisherman's paradise.

Point of interest to most visitors is this house, southernmost in the U. S. THE END.

Paulette Goddard proves she is handy in a fight in Paramount's forthcoming comedy, "Hazard." On floor are Frank Faylen, Macdonald Carey and Fred Clark.

Fisticuffs—on order

"Hazard" fight exemplifies director's skill

BY KAY SULLIVAN

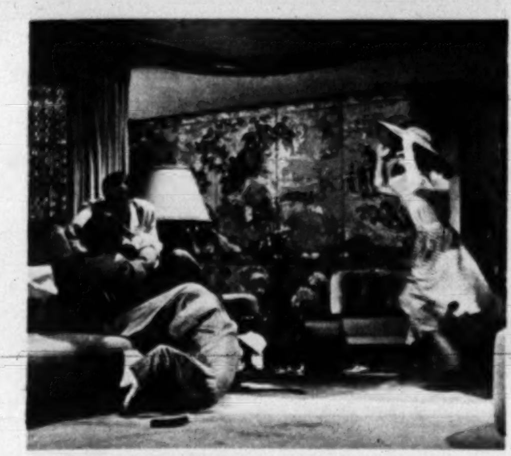
THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A LIVELY fight in a movie to move the customers to the edges of their seats. At least that is the opinion of Paramount director George Marshall. He has had a scrap in almost every one of the 380 films that he has made since he began directing back in 1912. What's more, most of his screen fights have looked as convincing as a Madison Square Garden brawl, but no one has ever been seriously injured. Marshall knows all the stratagems that go into making a harmless punch look like the real thing.

The cast went unhurt, but director George Marshall got black and blue plotting falls.

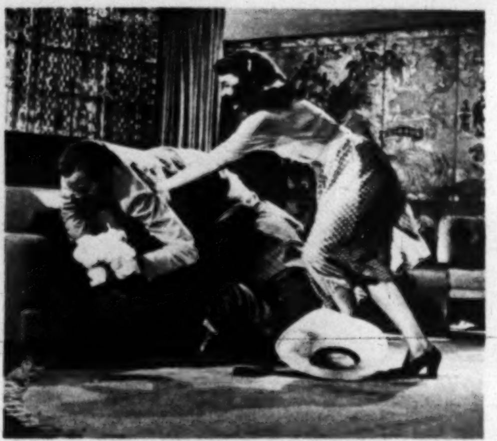
The veteran director's cardinal rule is rehearsal. He insists that every move be carefully mapped out before the cameras turn. The vigorous battle in "Hazard," with Paulette Goddard, Macdonald Carey, Frank Faylen and Fred Clark runs only 40 seconds on the screen, but it took more than two days to shoot. First, Marshall had doubles run through the scene until every punch and tumble had been perfected. Then, he called in his players. One by one, Marshall took the part of each, going through their paces until they understood what he wanted them to do.

Marshall, who claims that he can always stage a wow of a battle provided the actors have a sense of rhythm, is jubilant about the fight in "Hazard." One of the most spectacular rough-and-tumbles ever screened, it winds up the comedy with a thrill.

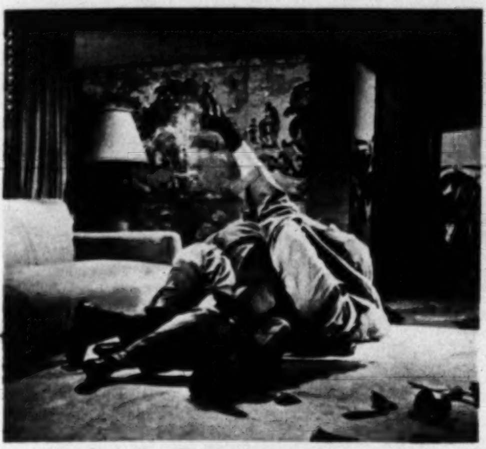
Screen fights have changed since the days of silent movies. Then, there were great riots with every extra on the set milling in front of the cameras. Today's scraps are intimate affairs—shot close-up—more intense and dramatic but infinitely tougher to produce.



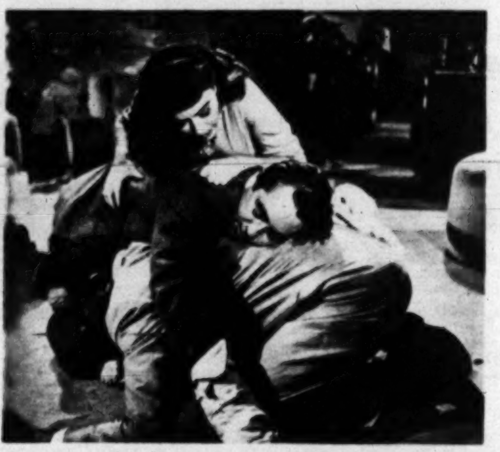
Paulette rushes to help her friend Macdonald Carey battle with villains Fred Clark and Frank Faylen.



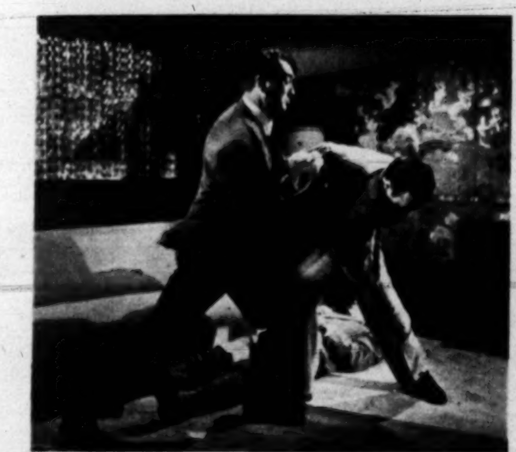
There's nothing timid about Paulette. Hat off, she grabs hold of Clark, tries to push him off the divan.



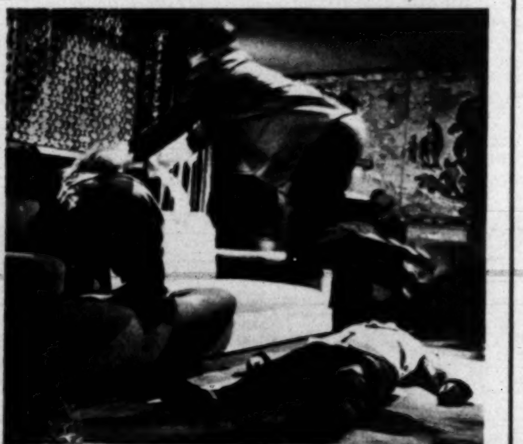
Everybody rolls off divan at same time. Paulette, lost in the scuffle, howls encouragement to Carey.



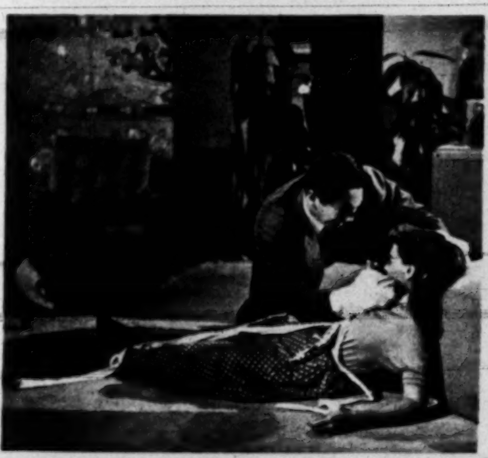
At one point, Paulette drops vase on top of the fighters, discovers it is Carey she has knocked out.



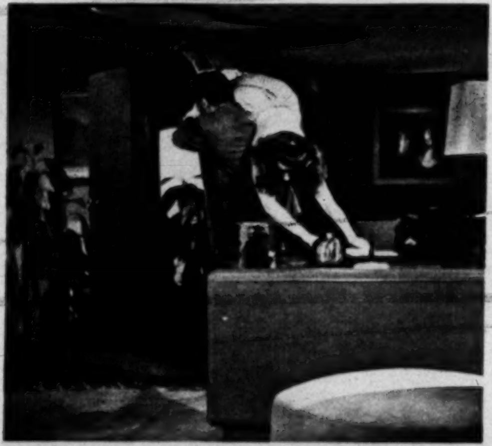
While Faylen is stretched out, Carey gets in fast right to Clark's jaw. Two cameras recorded scrap.



Carey leaps through the air after badman Clark, gets him. Marshall praised Carey's sense of timing.



The fight is over but it's been too much for Paulette. Unconscious, she is oblivious of Carey's pleas.



Paulette recovers in time to snatch her purse off the desk top as Carey carries her away. THE END.

HERE'S YOUR OTHER PIE AN' A BASKET T'CARRY BACK T'WORK.
HOW WE COMIN', MR. SNICKERSQUE?
IT'S A MORE DIFFICULT JOB THAN I EXPECTED. I'LL HAVE T'LOOK AT IT FROM UP ABOVE SOMEHOW.
LATER
WE GOT'CHOOR CABLE-CAR ALL SET, READY?
YUP.
THIS IS FINE. I CAN FIGURE IT OUT FROM UP HERE.
HE'S WAVIN' T'COME DOWN.
START THE ENGINE, VIRGIL.
MOVE THAT ONE OVER THERE T'THERE ... UH ... THEN ... SHUCKS, I FERGOT... I KNOW WHEN I'M UP ON TOP... BUT I LOSE PERSPECTIVE DOWN HERE.
WE'LL HAFTA RIG UP A TELEEPHONE SO HE KIN GIVE D'RECTIONS.
THAT WON'T BE NO GOOD. WE GOTTA KEEP MOVIN'. SAY, I GOTTA IDEE!
SEVERAL HOURS LATER
THE PLANE ARRIVED FROM CLEVELAND WITH YOUR PACKAGE. IT'S IN THE SHACK.
OH, THAT'S JIST FINE. I'LL SEND MR. SNICKERSQUE HIS RIGHT AWAY.
MOVE THAT THERE ONE NEXT TO THE ONE OVER ON THE EXTREME RIGHT.
I GOTCHA.. UGH ... THIS'N'S KINDA HEAVY... MUST WEIGH TEN TON... BETTER USE THE CRANE.
CALLING BELOW ... HULLO, HUMPHREY... OVER ON YOUR LEFT... THAT'S IT... KNOBBY'S CIGAR ... SEND IT UP AND I'LL TELL 'EM WHERE TO PUT THE CEMENT ON THE HILL.

AIR POWER US A F IS PEACE POWER
GOOD NIGHT, VAN GOBLIN. TRUST YOUR DAUGHTER HAS RECOVERED BY MORNING... GOOD NIGHT, CHARLES.
GOOD NIGHT, SIR.
DOGGONE IT! WONDER WHAT'S HAPPENED TO TERRY? HE WANDERED OFF DOWN THIS WAY HOURS AGO...
WHAT TH— ? FOR THE LUVVA PETE!
GOOD NIGHT, MADEMOISELLE CHARTREUSE.
GOOD NIGHT, M'SIEU LEE.
I BOW IN HUMBLE ADMIRATION! I'M SPEECHLESS! THIS LEE CHARACTER EVEN FINDS PURTY GERTIES IN THIS SPOOK HOTEL! WHO WAS THAT?
OH! HI, CHAZZ...
THAT WAS THE NATIVE DANCER WHO PUSHED MOTLEY INTO THE POOL.
WHA...? PUSHED!...BUT THEY BOTH SAID IT WAS AN ACCIDENT...
MOTLEY TRIED TO GET ME TO HELP HER LIFT OLD MAN BRONZ'S ORIGINAL OF HER STATUETTE. CHARTREUSE OVERHEARD AND LAUNCHED HER... MOTLEY'S STORY OF AN ACCIDENT WAS JUST A DESPERATE ATTEMPT TO BRAZEN IT OUT...
CHARTREUSE COVERED UP FOR HER BECAUSE BRONZ WOULD HAVE KILLED US ALL IF HE'D LEARNED THE TRUTH — AND SHE LIKES HAVING, AHEM, ELIGIBLE MALES AROUND.
WHEW! THERE I WAS WITH MY NECK IN JEOPARDY, AND NOT EVEN KNOWING ABOUT IT. BLESSINGS ON YOUR BOYISH CHARMS, TERENCE.
YEAH! UNLESS CHARTREUSE GETS A FEMININE INTUITION THAT MY BOYISH CHARMS ARE APPEALING TOO MUCH TO MOTLEY. IN WHICH CASE — QUOTE 'ALL BETTINGS ARE OFF,' UNQUOTE!
MEANWHILE
BUT, MOTLEY, I DON'T UNDERSTAND. WHY DIDN'T THIS DANCING GIRL TELL BRONZ THE TRUTH?
I DON'T KNOW, FATHER, BUT IT GIVES US ONE LAST CHANCE— IF WE ACT BEFORE SHE CHANGES HER MIND... WAIT HERE!

WELL, KING, WE'VE FOLLOWED THESE TRACKS UP FROM THE DIVISION AND SEEN NO SIGN OF THE MISSING CARS!
BUT THREE LOADED FREIGHT CARS AND A CABOOSE CAN'T JUST DISAPPEAR!
AT THE RAILROAD'S REQUEST, KING FLIES TO INVESTIGATE THE MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF FOUR CARS FROM THE UNDAMAGED END OF THE WRECKED FREIGHT.
THIS IS A SINGLE-TRACK MAIN LINE WITH NO CROSSINGS OR TURN-OFFS! WE'LL HEAD BACK, KID. THIS IS GOING TO REQUIRE SOME GROUNDWORK!
OH-OH! LOOK DOWN THERE! I SEE A STRANGE TRACK AND A HALF-HIDDEN TUNNEL...
THAT'S THE OLD TIMBRO MINE, KID... IT'S WAY ABOVE THE RAILROAD... AND THOSE TRACKS ARE NARROW GAUGE!
SEE, BOSS, THERE GOES THE MOUNTIE PLANE... THEY DON'T SUSPECT THIS PLACE.....
YOU'RE RIGHT, FUSEE!... AND THEY WON'T EXPECT US TO STRIKE AGAIN TONIGHT... LISTEN TO WHAT I OVERHEARD IN THE OFFICE....
THE 12:36 IS COMING THROUGH WITH FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS IN THE EXPRESS CAR... WE'LL PULL A RAIL AND DUMP HER INTO THE CANYON...
BUT THAT'S A PASSENGER TRAIN.....!
Oooo! MY SWEETHEART IS GOIN' T' BE ON THAT TRAIN!
5
HERE, DAVE, RUSH THIS WIRE THROUGH FOR ME, PLEASE....
TELEGRAPH OFFICE
SURE, HANK!
LATER, AT THE DIVISION...
GEE, ARE THEY GOING TO LET US RIDE UP THERE ON A MOTOR HAND-CAR....?
SHH!-LISTEN TO THAT TELEGRAPH KEY!... "DEAR LIZ... DON'T RIDE THE TWELVE THIRTY-SIX TONIGHT. TAKE SOME OTHER TRAIN... WILL EXPLAIN... HANK."

LET'S GO SAILING on the SAND

LOVELY PEG NEELEY SHOWS YOU HOW IT'S DONE ON DAYTONA BEACH, FLORIDA

READY, JACK? LET'S HOP ABOARD AND SHOVE OFF

GOOD BREEZE TODAY. WE'LL RACE THAT OTHER BOAT!

THESE SAND SAILERS HANDLE LIKE A SMALL SAILBOAT—BUT THEY'RE MUCH FASTER! WITH A GOOD BREEZE—50 OR 60 M.P.H. IS EASY! BUT IT TAKES *EXPERIENCE TO HANDLE THEM AT THAT SPEED!

"EXPERIENCE IS THE BEST TEACHER—IN SAILING ON THE SAND—AND IN CHOOSING A CIGARETTE, TOO. WITH MILLIONS OF SMOKERS WHO HAVE TRIED AND COMPARED—CAMELS ARE THE "CHOICE OF EXPERIENCE"!

HEY—THE WIND'S CHANGING... OOH!

JUST SHOWS—YOU GET WET SAILING—EVEN ON THE SAND!

WHEN YOU GET IN TROUBLE IN A SAND SAILER—YOU CAN ALWAYS PUT ON THE BRAKES... AND IF YOU HAVE TO, GET OUT AND PUSH!

KEEP HER CLOSE-HAULED—WE'RE PASSING THEM!

SHE'S REALLY JIVING*—HOLD TIGHT!

*JIVING—SAILING CLOSE-HAULED TO THE WIND. IT TAKES PERFECT BALANCE TO KEEP THE "BOAT" ON TWO WHEELS AT TOP SPEED.

IT'S EASY TO SEE YOU'VE HAD PLENTY OF EXPERIENCE AT SAND SAILING!

HAVE A CAMEL, PEG?

THANKS! CAMEL IS MY BRAND—AND THAT'S THE RESULT OF EXPERIENCE TOO!

SAND SAILOR PEG NEELEY SAYS:

"I LEARNED FROM EXPERIENCE, BY COMPARING DIFFERENT BRANDS, THAT CAMELS SUIT ME BEST! THEY'RE SO MILD AND COOL SMOKING!"

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Registered U.S. Patent Office
Synopsis: EVEN THE NAKED SWORDS OF HIS GUARDS AND THE UNCERTAINTY OF WITNESSING THE NEXT DAY'S SUNRISE CANNOT DAMPEN KING ROARY DHU'S GOOD HUMOR. AND IT IS PLEASING TO SEE THAT ALETA, DRESSED IN HER TATTERED BEST, IS USING HER KNIFE ON HER FOOD AND NOT ON HIS HIDE.
AT DAWN PRINCE VALIANT PERMITS THE HIBERNIANS TO REMOVE THEIR DEAD AND WOUNDED FROM LAST NIGHT'S BATTLEGROUND. HE ALSO WANTS THEM TO NOTICE HOW COSTLY THE SHINDY HAS BEEN!
ON THE INCOMING TIDE THE SHIP IS FLOATED AND QUICKLY LOADED.
AS THEY MOVE AWAY FROM THE SHORE, THE FATE OF KING ROARY DHU IS PONDERED. "YOU ASKED ME TO GO FOR A SWIM LAST NIGHT," MUSES ROARY. "I'D LIKE TO ACCEPT THAT INVITATION NOW."
ALTHOUGH THE CREW GRUMBLES THAT SUCH A THROAT GO UNCUT, THEY TOSS THE KING INTO THE SEA.
ALETA, WHO HAS GROWN FOND OF THE CHEERFUL, PINK RASCAL, RUSHES TO THE RAIL. "OH! SIR, CAN YOU SWIM?" SHE CRIES. "'TIS A FINE TIME FOR YOU TO BE THINKING OF IT, MY DEAR!" SPUTTERS ROARY, WITH UNCONQUERABLE GOOD NATURE AS HE SWIMS FOR THE SHORE
THEN ARE THE COMRADES WHO FELL IN BATTLE RETURNED TO THEIR MOTHER, THE SEA. FOR THE FIGHTING HAS BEEN GRIM AND VICTORY COSTLY. THEREAFTER THE MEN JOKE AND LAUGH LOUDER THAN USUAL, FOR THEY ARE TRYING HARD NOT TO THINK OVERMUCH OF THE FRIENDS WHO SHARED PERIL AND HARDSHIP, AND SO WEEP LIKE WOMEN.
COPR. 1948, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc., WORLD RIGHTS RESERVED.
HAL FOSTER
AND ALETA IS VERY TENDER TO HER HUSBAND, FOR SHE HAD SEEN THE AGONY IN HIS EYES WHEN SHE WAS IN DANGER AND KNOWS SHE WILL HOLD HIS LOVE FOREVER.
